START SPRING SHOW SEASON WITH A WHOOP!

Ladies and Gentlemen

OF THE PICTURE-GOING PUBLIC

Here come the big shows! . . . The Palace Theatre's SPRING ENTERTAINMENT SEASON starts in real earnest this week!

Out of consideration for hundreds of my patrons who otherwise would have been forced to miss them, I HAVE DELAYED PRESENTATION OF MANY OF THE FINEST CURRENT SCREEN ATTRACTIONS UNTIL THE WEEKS FOLLOWING LENT.

That is one reason why April and May will be Greater Movie months at the Palace.

Another reason is that Better Times are bringing Better Pictures! Because their business has noticeably improved, the Hollywood studios which produce my pictures can now afford better stories, more expensive casts, and more elaborate productions than for several years past.

So I don't think I am promising too much when I assure you that you will find exceptional entertainment in every one of the pictures listed below, which will be my principal attractions for the next ten weeks—

☐ JOE E. BROWN in A VERY HONORABLE GUY, with Alice White. Funnier than ever, but entirely different.

☐ MERRY WIVES OF RENO. More hilarious than "Convention City"; with practically the same cast of Warner Bros. comedians.

However, if I am wrong in my opinion of these pictures I want to know about it. So I have placed a box opposite each title and I will appreciate it if you will save this list and after you have seen each picture rate it A, B, C, or D for "Excellent," "Good," "Fair," and "Poor," in the space provided.

Then after you have seen them all, send the marked list to me. It will help me immensely in selecting future pictures to suit your tastes . . . I thank you.

Sincerely,

Joe Showman

MRS. SHORT'S SHORTS

"AND ship me a couple o' fillers."

That has been all too often the manner in which the exhibitor booked his short product. The result of this careless practise, together with the common high pressure forcing of shorts by distributors, has resulted in a vast deal of very bad screen programming to the general detriment of the screen and the theatre.

Often enough this publication has pointed out that the customer in the seat out front does not make trade discriminations and he is as much annoyed with a bad short as he is with a bad feature, as long as it lasts. When he is not amused the show is a failure and it can fail inside of a ten minute short.

The short product available today ranges in quality from standards far above the average of feature production, in a few rare products, to levels of dumb incompetency miles below the worst dramas. The average of short quality is painfully low.

And all this makes of special interest the announcement from Dallas that Interstate Theatres, operating a hundred houses in the Southwest, have established a booking and programming office for the express purpose of adequately relating short product to the features in their presentations. Interstate is a part of the far flung Hoblitzelle organization. Mr. R. J. O'Donnell, general manager, makes the observation that as every showman knows, or should know, "the motion picture program should be made up balances and contrasts."

Incidentally this important new job in the Interstate organization falls to a young woman, Mrs. Paul Short, who has been press representative of the Majestic theatre, a big downtown house in Dallas. She will see all the shorts.

OPTICAL ADVENTURE

WHEN Cristoforo Colombo set out from Palos in Spain to sail the ocean blue to see where the beginning of West was, he gave the world centuries of romantic and magnificent tradition. Glory colored, too, the pennants of Magellan, Balboa, Captain Cook, Juan de Fuca, Frobisher, David Thompson — all that time-glamoured array of adventurous and merry explorers of the long ago. The world thrills to their memories even still. They were out to find the rest of the world that is ours. Time paints in a gorgeous patina.

But only the other day up in the factory town of Corning, New York, a crew of glass founders poured off a twenty-ton heat of glass for the making of the world's first two-hundred-inch telescopic mirror. And so science, not so glamoured by time and ignorance, signals anchors a-weigh on a greater adventure, an optical cosmic voyaging into space a million light years for every mile that Columbus sailed — ten times as far as any telescope has reached before. Maybe another four hundred years of earth-time away the story of this big day at the Corning glass factory will be glamoured tradition, too.

Meanwhile let us remember that the telescope and the camera are both cousins and partners, that the same miracle of emulsions which records for us the luring ladies of Hollywood, the trivialities of the gag-men and the earthy appeal of Broadway drama, also set down for us the records of the solar universe and the messages of infinities of glimmering universes beyond.

The motion picture camera and the great glass of Corning may reach to the far places together in the years to come.

VIVID SIMPLICITY

COLUMBIA'S "No Greater Glory," reviewed in a recent issue by our appreciative Mr. Gus McCarthy, is a definite evidence of the ability of the screen to convey high emotion, to tell stories of punch and power, without the commonplace resort to the technique of the grandiose. All too rarely do the makers of the motion picture dare such simplicity and poignant realism. Probably the pressures of our industry are all too much toward the burdening of screen drama with "selling point," material that makes posters and catchlines but does not make stories.

"No Greater Glory," with a cast of small boys and a story of a town lot conflict, is a microcosmic indictment of war, and more within the ken of the commonalty than "Civilization," "The Battle Cry of Peace" or "Intolerance." With the European pots boiling, and some sections of America simmering, the picture has a real timeliness.

Presumably because it is taken from a story by Ferenc Molnar the picture is laid in Budapest, but it might be anywhere in the world, including any American community.

To the screen it is more important as one more evidence that it does not take a million dollars to say something out loud. This picture is likely to prove as good as the showman makes it.

AND WHAT OF IT?

THE venerable Mr. Henry James Forman, pamphleteer for the Reverend Mr. William Harrison Short's Motion Picture Research Council, speaking in Westfield, New Jersey, remarked, "It is unfortunately true that 70 to 80 per cent of the films are based on stories of love, sex, or crime." May we ask, or need we, of Mr. Forman what most of the works of art, as reflections or derivatives of life, are based upon? If he and the Council are engaged in the suppression of love and sex they have taken on a job—and a thankless one.

TO "OLDTIMERS"

The business is going back to "oldtimers" and away from "newcomers," last week in New York declared Louis Nizer, executive secretary of the New York Film Board of Trade, estimating 1,000,000 contracts are signed each year by distributors, the annual number of film shipments from exchanges 10,000,000. He stressed the importance of the unaffiliated exhibitor throughout the country. . . .

FILMED HITLERISMS

Expected to be ready in a week, Samuel Cummins is rushing work on "Hitler's Reign of Terror," a feature said to use the Cornelius Vanderbilt film. Understood in Mr. Cummins' possession is footage recently shot in Germany on narrow gauge, said to show alleged Hitlerian atrocities.

UNFAIR PRACTICE

Engaged in a legal set-to, United Artists is defending its action in taking "The House of Rothschild" from the Wometco theatres, of Miami, Fla., to roadshow after having confirmed playdates. Wometco obtained an injunction. Supreme Court Justice Thompson said it appeared to be unfair trade practice by United Artists.

OREGON ALLIED

At a meeting last week the following were elected officers of Oregon Allied in Portland: Guy Mathews, president; George Applebs, vice-president; William Cutts, secretary; Steve Parker, Guy Garrison, M. Mattacheck, Oscar Phelps, directors. . . .

LONDON THEATRE

Sometime next month the London Pavilion, one of the most famous of the city's music halls, will be demolished to make way for a new large theatre, to be erected by United Artists. . . .

FILM "REPORTS"

Watched with interest by Chicago film interests is the innovation begun by the Hearst "Evening American," under which straight "reports" rather than critical reviews on films are published. Father of the idea is William Hollander, Balaban & Katz advertising director. . . .

ROSENBLATT AT SMPE

Members of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, meeting in annual spring session at Atlantic City, April 23 to 26, will hear as a featured speaker Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA division administrator handling amusements. Presiding will be SMPE president Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith.

SOUTHERN TAX

Declared by its legislative sponsors potentially to offer needed relief to theatres, a bill to relieve theatres of the present admission tax, and substituting a tax on seating capacity, has passed a third reading in the South Carolina legislature. The range: $1 a seat in towns of 1,500, to $2 a seat in towns of 30,000 or more. . . .

LIGHTNING AS STAR

Lightning plays the starring role in the two-reeler recently completed by General Electric Company, "A Modern Zeus," in which the atmospheric electrical discharge has been caught by the camera both in its natural cloud element and on an artificial stage. Made to illustrate how lighting has been reproduced, the subject is intended for visual instruction. . . .

WEDDING PRESENT

A delightful little Bel-Air (exclusive Los Angeles suburb) bungalow, with but 30 rooms, now equipped with projection room and theatre, and acres of lawn and a tennis court, was the modest little wedding present of Harry Warner, Warner company president, to daughter Doris and son-in-law Mervyn Le Roy, Warner director. . . .

COOPERATING MAYOR

New York's Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia last week addressing Independent Theatre Owners Association members at the officers' installation dinner, declared his desire to cooperate to eliminate hardships, alleged graft of fire inspectors. He wanted his office always open to theatre owners, he said, and would gladly mediate in the settlement of disputes. . . .

TAXES DEFEATED

Recently threatened with new license fees by the Los Angeles city council, which would affect all branches of the industry locally, film interests last week were vastly relieved when the proposed taxation was defeated at a license committee hearing. Concentrated opposition won the verdict.

LOWER DEFICITS

The National City Bank of New York last week disclosed that book values of leading film stocks decreased about $17,000,000 in 1933 as compared with 1932, while deficits in net earnings decreased $1,400,000. Companies covered by the report had net worth of $217,057,000, on January 1, 1932, and of $200,154,000 one year later. . . .

"NANA" BANNED

United Artists is seeking legal aid in Spokane, Wash., to bring about a reversal of the decision of Commissioner of Public Safety A. B. Colburn, banning Samuel Goldwyn's "Nana" with Anna Sten. Local newspapers supported United Artists. Cited was the successful engagement of the film at the Music Box in Seattle. . . .

ELECTRICAL GENIUS

Major William Joseph Hammer, once described by his chief, Thomas A. Edison, as "my most valuable assistant," and a noted electrical engineer and inventor, died last week of pneumonia in New York, aged 76. In 1879 Major Hammer became associated with Mr. Edison, later in England putting on display the first electric light sign, his own invention, as was the first automatic flashing and spelling electric sign. . . .

UNIQUE FLOAT

Unique is the exploitation float devised for the RKO Radio release, "Wild Cargo," produced in the Malayan jungle by Frank Buck. Planned to visit the nation's chief cities, the gigantic ship on wheels carries full cargo of 19 manufactured animals, the work of Messmore & Damon, artful creators of mechanical figures. . . .

AMPLE FEATURE SUPPLY ASSURED FOR NEXT YEAR

Nine Companies Planning 421 Features for 1934-35, Compared with 437 This Season; Short Product Is Uncertain

By FRED AYER

Motion picture exhibitors will find available for the 1934-35 season an abundance of product from the industry's nine largest companies, a supply comparable with that of the current 1933-34 season. Tentatively 421 features have been set by these companies for the new season, compared with 437 features expected to be delivered before the expiration of the 1933-34 season. These figures are the result of a preliminary survey of the situation as it obtains at present with these nine producers, and changes are to be expected.

Short subject production in 1934-35 may be considerably curtailed. However, while most large companies are fairly certain as to the total feature output in the new season, only one or two at this time could give even an inkling of their plans for short subject production next year. Among reasons are these: First, the double feature situation, and, second, the Motion Picture Code clause which prohibits a distributor from forcing an exhibitor to overbuy on short subjects.

Despite widespread agitation within and without the industry against double featuring, the practice is as general as it ever was, and possibly more widespread. The fact that under the Code, double bills are recognized in any locality where 75 per cent of the exhibitors are not opposed to the policy, presents the distributors with a problem in short product distribution. When a theatre plays two features on one bill an average of possibly two short subject sales is lost to the distributor, and, as he formerly has found himself with an oversupply of shorts on his hands at the end of the season, the next move would be to cut down on their production. On the other hand, the exhibitor might have been burdened with an excess supply of shorts as long as the renting of them was forced upon him as a condition to the buying of features.

For elimination of that practice the Code states specifically that no distributor shall require an exhibitor to overload with short subjects as a condition of a feature sale. Thus, both distributor and exhibitor will obtain relief from overloading.

Slightly Fewer Features

The survey shows a very slight decline in the tentatively set output for 1934-35 as compared with the announced programs for the current season. However, changes are to be expected when the companies have made their final decisions in connection with the annual sales conventions, most of which probably will take place before the middle of July. For instance, Columbia's tentative figure of 52 features for next season may be a maximum, with 48 set, as has happened during the current season when the company announced 49 but will deliver 52. The Fox figure always approximates 52 or 54; MGM's program usually calls for between 45 and 50; Monogram at present contemplates only 20 features as against 28 currently, but the final decision, which will be made next week at the annual convention in Atlantic City may call for 26, it was reported. Paramount is almost certain to have a 60-feature minimum for 1934-35, with 65 possible; RKO Radio definitely will release 52 next season. United Artists' program is flexible, as demonstrated this season when Reliance promised four features and probably will deliver but one or two. In addition to the domestic independent producers releasing through United Artists, London Film Productions' 1934-35 program cannot be stated at this time. However, it is considered more than likely that the company will distribute at least 30 in 1934-35. Universal's tentative 1934-35 figure approximates its current output, and Warner and First National will maintain their usual schedule of 60 features.

Trem Carr, vice-president in charge of all Monogram production, said Monday on leaving Hollywood for Atlantic City, that he would ask a production budget of $2,500,000 for next season's product. This would place the company's average negative cost, on the basis of 20 pictures for the year, at $125,000—an increase of $25,000 average currently.

Short Subject Output Uncertain

As for the short subject output, practically all companies are debating the problem. Paramount, for example, will produce a great many of its short features on the West Coast in 1934-35, with Lou Diamond in charge, but it was said this week there is a distinct possibility there will be fewer than the current 125. This season Educational announced 168 short subjects for release through Fox. No tentative program for 1934-35 has as yet been made known, but it is reported the number may be pared.

All these short subjects are exclusive of newsreels, of which Fox, MGM, Paramount, RKO and Universal each release 104 issues in the year.

Eight feature pictures probably will be produced for Fox by Jesse L. Lasky for 1934-35 release, the first being "Springtime for Henry," from the New York and London stage play. His next will be "Grand Canary," with Warner Baxter. Sol Wurtzel may produce 32 of the total Fox output for next season, it was indicated, about 20 of them for the general market, a minimum of 12 for Spanish distribution. Currently, Mr. Wurtzel's program calls for 21 features for the domestic market and six in Spanish.

50 From MGM, 65 Paramounts

MGM's 1934-35 program calls for 50 features and 100 shorts in addition to the Hearst Metrotone Newsreel issues. On the short program will be introduced a new color cartoon to meet the reduction in the FitzPatrick travel subjects from 12 to eight.

Tentatively, Paramount sets 65 features for the new season. Emanuel Cohen, vice-president in charge of production, is now in New York conferring with home office executives on the 1934-35 program. Thus far the only definite indications as to what the exhibitor may expect from the company are the announcements of star names to be utilized. Among these are Richard Arlen, Mary Boland, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Claudette Colbert, Bing Crosby, Dorothy Dell, W. C. Fields, Marlene Dietrich, Cary Grant, Miriam Hopkins, Carole Lombard, Herbert Marshall, Adolphe Menjou, Jack Oakie, George Raft, Charles Ruggles, Sylvia Sidney and Mae West. These 19

"LITTLE MAN" SILENT ON SPECIFIC CODE COMPLAINTS AT NRA HEARING

But Myers, for Allied, Details "Anti-Monopolistic" Campaign Before NRA Review Board; No Rewriting Seen

by FRANCIS L. BURT
Washington Correspondent

The National Recovery Administration staged a field day at Washington last Monday, supposedly to hear at first hand the complaints of the industry's socalled "little man" against monopolistic practices and oppression under the code. Instead, there were heard many other things, from many other interests, including a squabble among members of the NRA official family, and a somewhat lengthy dissertation by a few hand-picked NRA witnesses. Abram Myers, for Allied, retold the well-known details of the "anti-monopolistic" campaign which has been conducted variously over a period by his organization. The hearing was recessed until Monday, when members of the film Code Authority and leading sales managers were ordered to be on hand to refute certain unnamed "charges."

Puzzlement over the purpose of Monday's public hearing at a time when the motion picture code has hardly had a chance to function in the field, plus unofficial and unconfirmed stories about the reputedly vast number of complaints that had already been filed, brought reports last weekend that parts or all of the industry's code would be rewritten as a result of the Monday hearing. Neither specific complaints nor any indication of a rewritten code developed.

Board Headed by Darrow

The hearing was held before the NRA's Board of Review, created by the President and General Hugh S. Johnson, to hear code complaints of the "little man" of all industries. Chairman of the Review Board is Clarence S. Darrow, seventy-seven year old Ohio-born Chicago lawyer, militant defender of labor, champion of the "little man" against monopolies, author of "An Eye for An Eye."

The NRA Board opened the investigation, which supposedly had been long sought by independent interests, with a list of hand-picked NRA witnesses, led by Lowell Mason, Board counsel, who went back some ten years in the history of the industry, obviously intent upon showing that the code had not corrected any of the abuses of which independent exhibitors have variously complained.

No Complainants Present

Although it had been said a large number of complaints against the code had been received, there were no complainants present at the hearing. Those who testified had been asked by Mr. Mason to appear and had played no part in paving the way for the investigation.

A clash with Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt at the outset of the hearing made it evident that the Board is determined to play the part of an independent and impartial body and will ask the Recovery Administration for neither information nor advice.

Mr. Mason's attitude became plain when, calling Mr. Rosenblatt as his first witness, he objected to the Division Administrator's request that he be permitted to make a statement. All he wanted of Mr. Rosenblatt, he indicated, was the answers to questions which he would propound.

Refusing to testify under such circumstances, Mr. Rosenblatt pointed out that he had not been subpoenaed—in fact, the Review Board has no such power—and that he had not been advised of the line of questioning to which he was to be subjected so that he could bring with him documents and information in the files of the Recovery Administration.

Mr. Rosenblatt told the Board that he would not testify until he had conferred with Administrator Johnson, his boss.

While the Board of Review was preparing to initiate a number of investigations into the operations of various codes, General Johnson was understood to be preparing to go to President Roosevelt, upon the President's return from his Florida cruise, with a demand for a showdown as to how far the Board could go in upsetting the NRA code agreements.

By bringing into the record the names of the members of the film Code Authority, Mr. Mason paved the way for telegrams dispatched to New York Monday night, by Mr. Darrow, asking their appearance before the Board on Thursday, despite the fact that the Code Authority had scheduled a regular meeting that day.

Later the Code Authority members and the sales managers were excused from attending a Thursday hearing but only on condition they meet Monday.

He has also asked the appearance of the sales managers of the large producing companies, with a view to questioning them regarding contracts, and contractual and sales relations with exhibitors.

No Definite Charges Made

If the members of the Code Authority and the sales managers refuse to go to Washington, Mr. Mason declared following the hearing, the Board's report to the President will dwell upon that fact. They are to attend to refute "charges" against them, although Mr. Mason finally admitted no definite charges had been preferred.

Through Mr. Darrow's request the Code Authority has been faced with an unprecedented situation, in that the Review Board, a government agency, had extended the request to the film industry as a part of its official duty, which concerns probing of Code Authorities in all industries.

Most of the testimony at Monday's hearing skirted around the subjects under investigation. There were no definite charges that the code had resulted in monopolistic practices.

Preparing to build up his case in approved legal style, Mr. Mason called as his first witness Russell Hardy, special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, employed since 1914 in the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, who, under questioning, revealed that in the past five years, three cases have been brought against the film industry, two of which resulted in consent decrees and the third not yet disposed of.

It was Mr. Hardy's assigned task to explain a memorandum about trade practices sent to the Recovery Administration to which, he said, so far as he knew, no answer had ever been made. Testifving under the careful questioning of the Board's counsel, Mr. Hardy revealed that approximately twice as many complaints were received by the Department of Justice against the film industry as against any other.

Taking up the memorandum on the code. Mr. Hardy explained that "we outlined in that report the items about which the Department had received complaints."

"The principal items of complaint received by the department," he said were: "(1) refusal on the part of the big producing companies to contract with the complainants for any pictures at all; (2) refusal to contract with the complainants for a sufficient number of pictures; (3) refusal to contract with the complainants for the right to have a first exhibition of a picture; (4) refusal to contract with the complainants for second or subsequent showings of a picture until after the lapse of an unreasonable length of time after exhibition by competitors, and, (5) refusal to contract with the complainants for pictures unless theatre admission prices were raised or maintained at a point fixed by the big producing companies."

Other complaints, received less frequently, he said, were about refusal to sell except in blocks, sales on percentage instead of flat rentals, and overbuying.

Were it not for the protecting clause of the recovery act, Mr. Hardy said, the control of the film Code Authority by the big producers and the permitting of conditions now which were alleged to exist in the bills of complaint filed by the Justice Department in the film cases would constitute monopolistic practices.

Clarence Darrow Heads Board; Lowell Mason, Counsel, Points to Ineffectiveness of Code; Rosenblatt Refuses Testimony

Myers Opens Fire

Four thousand of the 13,000 theatres now in operation are producer owned or controlled, it was declared by Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied States, who followed Mr. Hardy on the stand.

Mr. Mason, in his questioning, carried Mr. Myers back through the negotiation of the film code last year and the subsequent protests filed with the NRA by Allied over the manner of drafting the code. Mr. Myers' answers are already well known in the industry.

"Have you received any complaints from the members of your association (Allied) charging monopolistic practices under the present code?" Mr. Myers was asked.

"Yes, not charging monopolistic practices under the code but complaining that the code is designed to permit monopolies."

The most important property right of a theatre owner, Mr. Myers said under questioning, was adequate supply of fresh product. Public good will was placed second, while the ownership of theatre property came third. He explained that a theatre was valueless unless product was assured.

Renews Rosenblatt Attack

Mr. Myers then outlined, under questioning, various provisions of the code at which criticisms have been aimed, including cancellations, labor clauses, forcing of shorts, play dates and admissions. He dwelt at length on Allied's well known attitude toward Division Administrator Rosenblatt.

Paving the way for future witnesses, Mr. Mason asked what the effect of abolishing block booking would be, Mr. Myers responding that it would be helpful all-around.

Following a brief discussion of the advantages enjoyed by affiliated over independent houses in the booking of pictures, Mr. Mason called E. Thornton Kelly, owner of the Grant Lee theatre, at Palisades, N. J., and William Biggio, owner of the Steubenville, Ohio, Grand theatre. The two exhibitors testified as to restraints upon buying imposed by competitive producer controlled houses.

THE FORGETTING ISLE

About a strange South Sea land where the exhibitor can barely whisper and the public is voiceless

By MARTIN QUIGLEY

The Hollywood production situation continues essentially unchanged.

In face of the recent times and conditions which have so radically altered industrial affairs generally, this assertion may be regarded as another tribute—or rather criticism—to that world-unique institution which is the Hollywood production colony.

It is more than a little startling to observe against the changed and changing affairs of the day that Hollywood continues, serene and aloof, committed jealously to those same old customs, practices and viewpoints which have made it what it is. Accustomed to the physical shock of earthquake, it has come to regard threat of any other kind of shake-up as merely rumor which murmurs impotently beyond the mountains.

AGENTS' SYSTEM GREATEST FACTOR IN EXTRAVAGANCES

An accurate survey of under-lying conditions of any one of the recent years reflects almost precisely the conditions of this year. An analysis of the current situation amounts almost completely to a repetition of what has been found and what has been observed previously. The dominant personnel remains virtually unchanged—and its procedure continues in essence and form just what it has been. The political ring continues to be reminiscent of the Tammany Hall that was. The question persists as to the whys and wherefores of the agents' levy of a tax of a few millions of dollars a year on the industry, and those who are in a position to answer remain either strangely silent or adroitly evasive. Meanwhile the agents' system, which is the greatest single factor in the extravagances of production—screwing up scales of compensation to ridiculous heights through the scheme of social-political manipulation—has become as indigenous to Hollywood as cactus to the desert. Each of the agents who count is a satellite who revolves about in the warming and profitable effulgence of his executive chief. Unless being elected somehow to the charmed circle, any person professing to be an agent in Hollywood is most grievously out of luck. He might with much better chance of success seek to walk into the Senate Chamber in executive session and rest himself in the president's chair.

Hollywood continues to develop and improve its already amazing skill in the technic of making motion pictures. It is very seldom that one of the principal studios issues a really poorly produced subject. It is true that there is no dearth of poor attractions but these subjects are poor attractions not because they are in any sense poorly produced but rather because the great initial mistake of selecting the wrong kind of subject matter has been made, and after this has been entered upon, no conceivable amount of technical skill will save the resultant picture.

BREACH WITH THEATRES ONE GREAT INFLUENCE

A great problem of production—and probably the greatest—is concerned with the selection of the wrong kinds of subject matter or with the wrong treatment of subject matter which might otherwise be acceptable. Unquestionably a great influence in this state of affairs is the breach which has existed for several years between the studios and the theatres.

At one time in the history of the industry exhibitors were depended upon as the main source of information and guidance as to what the public wanted and how it wanted it. But the old order has changed.

The exhibitor is the forgotten man of Hollywood.

The exhibitor is regarded largely as an incidental and rather unimportant cog in a machine which is supposed automatically to bring the product of the studios to the attention of the public.

The exhibitor is not supposed to know what the public wants and he is certainly not expected to have the temerity to tell the producer that what is being made is perhaps not what the public wants. If he comes to Hollywood and does not happen to control most of the theatres in at least several states he is fortunate to receive a visitor's pass to a studio.

If Hollywood were an island located at some remote point far out in the Pacific some of the conditions obtaining there would not be so difficult to understand. There is an attitude of self-sufficiency that challenges belief. The manifest reaction of public opinion in various quarters to much of the current product is not only not realized in Hollywood but vigorously denied. The brilliant sunlight of California, apparently, blinds Hollywood to everything save only that which it wishes to see. And anything which it does not see—or think of first—is not supposed to exist.

In quite a matter of fact way Hollywood assumes and insists that its business is the production of adult entertainment and adult entertainment only. It is true that an occasional bid for juvenile entertainment is made but this happens infrequently and only then in a condescending manner. It would seem that there should exist in Hollywood some exact knowledge of the force which youth represents in motion picture theatre patronage—not only as to its own numerical strength but also as to the influence which it exerts upon adult attendance.

It should be known and realized in Hollywood that unless the patronage of youth is kept and unless parents continue to favor the motion picture theatre as a place of amusement for youth the industry in its present scope and importance cannot exist.

It seems difficult for Hollywood to understand the essential nature of the motion picture business: That it is a commercial enterprise seeking to provide for virtually the whole public, at a low cost per person, a form of theatrical entertainment. That the people of Hollywood should seek to appear important in the eyes of Hollywood is readily understandable. This aspiration as such is simply a manifestation of community consciousness and in such a solidly knit community as Hollywood it is altogether natural that its people should incline toward catering to each other's tastes, the objective being to impress one's neighbor. It may well be that the automobile manufacturers in Detroit have in their laboratories certain radical departures in the form of motor cars but these, if there are any, are not the items of automotive merchandise which they put on the floors of the showrooms.

Hollywood product, however, is very largely given a character which by no stretch of the imagination could be regarded as having been arrived at after consulting the customers' wishes.

The results of this, of course, is that while modern businesses generally leave no stone unturned in their effort to give the market what it wants, we find important groups of motion picture customers ready to go to law in order to escape being given what they most emphatically insist they do not want. But Hollywood likes that sort of stuff. It is in the air. It is what impresses the other fellow—in Hollywood. Hence it is in the pictures, largely because it is what Hollywood wants. It insures the provincial compliment.

WRITERS' EFFORTS SQUEEZED THROUGH A BOTTLE-NECK

The business of writing for talking motion pictures is practically an untried experiment. It is true that there is no denial of the supposed importance of the writer in motion picture production. It is also true that there has been imported to Hollywood a small army of the highest paid literary workers in the history of the world. But their efforts, except in rare instances, are not permitted to reach the screen in any recognizable form. The efforts must squeeze as best they can through the bottle-neck of the executive high command.

Writers, for the first time since men and women have been engaged in the art of letters, are being schooled to function in platoons.

A story conference in many instances is an intense debate, apparently genuine, but in reality is expected only to conclude with an agreement with what the executive has previously decided. There is only one explanation of why so many good writers in Hollywood are becoming hacks. The scale of compensation is so high that they have persuaded themselves that they are no longer writers but businessmen.

Despite the regrettable lack of the many readjustments so long awaited in Hollywood and probably by virtue of the years of experience in motion picture production, together with that tremendous concentration of talent which has been effected there, the product situation is not critical—at least no more so than it has been for a long time. One exception to this which may be emphatically registered during the months ahead is objectionable treatment and material which continue to color the product.

In the output for the latter part of this season and the early months of the coming season there are a considerable number of produced or planned attractions which promise to rank well up with the best the screen has yet afforded.

Courts Deciding Three Film Suits

In New York, Los Angeles and Albany within the past week legal action has been taken involving motion pictures, and motion picture personalities.

At Albany, the appellate division of the state supreme court refused to dismiss the $150,000 action brought by Mrs. Minerva Brown of Norwich, N. Y., against Paramount, producer of "An American Tragedy." Mrs. Brown contends she is the mother of the girl whose tragedy is depicted in the adaptation of the Theodore Dreiser novel. Paramount had appealed from a supreme court order denying a motion for appeal. The film accused her, Mrs. Brown claimed, of neglecting her daughter educationally and morally, and reflected on her character and reputation.

In Los Angeles Elissa Landi brought suit against the agents who recently sued her, asking revision of her contract, declaring she had been led to believe she could be released from it at any time, and had signed it with that understanding. The agents, Al Schulberg-Kenneth Feldman, Inc., sought $11,000 allegedly due them. Also on the Coast Ginger Rogers has filed suit for $100,000 damages against Madame Sylvia, Hollywood beauty advisor, alleging she was slandered in a radio talk by the beautician. Madame Sylvia's real name, Sylvia Ulbeck, was used in the suit. The Madame, Miss Rogers contends, represented her radio talk to be an interview with Miss Rogers, who said she was not present, had not given her consent to such proceedings, and was injured in her profession.

On motion of defense, the $1,125,000 damage suit brought under the anti-trust laws by the Richmond-Mayer Music Corporation against 24 of the leading music publishers and distributors in the United States, was dismissed in New York by Federal Judge Frederick H. Bryant. He ruled the complainant had failed to sustain its allegations that the defendants had set up a monopoly in their field.

Edward Rowland Dead

Edward W. Rowland, 67, for many years operator of the Hollywood Playhouse, died at his home in Hollywood this week following a heart attack. He is survived by a son, Edward W. Rowland, Jr., of New York.

Inserted Gags Are Big Censor Cause, Says R. B. Wilby

Injection of off-color "gags" into otherwise clean productions is the chief source of censorship difficulties of the industry, in the opinion of R. B. Wilby, Publix operating partner in the South. Commenting upon an editorial by Red Kann, editor of Motion Picture Daily, Mr. Wilby said:

"The real objection to the type of dirt that now is getting into pictures is not in the company making a 'She Done Him Wrong' or any other story that very definitely stands for what it is, and thereby gives warning to anybody who goes into the theatre as to what they will see, but to the gags which are injected into otherwise clean pictures. And that goes particularly for the 2-reel comedies. Take 'Wonder Bar'; there's no reason in the world for some of the things in that picture and there is nothing about 'Wonder Bar' that would give the patron of the theatre any advance warning that that's what he is getting in for. Some of the gags in 'Scandals,' an otherwise delightful picture, are the same way.

"That's the sort of thing that the Hays organization seems unable to combat. They can bar a complete story, and they generally make suckers of themselves when they do it, but they seem unable to get at the Pullman smoker gags injected into the revue or comedy type of film, and I honestly believe that this is the source of most of the censor troubles that are springing up so fast over the country.

"The funny part of it is that these gags never add anything to a picture. They just detract, whereas the completely risque picture may entice an audience all its own into the theatre and, at the same time, keep out those people who do not care for that sort of thing.

"I'm not crusading—I'm just telling you."

Academy Research Council Names Technical Divisions

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences on the Coast has announced the personnel of various subcommittees which will handle the technical program of the council. The purpose of each committee and its chairman, are: subcommittee to establish a uniform screen illumination in studio viewing rooms, chairman, John Aalberg; subcommittee on revision of the standard release print, S. J. Twining, chairman; subcommittee on establishment of a uniform reel length (1700-foot reel), J. M. Nickolaus, chairman; subcommittee on more effective use of the 35 mm. film area, Douglas Shearer, chairman; subcommittee on film preservatives, Harris Ensign, chairman.

Analysis of Year's Reviewing Shows 13 Per Cent Were Considered Not Suitable for Public Consumption

Declaring that 13 per cent of motion pictures viewed by her office during 1933 were not suitable for public consumption, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, official representative in Hollywood of the women's organizations previewing pictures, this week made her report for the year just past. Of 343 pictures reviewed by her office, 55 were judged to be characterized by "objectionable theme or unsavory treatment," The report stated that there were 23 pictures viewed by her organization in ordinary theatre showings. "Of this 23," the report said, "17 would have fallen into our category or unrecommended, thus bringing the unrecommended pictures up to 20 per cent of the output."

Of the 55 pictures excluded from the selected list, 15 were Warner-First National productions; 13 were Paramount; 7, Fox; 7, MGM; 6, RKO; 3, Universal; 2, Columbia, and one each for Majestic and Foy.

Beside the pictures that were omitted from the recommended lists, it is to be noted, according to the report, that in many instances there were objectionable features in otherwise "good" pictures—parts "that might have been omitted without affecting the entertainment value of the picture, but which undoubtedly contributed to hostile criticisms on the part of better class audiences."

"Of course," said Mrs. Winter, "'State Fair' is a glaring instance of this kind of thing—a picture that should have been wholly satisfactory to the home audience, but that often produced a kind of fury of resentment."

125 Family Entertainment

Mrs. Winter placed the pictures reviewed during 1933 in 15 classifications. Of these, 99 were dramatizations of "today's social conditions"; 73 were melodrama; 28, sophisticated comedy; 11, light romance; 24, musicals; 5, period dramas; 20, broad farce; 11, light comedy; 9, imaginative drama, "sometimes fantastic"; 18 had war themes; 28 were western; 9 were of animal interest; 5, adventure and geography; one was a "history of film," and one was unclassified.

Of the recommended pictures 125, or nearly 37 per cent, were classified as family entertainment, "even with quite strict standards." Thirty-two of the 125 family pictures were called "interesting for children unaccompanied by adults."

List Sent to 4,626 Persons

The monthly published list of pictures sent out by the MPPDA's public relations department from Mrs. Winter's office went to 4,626 persons, of whom 1,089 were added during the year.

"We have built up a strictly selected list of about 1,000 persons, chiefly heads of film names will constitute the nucleus of Paramount's 1934-35 star power.

Mr. Cohen said Paramount's entire 1933-34 production schedule of 60 pictures will be cleared away by May 15, thus giving the studio time to devote its entire facilities to preparation of the 1934-35 schedule, work on which already is well under way.

Jules Levy, vice-president of RKO Distributing Corporation, is in Hollywood discussing plans. Last week he held the first regional sales meeting, and the 1934-35 tentative plans were set before the conference.

Returning to Hollywood from New York, Samuel Goldwyn has begun preparations for his 1934-35 program for release through United Artists. Mr. Goldwyn's plans include two films with Anna Sten and one with Eddie Cantor. "Resurrection," the first, will be placed in production April 15, with Fredric March and Miss Sten co-starred. Then will come "Barbary Coast," in which Gary Cooper will star. The Cantor film will follow this. King Vidor has definitely established himself as an independent producer by completing a deal to release his first independent production, "Our Daily Bread," through United Artists. This company's short subject plans call for continuation of a deal with Walt Disney for the release annually for the next three years of 26 shorts, comprising 13 Mickey Mouses and 13 Silly Symphonies.

12 Chosen of Universal's 40

Of the 40 features, exclusive of westerns, set by Universal for 1934-35, 12 have definitely been chosen, and Robert Harris, eastern production manager, who flew to the Coast last week, took with him manuscripts of plays and books for additional selections. James R. Grainger, general manager of distribution for Universal, started Sunday on a production trip to Universal City. En route he will stop at Chicago and San Francisco.

Among the additional selections for the coming season's schedule, Universal has chosen two classics—"Swiss Family Robinson" and the "School for Scandal," Sheridan's famous drama, first presented in the year 1777. The company also has taken up the option on John Galsworthy's last novel, "One More River."

May 15 marks the beginning of 1934-35 production at the Warner studios at Burbank, Jack L. Warner announced in New York. Adaptations of popular novels will form a large part of the company's schedule, he indicated.

Comparatively little information as to the plans of independents for 1934-35 has been available as yet. Majestic announced its 1934-35 program would consist of 12 features. All dealings with independent producers will terminate next season, according to Herman Gluckman, president. The company will form its own producing unit to complete the current program and continue the company's producing schedule.

Four or Five From Franklin

Other independent producers' plans include the announcement by Harold B. Franklin, former RKO Theatres head, that he will make four or five features in 1934-35, modeling his production system on that of Samuel Goldwyn. Mr. Franklin is seeking release through a major distributor.

The only convention date yet set by any company is that of Monogram, which goes into its annual session next week, April 4-7, at Atlantic City. Paramount may hold its convention early in June and United Artists is considering Los Angeles as the scene of its sales meeting, which may be held in July.

Actual launching of company selling seasons probably will be later this year than ever before. Last year selling did not get under way until well past the middle of the summer, due to business conditions without and within the industry.

Paramount Files To End Bankruptcy

Paramount Publix filed a petition Tuesday for discharge from its present bankruptcy status in United States district court, New York. The action is solely a technicality, according to Rosenberg, Goldmark & Colin, Paramount's bankruptcy attorneys, who filed the petition.

Under the federal bankruptcy law it is necessary for any bankrupt to file such a petition for discharge within one year subsequent to its adjudication as a bankrupt. If it does not, no petition may be filed at any time, the attorneys' office said Wednesday.

"The action does not indicate that a reorganization plan for Paramount is nearer than next autumn at the earliest," Mr. Goldmark said. "Reorganization is not far enough along at the present time to warrant submission of any plan to the creditors and approval of the court."

A rent claim of $21,450 filed against Paramount on behalf of the Fremont theatre, at Fremont, Ohio, was allowed in the reduced amount of $6,500 by Referee Davis Monday. All that portion of the claim which represented future rent was disallowed.

Vitaphone Files Answer In Royalty Suit vs. Erpi

The Vitaphone Corporation has filed a replication in chancery court at Wilmington, Del., in its royalties action against Electrical Research Products, Inc. Vitaphone contends that the allegations in its bill of complaint are true and that the allegations in Erpi's plea that the state cannot assume jurisdiction in the suit, are not true and that it is ready to submit proof.

The replication brings the suit back to chancery court in Wilmington after it had been before the state supreme court at Dover twice on the defendant's plea, the defendant being sustained both times. Date for the hearing on the replication is to be fixed later.

Rosenzweig Sales Head For First Division

Charles Rosenzweig, former general sales manager of RKO and Columbia, has joined Harry Thomas, president of First Division Exchanges, as sales manager. First Division, which handles Monogram product in the eastern territory, operates a group of offices throughout the country.

councils, educators, radio speakers or lecturers, newspapers, to whom we are sending a monthly letter dealing with current interests in the industry," the report stated. "We add to this three pages of mimeographed material, which we call 'Out From the Studios,' in which there is advance news of what is happening in the production world. Of course, this information is not the usual 'fan' stuff, but is selected with a view to satisfying our particular public. If finances permitted it, this service might be greatly extended with decided benefit to the public and the association."

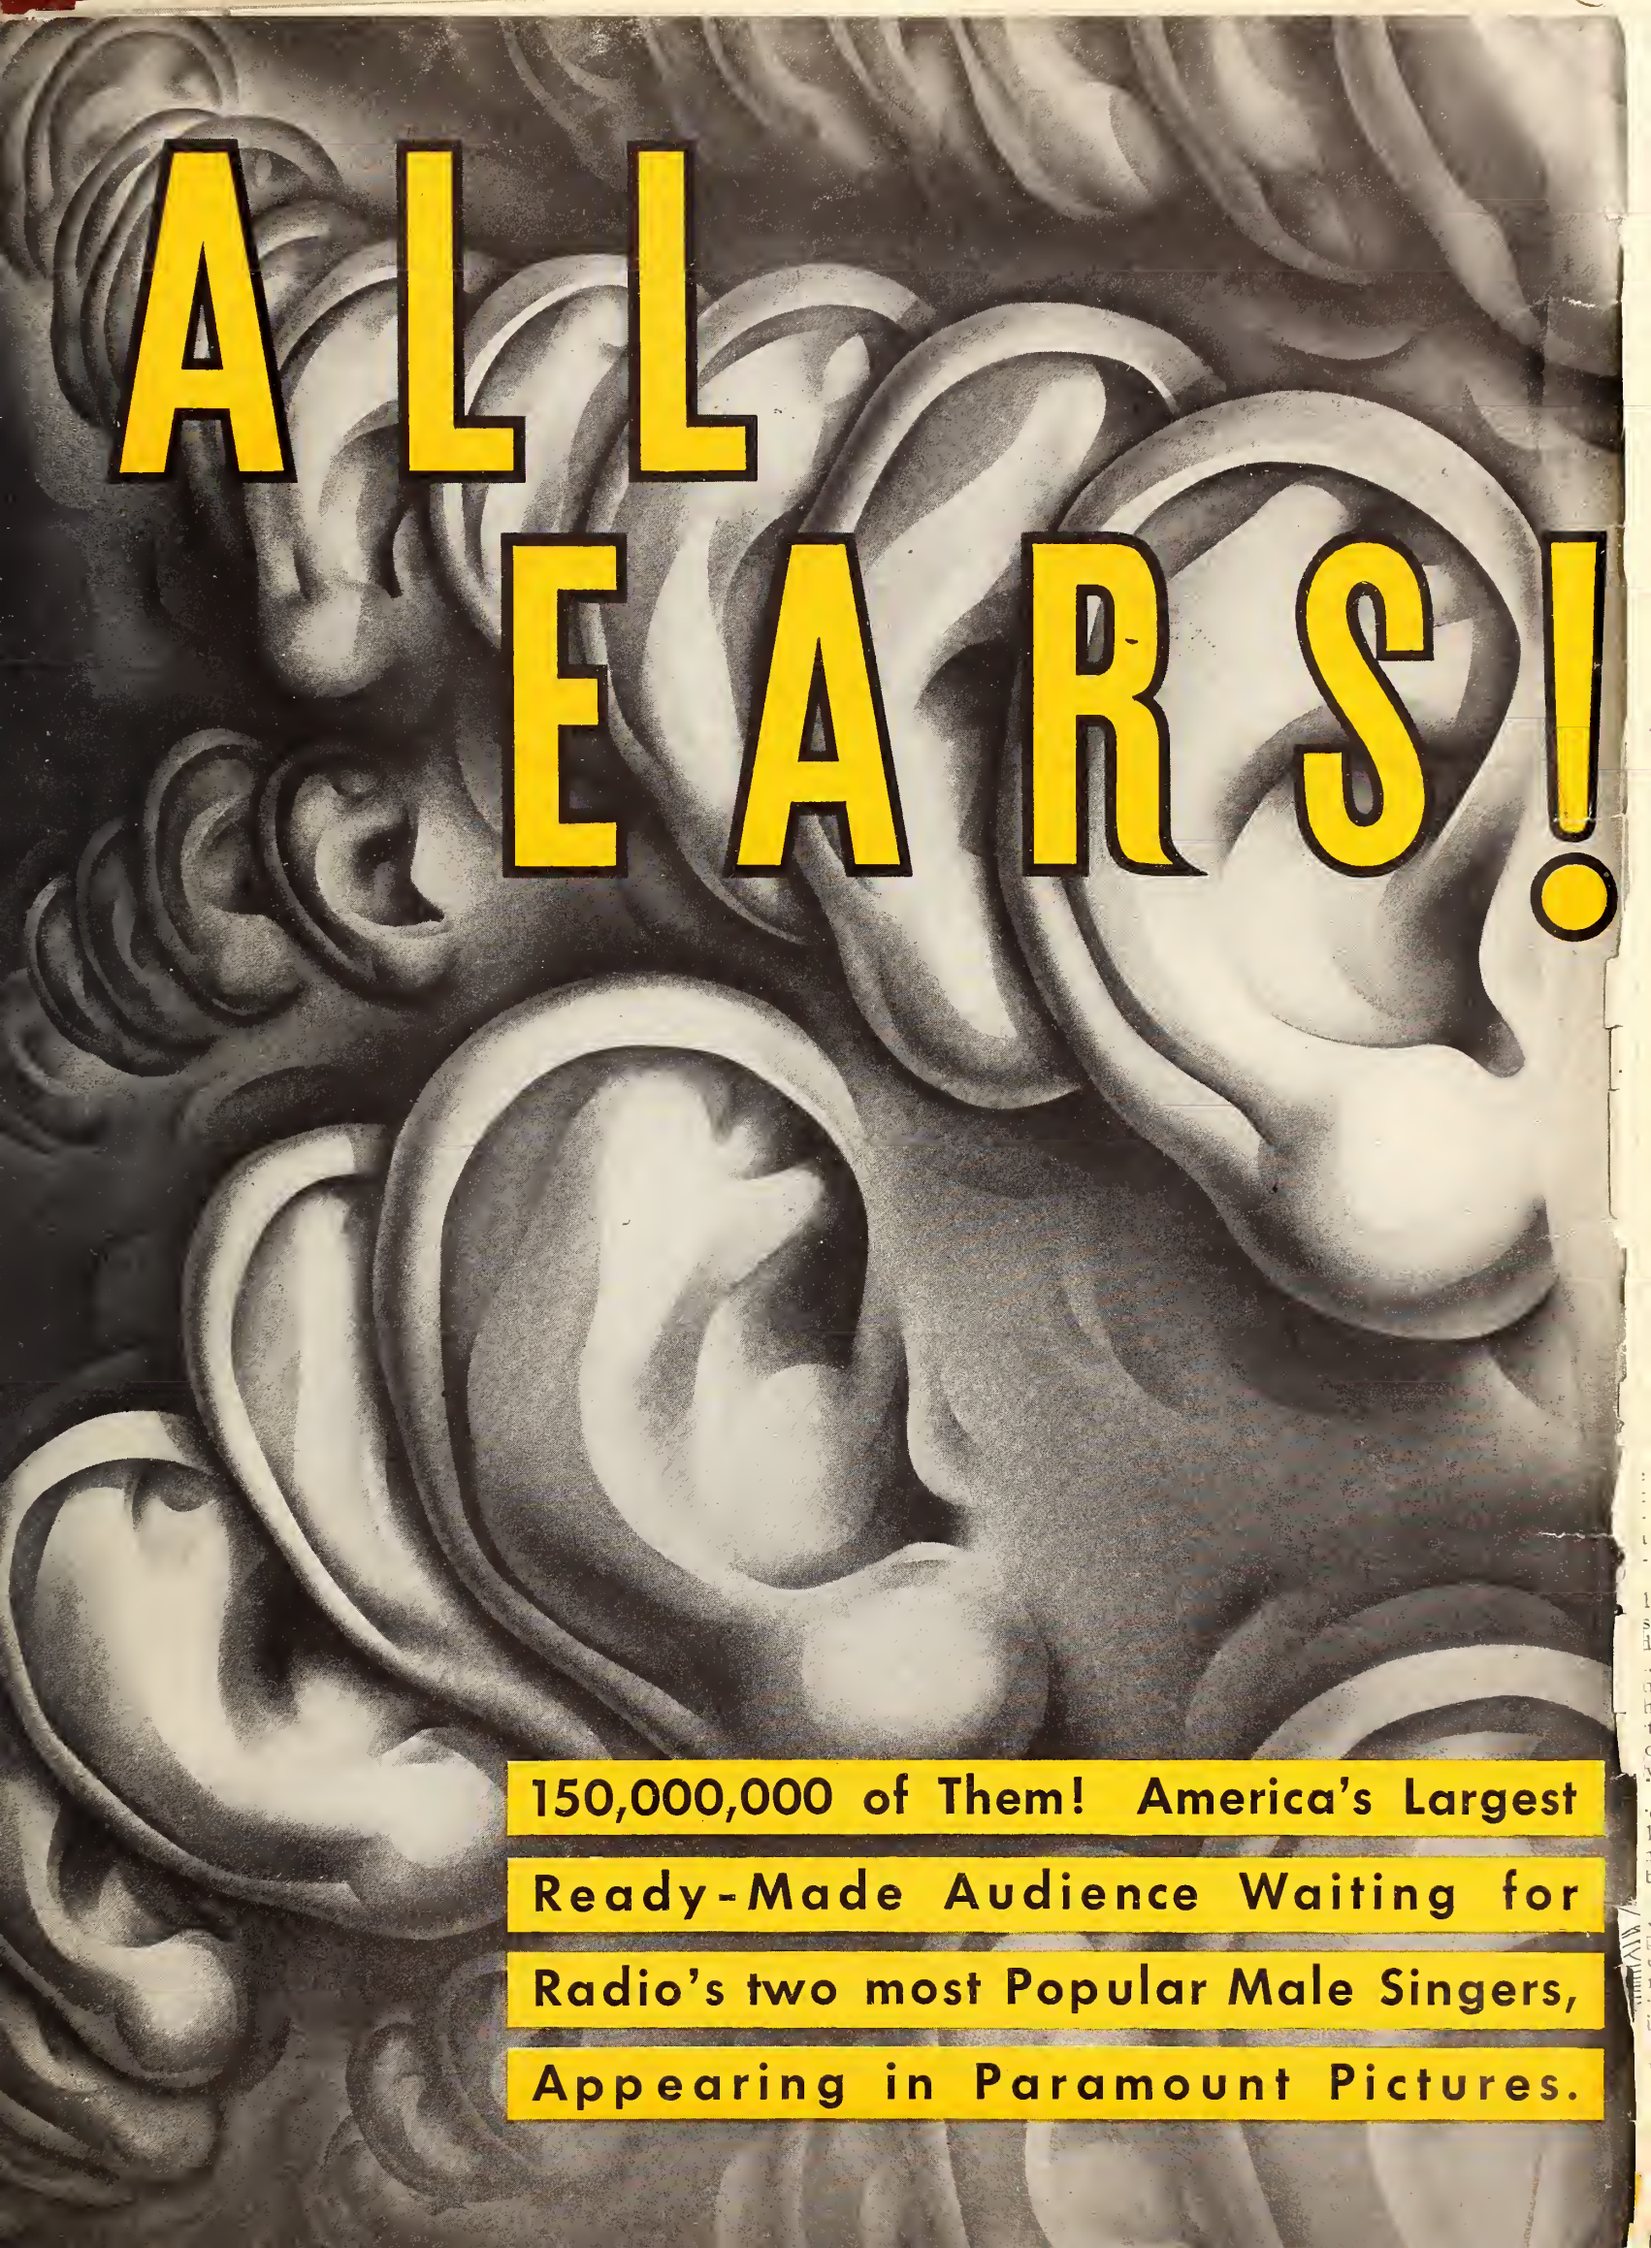
Four times weekly during 1933 pictures were shown at the Roosevelt hotel in Los Angeles, through the co-operation of the producing companies and Electrical Research Products, Inc., to the following groups: National Society Daughters of the American Revolution; National Society of New England Women; General Federation of Women's Clubs, west coast committee; California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc.; National Council of Jewish Women, Los Angeles section; Women's University Club, Los Angeles; United Church Brotherhood, representing California and Los Angeles federations; National Catholic Council of Women, California committee, and the American Library Association.

Reports Sent to Milliken

Occasionally it was possible to give these groups a studio preview.

"The chairmen of these groups formulate their judgments and this material is promptly sent to Governor Milliken (Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the MPPDA) for his monthly publications," the report said. "Recently information has been sent him daily in order that there should be as little duplication as possible between the previewers of eastern and western committees. In addition to his publication, this western office has been printing 1,500 of their joint lists for their individual distribution. Until last month these were in pamphlet form. We are now trying out, at their request, a bi-monthly printing in poster form so that it may be used on bulletin boards by schools, churches and clubs."

Educational contacts of the office included the annual conference on world affairs held at Riverside under the auspices of the University of Southern California, to which this year was added a daily round table discussion on international phases of cinematography.



"Little Women" Shown Teachers

In December Mrs. Winter arranged for a showing of "Little Women" to the conference of Teachers of Southern California.

"This was particularly valuable," she said, "since it presented to some 2,000 teachers a flawless challenge to a vindictive speech made, just preceding it, by one of the leading school men."

At the suggestion of the Hal Roach Studios, Mrs. Winter sent out 800 postal card questionnaires to "key people" asking their opinion of double billing.

The total replies showed 1,182 persons were against double bills; 217 for them, while five expressed no opinion.

LABOR PROVISIONS OF CODE TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER ALL AGREEMENTS

Code Compliance Up To Authority

The motion picture Code Authority this week initiated the taking over of the functions of NRA regional compliance boards and adding the motion picture code compliance work of these boards to the duties of the 31 Local Grievance Boards. The action was specifically requested by the NRA Administration and is designed to have the industry as a whole work out its own compliance problems and create better understanding among conflicting interests.

More Refuse to Serve

Additional refusals to serve on local Clearance and Grievance boards were received this week. At Atlanta, Arthur Lucas, who succeeded Lionel H. Keene of Loew's as affiliated exhibitor representative on grievances, pleaded pressure of business. In Cincinnati, John B. Elliott of Lexington, Ky., reiterated his refusal to serve, although he had not submitted a formal resignation. In Chicago, Lowell R. Mason resigned as impartial member of the Chicago Grievance Board, the reason being his appointment as general counsel of the National Recovery Review Board.

In Kansas City objection to appointment of Thomas J. Finnegan as impartial member of the Local Grievance Board, was made by Jay Means, president of the Independent Theatre Owners, the understood objection being that he is a Democratic ward committeeman.

After an exchange of wires, Sol A. Rosenblatt, division administrator, appointed Dr. Paul Lux.

The personnel setups of boards in five cities were returned to the committee on selections Saturday. For New York, plans previously having been submitted for three separate Clearance and Zoning and three individual Grievance Boards, recommendations have been made to have one enlarged board handle problems in three New York selling divisions.

While the Grievance Board for Philadelphia was completed last week, the clearance and zoning situation is at a standstill. The Grievance board consists of F. L. McNamee, RKO; M. S. Landau, Universal; M. E. Comerford, Comerford Theatres; Lewen Pizor, president, MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, and Col. Harry Salter, impartial member.

Local Boards Meet

In Cincinnati, Mrs. Alice M. Juergens, secretary of the Film Board, was chosen secretary.

At Buffalo Sidney Samson, Fox exchange manager, and A. Charles Hayman, managing director of the Lafayette, are temporary chairmen of the grievance and clearance boards respectively.

Three types of forms for filing grievances are being mailed to board members this week by the Code Authority. The first, a white form, will cover complaints under Article 6, Part 2, Section 1 of the code; the second, a blue form, will cover complaints under Article 6, Part 2, Section 4, and the third, a pink form, will include protests dealing with non-theatricals, refusal of fair adjustment, designation of percentage playdates, reduced admissions, theatre transfers and premature advertising.

It was announced this week that Mr. Rosenblatt is among the highest paid officials of the NRA, with a salary of $7,060.

Arbitration to Settle Disputes Over Readjustment of Wages with Hour Reduction, Says Rosenblatt in NRA Ruling

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Serving to clarify a situation in exhibition which has been most confusing since the motion picture code became effective on December 7th, the National Recovery Administration at Washington this week issued the following important ruling:

The labor provisions of the code shall take precedence over labor agreements between theatres and projectionists and other skilled theatre labor. It is further provided that all disputes resulting from reduction of hours to the code's maximum of of 40 per week shall be arbitrated, and arbitration machinery is provided under the code.

Inasmuch as the code specifically prohibits any reduction from the wage scale prevailing on August 23, 1933, this means that, regardless of any existing contract or labor agreement, the wage for 40 hours shall be based on a wage-per-hour determined by dividing the August 23 weekly wage by the number of working hours that wage covered. This calculation gives the hourly wage prevailing on August 23, and multiplication by 40 gives the new weekly wage in all cases where working hours have to be reduced to the 40-hour minimum.

All Skilled Labor Affected

The order allows the exhibitor to spread employment without increasing his payrolls, where his operators have been working in excess of 40 hours.

Projectionists had disagreed in many places over the expressed right of exhibitors to effect any wage reduction to conform to the 40-hour weekly maximum, where contractual or other agreements of labor existed between both parties, and especially where contracts called for fixed weekly wages, instead of hourly rates.

The ruling also affects skilled theatre labor, organized and unorganized, of the following classes: billposters, carpenters, electrical workers, engineers, firemen, oilers, painters, stage employees and theatrical wardrobe attendants. Principally involved, however, are the projectionists.

Contract Agreements Not Nullified

In the ruling made this week by the NRA, upon direct request made to Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt, in charge of amusement codes, it was said that while under the code, projectionists are not to receive the same pay for the 40-hour week that they received prior to the code for a longer week, it is not the intention of the NRA that wages shall be unduly reduced.

Operators working on an hourly basis before the code, or as of August 23rd, receiving, for example, $1 per hour, got $50 or $60 weekly on the basis of a 50-hour or 60-hour week, respectively. Under the code, their hourly rate of $1 shall not be changed, but they shall receive only $40 for the code's required maximum of a 40-hour week.

However, where union contracts, or other agreements, set definite weekly rates, and not hourly rates, arbitration is to be resorted to for the making of a fair proportionate readjustment in cases where the operators and the exhibitors cannot agree.

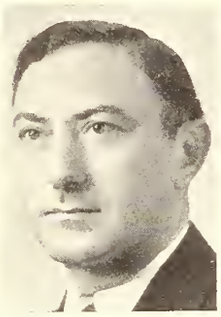
At the same time, the NRA stated specifically that the code, though it shortens the working week to 40 hours, and must necessarily affect contractual or other labor agreements accordingly, does not nullify such agreements. In some exhibition quarters it was felt that the code not only superseded the provisions of labor, or contracts, but it also nullified such agreements.

The ruling this week will probably involve hundreds of exhibitors and may involve 1,000, or more, projectionists and other skilled theatre workers.

More Jobs for Projectionists

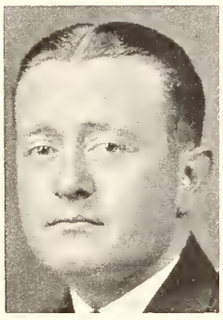
While some operators will receive a proportionate wage reduction where they have been working more than 40 hours, it appears that the resultant spreading of employment, without burdening the exhibitor, will considerably alleviate the unemployment situation among projectionists, and, in addition, should immediately aid the working projectionists by lessening, and eventually eliminating the heavy benefit assessments which they have been paying to union and other organizations during the general business recession in order to aid their unemployed brother workers.

The motion picture code specifically states that the minimum wage scale and maximum working hour schedule that prevailed for projectionists and other skilled theatre workers, as of August 23rd, 1933, shall prevail under the code, effective December 7th, but that regardless, such maximum working schedule shall not exceed 40 hours weekly.



Also, the code establishes actual machinery for arbitration of disputes in this connection.

Chicago Relief Dinner Success; $5,000 Raised



At the Medinah Michigan Avenue Club, Chicago, last Thursday evening, the city's motion picture folk rallied in full numbers at the Film and Theatre Relief Dinner Dance, held for the benefit of the sick and needy of Chicago's theatrical and motion picture world. It was expected that fully $5,000 would be raised as proceeds of the affair, which compares with $2,300 a year ago. Approximately 2,500 attended the dinner.

Unusual was the publicity achieved for the event. The Chicago American, evening daily, published a Relief Dinner Dance Special edition the evening of the affair, and devoted the entire first page of the paper to a complete preliminary account, with expressions of approval from Hollywood stars and Mayor Kelly of Chicago.

Cancellation privileges up to 25 per cent on British and American films are to be sought by New Zealand exhibitors, according to reports to the department of commerce at Washington from vice-consul W. W. Orebaugh. At present cancellations of 12½ per cent are allowed on American films, but British product has increased to the point where exhibitors feel they should have uniform privilege on all product.

Goldwyn Notes Dual Solution

Distributors' refusal to sell product to any exhibitor engaged in a policy of double featuring would go far toward elimination of double bills, Samuel Goldwyn declared last weekend at Albuquerque, N. M., en route to the Coast from New York. The producer seemed to have no doubt of the feasibility of such a procedure.

Mr. Goldwyn was definitely annoyed at the criticism his recent article in the Saturday Evening Post on Hollywood salaries had aroused. He was especially incensed that Charles C. Pettijohn of the MPPDA had registered an objection.

"Instead of finding fault with my article, Pettijohn should blame the producers' publicity departments for publicizing fictitious salaries," declared Goldwyn. "What I told was the truth and I believe I did the industry a service by pointing out that many star salaries were inordinately hiked for publicity purposes.

"For instance, President Roosevelt was provoked because Baby LeRoy was getting $150 a week. I pointed out his salary was only $50 a week. Similarly, with Greta Garbo and Constance Bennett and others in the high brackets, about whom producers had given the public to understand they were receiving a king's ransom.

"Not only do they not get what the producers say they get, but the Government gets half of what they actually receive. It isn't salaries paid real artists with box-office strength that injures the industry; it's the high salaries paid incompetents whom the industry would be better off without."

Calls Film Best Selling Medium

An effective piece of public relations work in behalf of the motion picture industry is credited to Dr. Clinton Wunder, president of the Southern California Fellowship and former vice-president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, as a result of his address last week before the San Francisco advertising club.

The program, which was arranged by Hulda McGinn, manager of the California Theatre Association, was presided over by A. M. Bowles, northern California division manager of Fox West Coast Theatres, who acted as guest chairman of the day. Principal theatre executives of San Francisco were present. Dr. Wunder spoke on "Motion Pictures, Our Greatest Advertising Medium As a World Market."

A best answer to the depression is "expression," Dr. Wunder said, and declared the motion picture industry is giving expression to a clear picturization of the situation. Advertising men, he said, are in "the upper 20 per cent strata of influence," charged with the responsibility of expression. "You cannot escape the effects of motion picture expression and it is building the type of good will for that noble new life for which all people have prayed."

Celebrity to Produce Total of 24 in 1934-35

A total of 24 cartoon comedies, all in color, will be produced by Celebrity Productions for the 1934-35 season, and, according to present plans, these will be released through the independent market. Celebrity currently is releasing its "Willie Whopper" series through MGM, and its new "ComiColor" series through independents.

Next season's schedule calls for 12 "ComiColor" cartoons, all adaptations of fairy tales and folklore stories; also six musical cartoons and six cartoon "thrillers."

Educational To Rehire On Film-to-Film Basis

The publicity department workers and other employees of the Educational studio on the Coast, who are retired from the pay roll April 1, will be rehired on a picture-to-picture basis when production is resumed. Reports are current in Hollywood that Educational will concentrate future production in the east.

PALM AWARDED TO "RIPTIDE" PREVIEW
CHAMBER WANTS QUAKE SCENES BARRED
THE "BIG SHOT" VOICES TEACHERS' RACKET
NINE FEATURES START; SEVEN FINISHED

by VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

THE palm for the glamorous event of the week is accorded the preview of Norma Shearer in "Riptide."

Held at the MGM Studio, in four projection rooms, more than two hundred scribes and guests saw the film by the simple expedient of staggering starting time and bicycling the print. (Exhibitors copy at own risk.)

Because "Riptide" is Miss Shearer's first film in over a year and, by the same token, Irving Thalberg's first in the same span, all hands arose to the occasion with spontaneous eclat.

Most of the MGM officials, executives and producers attended, as well as a sprinkling of Leo's stars, including Robert Montgomery and Herbert Marshall of the film.

Samuel Goldwyn and his charming wife, close friends of the Thalbergs, were present, as were Mr. and Mrs. Thalberg, mother and father of Irving.

After the showing, guests assembled on a specially decorated stage, where in swank setting a buffet supper was served by Victor Hugo, the ritzy caterer of the town.

Gracious hosts were Norma Shearer and Irving Thalberg, who visited with the scribes between courses.

Consensus: Shearer more ravishing than ever—her finest performance to date, affording her wider scope for richer and more matured emotional variations. Gowns and wardrobe elicited excited whispers from the ladies.

The production was considered especially attractive to women of all strata. Longer on dialogue than on action, it nonetheless sparkled with interest for sophisticates, with sympathetic reactions for plain folk. Evident throughout was the impeccable taste and showmanship of Thalberg, together with his rare perception in reaching the heart-strings.

Box-office critics placed value on electric light names of Miss Shearer, Montgomery and Marshall.

CHAMBER DISSENTS!

The Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles has made protest. It wants producers to stop picturizing local earthquakes and floods. And last week the community voted against a bond issue to rebuild school buildings to insure children against calamity.

Last year when Long Beach and Compton suffered partial devastation, local solons complained that distribution of the newsreel clips was harming California. Representatives of the Chamber of Commerce even made bold to say that the news scenes were "faked." The newsreel cameramen proved they filmed the disaster as it occurred.

"How did you newsreel men know, in advance, that an earthquake was about to happen?" queried a spry gentleman from the Chamber.

"Well, we were coming in from San Pedro, after we shot the Army-Navy boxing championships, and while passing through Compton, our automobile steering wheel swung out of control. Somebody said the pavement was moving. We knew something was wrong. We hopped off the truck, got the tremble, saw what was happening, made the electrical connection, shot the scenes, rushed them up to Los Angeles, and they were on the screens the next morning."

Chamber members have voiced opposition to quake scenes in Twentieth Century's "Advice to the Lovelorn" and "Looking for Trouble." They also resented the rainstorm in Cagney's "Lady Killer."

The screen, in picturing floods and quakes, really reveals negligence, and in exposing obstinate apathy renders distinguished service for Hollywood's future.

Publicity, frank and far reaching, will accomplish what sitting on a volcano never will.

THIS SHOT WON'T BE IN COMPLETED FILM

Jimmy Durante works with a penguin in "Stand Up and Cheer," Fox musical.

In one scene the penguin works alone, with Durante's voice dubbed over, creating the impression of the penguin talking.

One shot, which will not be in the completed picture, shows the penguin shrieking, "I'm mortified, Durante's plagiarized my nose."

ODD CAPSULES!

With What?

Jack Oakie strolled out of the Ritz theatre after the preview of W. C. Fields' "You're Telling Me," and the newsboys told him in stentorian voice "Wuxtree—Jack Oakie sued by director for $125,000," which headlines screamed black across the morning papers.

It was Jack's first intimation of the suit, but he dismissed it with "He's an agent, not mine either, and he said I threatened him. Can you imagine, 'threatening an agent'!"

Getting Honor

LeRoy Prinz, dance director at Paramount, former Heidelberg student, after some verbal fireworks with a former German aviator, is alleged to have fought a duel with the airman in a Hollywood barn, with rapiers and seconds in the most approved Germanic style.

Both contestants were cut up, with Prinz the chief cuttee. Police, finding a non-dueling law, hauled Prinz and his opponent to jail. Both, in bandages, denied participating in such a thing as a non-legal duel. The reason for it all never was divulged.

Seventy Per Cent

Will Rogers, after presenting Frank Lloyd with the directorial award at the Academy dinner, said, "Let's give the director credit. He's about 70 per cent of a picture. The authors, dialoguers, adaptors and other murderers of the plot are 20 per cent, and all the rest, including us actors, is the remaining 10 per cent. That makes 100 per cent, doesn't it?"

Directors are now wondering if Rogers was kidding on the square, or just kidding.

PRODUCTION

Last week Hollywood had forty-five pictures actively shooting. This week nine new features started and seven were finished.

MGM has three starters, Fox and Warners contribute a pair each and Universal and Radio check in with singletons.

Fox finished two, as did Warners. Universal, Radio and Paramount provided the other three.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's starting trio include a picturization of a literary classic, "Treasure Island"; a smart romance drama, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and a modern original, "100 Percent Pure." The first, a Robert Louis Stevenson classic, teams Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper again, with Lionel Barrymore, Otto Kruger and Douglas Dumbrille in the supporting cast. Although Charles Laughton is absent, Irving Thalberg started preliminary shooting on "The Barretts," in which Norma Shearer and Maureen O'Sullivan will be seen with the winner of the Academy's best actor award. Jean Harlow and Lionel Barrymore will be the stars of the original by Anita Loos and John Emerson. Sam Wood is directing.

Warners' new pair includes the historical romance, "Madame DuBarry," starring Dolores Del Rio, supported by Victor Jory, Reginald Owen and Verree Teasdale, and a semi-musical, "Dames," with Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Guy Kibbee, Hugh Herbert and Ruth Donnelly. The story is an original by Robert Lord; lyric and music by Harry Warren and Al Dubin; dances by Busby Berkeley. Ray Enright directs.

At Fox, Sally Eilers and Jimmy Dunn are together again in "Always Honest," and "Call It Luck" has Herbert Mundin, Pat Paterson, Charles Starrett, Georgia Caine, Gordon Westcott and Susan Fleming.

Universal started "Affairs of a Gentleman," featuring Paul Lukas and Leila Hyams, supported by Onslow Stevens and Dorothy LeBaire. The Radio newcomer is "Great American Harem," a comedy for Ginger Rogers, William Gargan and Pert Kelton, under William Seiter's direction.

The seven moving into the cutting rooms all look promising. The two at Fox are Lasky's "Springtime for Henry," with Otto Kruger, Nancy Carroll, Heather Angel, Herbert Mundin and Nigel Bruce, which Frank Tuttle directed, and "Too Many Women" with Warner Baxter and Rochelle Hudson, Rosemary Ames, Henrietta Crosman, Mona Barrie, Matt Moore and Irving Pichel.

Warners' pair editing are "Friends of Mr. Sweeney," a comedy with Charlie Ruggles, Ann Dvorak, Eugene Pallette, Dorothy Tree, Harry Beresford and Berton Churchill, and "The Circus Clown" (formerly "Sawdust"), in which Joe E. Brown stars, supported by Patricia Ellis, Dorothy Burgess, Donald Dilloway and the noted Poodles Hanneford family.

At Radio, "Stingaree" was finished, presenting Richard Dix, Irene Dunne, Mary Boland, Conway Tearle, Snub Pollard, Andy Devine and Henry Stephenson. Universal called time on its mystery thriller, "The Black Cat," which offers Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Jacquelyn Wells and a host of known screen names in a picture suggested by an Edgar Allen Poe story. "We're Not Dressing," music and comedy with Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard, Ethel Merman and Burns and Allen, is the Paramount contribution.

An epidemic of title changing ranged through the production colony. Twentieth Century changed the Arliss picture, "Head of the Family," to "The Last Gentleman." At Columbia, "Murder in the Studio" became "The Crime of Helen Stanley." Paramount decided that "Often a Bridegroom" should be "Many Happy Returns." Radio caught the fever and "Dover Road" became "Where Lovers Meet," and Warners kept fashionable by altering "Sawdust" to "The Circus Clown."

OUT OF THE NOTEBOOK

Producers issued a new "verboten" order prohibiting visitors in studios and on sets. But if you're a president's son, the new ukase means nothing. Elliott Roosevelt saw Mae West making "It Ain't No Sin." Elliott is aviation editor for Universal News Service.

Testimonial and indorsement business experienced a resounding blow this week when a wily gent was caught red-handed having forged names of stars to faked releases.

If they can split the tie vote between Phil Gersdorf and Sam W. B. Cohen for president, the Wampas will hold their installation ceremonies at Agua Caliente, and it looks like a hot time in the ole town, whoever wins.

The Mayfair dance was postponed two weeks as it conflicted with the Temple Israel benefit.

On March 23, Paramount had eleven pictures in the work. Seventeen will go before the cameras in April and May.

Warners changed the title of "Rhythm in the Air" to "Twenty Million Sweethearts" with hopes that just as many patrons will see the show. Paramount's "The Great Magoo" is relabeled "Thank Your Stars."

Ex-Mayor James M. Curley of Boston visited the Warner Studio. Looks like a Democratic year.

Charles R. Rogers drops "Canal Boy," and instead, on his Paramount schedule, will make "I Loved an Actress," a Gregory Ratoff original. It's possible that Adolphe Menjou and Miriam Hopkins will play the leads, and lead the play.

That boy Lee Tracy, in another peccadillo entitled Universal versus Paramount, winds up with a four year contract with Paramount.

Sam Goldwyn, back in town, is cudgeling his brain for a new title for "Resurrection" in which Anna Sten and Fredric March will be linked for romance.

The preview racket has reviewers running around in circles trying to make out which are legitimate. Of nine shown March 17, three almost a year old, but never shown in Los Angeles territory, were palmed off on innocent customers.

The log-burning Connecticut gentlemen farmers will have their number increased by one. Robert Montgomery briefly vacations on his Nutmeg State acreage.

All Los Angeles down town first-run houses, except the RKO-Hillstreet, are raising their admission prices. C'mon Hillstreet!

Jack Lewis, Producer Association news contact man, is back from his vacation; amazed to discover that the film industry did not go to perdition during his absence.

Genial Dick Rowland, film pioneer, dining with old friends, still is rated one of filmdom's finest.

H. B. Franklin in town. Folk who have stories to sell, if he goes into production, and folk who have theatres to sell, if he goes into theatre operation again, fall all over each other trying to see him.

This title changing business is getting funny. Universal just switched the tag on "The Practical Joker" to "Embarrassing Moments." Monogram gets its name in the papers by retitling "Border Patrol" as "Happy Landings."

Paul Sloane is sitting up nights polishing up the story and setting the cast for "Down to His Last Yacht," novelty musical, which he will direct for Radio and Lou Brock.

The studios plan big social doings for visiting MPTOA convention delegates and their wives. Warner and MGM already are set to entertain with parties.

The deaths of Lilyan Tashman and Louis Borzage, Frank Borzage's father, saddened Hollywood.

It's a boy at the Frank Capras, their first. Capra's latest for Columbia was "It Happened One Night."

A. H. Fisher has joined Gaumont British and will handle sales, directly to theatres in the United States. He will work under the supervision of Arthur Lee.

New Agents' Pact Reached on Coast

Attorneys representing Hollywood agents and others representing the California State Labor Bureau, met in Hollywood last week in a final session and agreed on the draft of a new set of rules and laws by which the state can adequately supervise the agents' employment activities. The draft will be forwarded to Joseph J. Creem, commissioner of the California state division of legislation and statistical law enforcement and industrial employment relations, in San Francisco.

A committee of three, composed of Austin Sherman, chairman; Martin Gang and Ralph Blum, represented approximately 95 per cent of the agents, while Thomas Barker, chief deputy of the State Labor Bureau; Charles F. Lowy and George L. Schaumer, attorneys, served for the state.

Highlighting the agreement is a clause indicating that provision must be made in all contracts between artist and agent giving the artist the right to enter into contract with the agent and the right to cancel the contract if the agent fails in the performance of his contracted obligations. Also it is stated that under any oral contract, the agent must first prove he obtained a position for his client before he is entitled to any fees. It was further agreed that all contracts must be submitted to the Labor Bureau for approval, and that all controversies arising out of application of the various regulatory measures must also be submitted to the Bureau.

New Agreement For Hoblitzelle

A new reorganization agreement for Southern Enterprises of Texas, which is operated by Karl Hoblitzelle in partnership with Paramount, was substituted last week for the original agreement entered into last October. The substituted agreement was approved by Referee Henry K. Davis.

The terms of the new agreement are the same, but Famous Theatres Corp., the new Paramount subsidiary, replaces Irving Trust Co., receiver for Publix Enterprises, as a party to the agreement, and Interstate Circuit, subsidiary of Southern Enterprises, is now chartered as a Delawar instead of a Louisiana corporation in orde to become a party to the new agreement

Consolidated Directors Named

At an annual stockholders' meeting last week in New York Herbert J. Yates, Sr., president; R. I. Poucher, W. W. Vincent, A. D. Farwell and W. P. Stevens were elected to the board of directors of Consolidated Film Industries.

18 MILLION RADIO SETS NOW IN USE; NRA RULING ON FREE SHOWS WAITED

Total of 3,806,000 Sets Sold in 1933 Alone, at Estimated Retail Value of $130,800,000; Radio Authority Opens Inquiry

With the revelation late last week that more than one-half of the entire citizenry in the United States now have access to radio receiving sets, the question of alleged unfair competition of "free" radio shows to the motion picture and legitimate theatre interests took on deeper significance.

Approximately 18,000,000 radio sets are in use in the United States—in homes and in automobiles—and of this number, there were 3,806,000 sets sold at an estimated retail value of $130,800,000 in the one year 1933, the low gross year of screen and stage.

Thus, on the basis of the Federal Government's census estimate of a four-person average in the American household, about 72,000,000 daily can listen to radio programs at home.

Dollar Value of Sales Grows

The statistics, compiled by the Columbia Broadcasting System, in conjunction with the McGraw-Hill trade publication, Radio Retailing, are based upon reports from leading manufacturers of radio sets, in addition to 1,100 distributors and dealers in 48 states, and were made public in a CBS brochure, The Flood Hits the Valleys. A similar survey was made last year, covering for the first time the distribution, by states, of new radio homes since the 1930 census.

According to the brochure, the total number of radio-equipped homes in the United States as of January, 1934, was 17,950,000, the figure being based on Radio Retailing's tabulations of the sales of new sets, less the number which, according to distributors' and dealers' reports, were sold as replacements of old sets or as "extra" sets to homes already having radios.

According to Radio Retailing, set sales in 1933 represented an appreciable dollar increase over 1932 and an increase of 1,186,000—about 45.3 per cent—in actual sales.

In addition, the survey showed that the percentage of total sales going into homes already equipped with radio receiving sets was higher in 1933 than ever before, approximating 65 per cent. This in itself reflects the ever-increasing popularity of the radio as a specific entertainment medium, as does the fact that 55,600,000 radio tubes were bought in 1933 by listeners in the United States at an estimated retail value of $56,600,000.

Auto Set Sale Greatest

The survey goes on to state that the model showing the largest sales increase during the past year was the automobile radio, which sold 724,000 sets, as compared with only 143,000 sets in 1932.

Export sales in 1933 also were larger than the year before, 509,000 sets being sold as compared with 290,000 for 1932.

A breakdown of the types of receiving sets sold in the United States in 1933 shows that 2,226,000 "midget" type sets, at an estimated retail value of $50,000,000, without tubes, were sold; 856,000 "consoles," at an estimated retail value of $52,200,000, without tubes, and 724,000 automobile sets without tubes, at an estimated retail value of $28,600,000.

Strictly on the basis of the foregoing figures, the problem to motion picture exhibitors of the "free" radio shows in studios and theatres for that purpose and in the existence of so many sets in use, becomes increasingly apparent.

Await Radio Survey Results

For more than two years the entire exhibition branch has been charging unfair competition by broadcasters through "spot" programs starring film and stage celebrities at hours when theatre admissions should reach their highest peak. Then came the complaint from exhibitors that "free" admissions to broadcasting studios, auditoriums and theatres was ruining whatever possibilities they had of "keeping their heads above water."

Several weeks ago the Code Authority of the legitimate theatre suggested joint action against free radio shows in a proposal to the motion picture Code Authority. Subcommittees of both authorities were appointed. The radio Code Authority declared it would appoint a similar subcommittee to make an investigation, after which representatives of all three presented their arguments to the NRA at Washington.

The Administration had authorized William P. Farnsworth, deputy administrator, to decide the matter and he called the three subcommittees together March 7. Appearing as representatives of the motion picture industry were Ed Kuykendall, Charles L. O'Reilly, and W. C. Michel of Fox, acting in behalf of Sidney R. Kent. For the legitimate theatre there were Marcus Heiman, William C. Elliott and Frank Gillmore. The radio interests were represented by John Shepard of Boston, M. R. Runyon, New York, and James Baldwin of Washington.

The deputy administrator has not yet announced a decision. In the meantime, the radio Code Authority is circularizing the entire radio industry, including all radio stations, dealers and distributors, inviting their opinions. Further action now awaits the reporting of the results of the investigation to the NRA.

Roxy, in New York, Says London House "Not Far Off"

S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel, returned to New York from London late last week, made the prediction, on arrival, that a London theatre bearing his name, and seating 6,000, is "not so far off." Two locations are under consideration, he said. One of them is understood to be in the West End of London.

Roxy's tour of Publix theatres begins at the Metropolitan, Boston, this weekend. From there he will play in New York, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago and other cities to be added to the itinerary later.

SAYS FILMS NEED SPEECH DICTATOR

From James F. Bender, of the College of the City of New York, has come the indictment that the stars of Hollywood, in their effort to speak perfect English, lisp or indulge in Cockney tone patterns and intonations by swallowing syllables and sounds. The remedy, declares this member of the executive committee of the Atlantic League for the Rehabilitation of Speech, is the appointment of a "dictator of speech" for the motion picture. His findings are the result of a survey of speech defects in the talking films.

Into the charmed circle of Mr. Bender's classification of 10 film players whose speech is the best in Hollywood, are listed, among actors, and in the order named, Fredric March, William Powell, John Barrymore, Warner Baxter, Lewis Stone; and among actresses, Ann Harding, Mary Astor, Myrna Loy, Jean Muir, Irene Dunne. Katharine Hepburn, Academy award winner, was passed over because of her "English affectations."

1,000 OWNERS TO ATTEND MPTOA CONVENTION; COMMITTEES NAMED

Circuit Launches Office to Balance Shorts on Bills

Interstate Theatres, Inc., operating 100 theatres in the Southwest, with headquarters at Dallas, has established a new department, a booking office designed to properly proportion short subject material to the feature picture, making a balanced program.

Besa Belk Short, formerly publicity director of the Majestic in Dallas, of which her husband, Paul Short, is manager, has been named to head the new department. R. J. O'Donnell, general manager of Interstate, said in Dallas last week that "a perfect motion picture program should be made up of balances and contrasts. Unfortunately, in the emphasis on feature pictures, most theatres have booked comedies and cartoons as filler without paying particular attention to them. The perfect picture program should be taken as a unit with the short subjects correlated to the feature picture, thereby making a satisfying program."

Mrs. Short will see all features and all short subjects released each week, then arrange the booking of shorts in accordance with the feature booked for each theatre in the circuit by P. K. Johnston, chief booker.

Six years ago, in the early days of sound pictures, Mr. O'Donnell experimented with a similar arrangement, but the natural shortage of sound film material at the time is said to have prevented continuation of the policy.

Walter Henshel, publicity director at the Palace theatre, will replace Mrs. Short at the Majestic. Frederic McFadden, publicist at the Melba, will move to the Palace and publicity at the Melba will be taken over by W. W. Lewis, manager, and Leo Linz, assistant, it was announced by James Owen Cherry, city manager in Dallas for Interstate.

New York Circuits Reject Demands of Sign Writers

Circuits in Greater New York are in difficulties with Local Sign Writers' Union No. 230, which is demanding an increase from $13.20 to $14.70 per day and a decrease of the working hours from eight to seven. The members now work on a four-day week. The current contract expires at the end of March. The circuits are reported to have rejected the demands of the union, and are making arrangements to keep their lobbies decorated as usual in the event a strike is called.

Admission Tax Revenue Drops During February

Admission tax collections during February totaled $996,861, compared with $1,089,767 during the same month last year, according to figures made public last week by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington.

Another Group of Equal Numbers Expected to Sit In as Observers at Los Angeles Meeting Opening April 10

New York headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America indicated late Wednesday that 1,000 exhibitors will be on hand in the grand ballroom of the Ambassador hotel in Los Angeles on Tuesday morning, April 10, when Ed Kuykendall, president, opens the 14th annual MPTOA convention.

Another group, expected to exceed 1,000, and comprising friends of the exhibitors and representatives of producers, distributors and the public, will be in atendance as observers, some in official capacities participating in certain of the discussions. In the main, this year's convention will be a round-table conference among the three industry branches and with the public.

Seven convention committees were named this week, as follows:

Grievances:

Lewen Pizor, Chairman, Philadelphia; Nat M. Williams, Thomasville, Ga.; J. H. Michael, Buffalo; H. W. Harvey, San Francisco; Sidney Lust, Washington, D. C.

N.R.A. Code - Trade Practices

Fred S. Meyer, Chairman, Milwaukee; R. M. Clark, Oklahoma City; R. B. Wilby, Atlanta; Edwin Silverman, Chicago; George P. Aarons, Philadelphia; Morgan A. Walsh, San Francisco.

N.R.A. Code - Labor Provisions

Legislation and Taxes:

M. A. Lightman, Chairman, Memphis; M. E. Comerford, Scranton; R. B. Wilby, Atlanta; W. H. Lollier, Los Angeles.

Resolutions:

Edward G. Levy, Chairman, New Haven; Oscar C. Lam, Rome, Ga.; Ed M. Fay, Providence; Harry Hicks, Los Angeles; M. A. Lightman, Memphis.

Public Relations and Community Affairs:

Credentials and Rules:

M. E. Comerford, Chairman, Scranton; Jas. J. McGuinness, Boston; Benjamin Pitts, Richmond; Charles E. Williams, Omaha; A. F. Baker, Kansas City, Kan.

Legislative Problems

The Grievance Committee will deal with individual difficulties of exhibitors. The NRA Code-Trade Practices Committee will handle personal problems of theatre owners in connection with the code.

The Resolutions Committee already has commenced work on general exhibitor problems with the view of preparing resolution drafts for presentation to the delegates on the floor.

The continuing wave of legislation aimed at exhibition was said by MPTOA officials to have burdened the Legislation and Taxes Committee with a mass of problems. The committee was at work studying the scores of admission tax proposals and the discriminatory and unjust taxation laws that legislators of several states and municipalities are seeking to impose on the box-office.

With the growing interest displayed by civic, public and religious groups in motion pictures, the work of the Committee on Public Relations and Community affairs was said to have become increasingly important since the MPTOA first decided, a few weeks ago, to delve into the problems in which these groups have evidenced interest. This committee will present to the convention an agenda dealing with family night programs, previews, friction between theatres and civic and community authorities, cooperative measures to be worked out with churches and schools, and welfare campaigns.

States Picking Delegates

MPTOA headquarters learned this week that state affiliates in the field were meeting to name delegates to the convention, while others were planning on attending the conference in groups.

Wisconsin exhibitors will have their own car attached to one of the convention specials. Southeastern Theatre Owners Association will send 100, and South Carolina has requested reservations for 20. Another group of southern owners will leave Memphis in a special car. Members of the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey will head westward in a large body, intent on bringing to the floor their campaign against reported increases in 1934-35 film rentals. Illinois exhibitors will go to Los Angeles with a group from Chicago, while Milwaukeeans will be on hand in large number to attempt to swing next year's convention to their city.

John Paxton, of the Plaza theatre, at El Paso, Texas, was named by a group of Texan owners as the chairman of a reception committee which will greet the two long convention train specials when they arrive at El Paso on Sunday morning, April 8th. They will stage a "Wild West" show.

AMPA To Elect Officers; Ferguson Slated as President

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, New York, will hold its annual election of officers and directors on April 19, according to an announcement this week. William R. Ferguson, MGM, has been nominated for the presidency; Monroe Greenthal, United Artists, for the vice-presidency; Paul Benjamin, National Screen Service, for treasurer, and Harry Blair, Associated Publications, secretary.

A "Naked Truth" dinner will be held at the Astor Hotel, New York, April 21, the profits on which will be divided between the Motion Picture Charity Fund and the Film Daily Relief Fund. Paul Benjamin is handling arrangements. A feature of the dinner will be a fashion show put on by R. H. Macy & Co., with 40 mannequins parading in costumes which will be replicas of those worn by film stars in recent pictures.

An M-G-M Picture... Written and Directed by Edmund Goulding

By wire from California! Put a flash Preview poster in your lobby today!

Variety says: "Irving Thalberg puts over smash hit in his comeback production. A superb picture from every angle for Norma Shearer. It is a triumph of the first water. Placing Herbert Marshall opposite as a jealous husband was inspired. Montgomery completes trio — giving no less an account of his intelligent and ingratiating qualities as the incorrigible playboy who intrudes on the wedded life of Shearer and Marshall."

Motion Picture Daily says: "Showmen are proffered appeals in 'Riptide' for matinee, supper show, or top hat crowds. Glamorous and seductive, Miss Shearer's talents portray Mary, American girl with a past, in whom emotional cross currents lash and tear. Reaches for feminine patrons of all ages."

Hollywood Reporter says: " 'Riptide,' Thalberg's first since his return, a hit. Marks Norma Shearer's return after long absence, during which lady seems to have added even more to her physical and histrionic charms. Flawless performances of Marshall and Montgomery added to the vivid and impressive moods as portrayed by Norma Shearer, with its great appeal for any type of audience, particularly the feminine contingent, 'Riptide' stands to make its producers and exhibitors a barrel of money."

ALLIED CALLS FILMS 'ABSOLUTE MONOPOLY'

Declares in Attack on Block Booking That Lobbyists Are Screaming "Government Control" Down "Herring Trail"

Allied States' attacks against socalled "compulsory" block booking were brought last week before the House interstate commerce committee when the organization, headed by Abram F. Myers, Allied's general counsel, filed a brief urging Congress to enact Representative Wright Patman's proposal to abolish the block booking practice.

The Committee had held a hearing at Washington on Monday, March 19th, on two bills introduced early in this session, one to effect federal censorship of motion pictures, the other to abolish compulsory block booking. A full report on the hearing appeared last week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. It was indicated that action on both bills appeared unlikely.

Urging Congress to realize it is dealing with an "absolute monopoly" when it considers any measures affecting the motion picture business, Allied confined its arguments to support of Mr. Patman's block booking abolition proposal. Said Allied:

The Patman bill does not prohibit an exhibitor from buying more than one picture at one time if he so desires.

Independent exhibitors would be given protection under the measure against preferential treatment now accorded to circuit theatres by distributors.

Congress should not be deflected by the "herring trail" being drawn by "motion picture lobbyists" who are screaming "Government control."

"The exhibitor is the logical point of contact with the public," and he should be a free agent to fulfill the public's desires.

"The abolition of block booking is the only true solution of the movie problem."

The "innocent victims" of recent crusades against distasteful pictures "are the independent theatre owners."

"Major producers" fear that compulsory block booking "will open the market for meritorious independent product." Abolition of block booking will put a premium on good pictures and penalize bad ones.

The ten per cent cancellation privilege of the code does not give adequate relief.

Allied's brief pointed out that under Mr. Patman's proposal only compulsory block booking would be prohibited—that is, "full line forcing"—and would not, "as has been erroneously stated, prohibit an exhibitor from buying more than one picture at a time" from the same company, if the exhibitor so desires.

Section two, which would compel distributors to give an accurate synopsis of all pictures before they have been released and reviewed, is, in the opinion of Allied, "a practical, workable substitute for the many suggestions that would require a trade showing of every picture before it is offered for sale." Allied agreed that nationwide trade showings of all pictures, under federal regulation, would unduly burden the industry and set up an impossible provision for small exhibitors located in remote places, besides holding back all classes of exhibitors in playing time.

Amendment of the Clayton Act by making its anti-discrimination provisions applicable to leases and licenses, as well as to sales, would, if made effective by the Patman proposal, "give the independent exhibitors the same protection against preferential treatment of their competitors that is accorded other business men," according to Allied, which, in this connection, alleged that distributors regularly discriminate against independents in favor of their own theatres or those of other large distributors.

The concluding provision, which would vest the administration of the act in the Federal Trade Commission, has, according to Allied, "caused the motion picture trust lobbyists to scream 'Government Control!' The Congress should not be deflected by this 'herring trail.'"

Calls Selection "Idle Chatter"

"The abolition of block booking is the only true solution of the movie problem," continued the brief. "All talk about selecting pictures and arranging programs is idle chatter so long as compulsory block booking remains. The citizens of a small town can organize their picture clubs and make their preferences and objections known to the town exhibitor, but he is helpless to meet them. To blame him is both unfair and cruel.

"Virtually all groups now considering this problem have reached the conclusion that the abolition of block booking is the first essential step." The brief referred at this point to the Federal Motion Picture Council and the Motion Picture Research Council.

Calls Independents Victims

Allied said that the "innocent victims" of recent campaigns against distasteful motion pictures "are the independent theatre owners," who, according to the brief, "cannot cooperate with the parish priests for the elimination of objectionable pictures or the arranging of suitable programs," supposedly because of the compulsory block booking practice.

Allied said that independent producers have joined with independent exhibitors in opposing block booking, explaining:

"The major producers have only one well-founded fear, and that is that the elimination of compulsory block booking will open the market for meritorious independent product and this touches the monopolists in a tender spot!"

"The Congress should not be misled by the false and malicious statements of the lobbyists that (Patman's) H. R. 8686 is a destructive proposal, or that it represents merely an outcropping of industry politics," said the brief.

Allied said that the 10 per cent cancellation clause in the motion picture industry's NRA code is not an out-and-out ten per cent cancellation privilege, but, "conceding for the purpose of the argument that the code confers a ten per cent cancellation privilege, this clearly is inadequate in the overwhelming majority of cases involving neighborhood and small town theatres."

BOOK REVIEW

THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF POSTER ART. By Duke Wellington. Cincinnati: The Signs of the Times Publishing Company. 250 pages. 8¼ x 10½.

Mr. Wellington knows well his fellow poster artists. He confounds them not at all with the esoterics of their work. The theory mentioned in the title achieves insignificant proportions in the book. And this will be good news to those whom he addresses.

He has rather attempted to give generously of his own practical experience in the manufacture of advertising display matter, and while the title further suggests poster art in general as his subject, he has really restricted it to displays of the theatre. Indeed, Mr. Wellington is directly concerned with only the motion picture theatre, in the display of which he attained his considerable celebrity as a poster artist. One gathers that he himself has sought to find out why much less than how, which is, of course, an approach to his craft that represents precisely the interest he here is serving.

A similar attitude on the part of this reviewer permits a hearty endorsement of these instructions. They are based on methods which have brought eminent results for Mr. Wellington, and they are understandably conveyed. The method is simple and direct, with the intimacy (which somehow always enhances clarity) of the second person form of address.

This method is vastly helped, of course, by a lavish use of illustration. In fact, graphic examples dominate the text, for even the latter consists to a large extent in references to, and analyses of, figures. These demonstrate step-by-step creation of poster art in its various mediums, show what it is made of, prove what can be achieved even without a great deal of imagination by one who can manipulate its clever implements. Much of this material is directly adaptable to the purposes of the theatre artist, for he is given a generous supply of symbolical patterns, layouts, decorative designs, lettering styles and so on. Plates reach the prodigious number of 158.

Beginning with a chapter on poster layout, Mr. Wellington proceeds to cover, at least in some measure, every type of display matter that has been used by the theatre—water color, velour, transparents, pastels, airbrush posters, litho cutouts, oil, applique (spelled by the discerning Mr. Wellington "aplakay"), linoleums—the composition of this material into lobby and front displays, and their adaptation to animated displays. There are also chapters on the use of color, on animal and figure drawing, on the compiling of reference material, and on costumes. Nor are these quite all.

Such a range is for the most part proper to such an effort to give the average theatre advertising artist practical guidance, but comprehensiveness may lead an author into a certain glibness. He has little space, or takes little time, to discuss principles involved, which is sometimes necessary to any real understanding of a subject. Nor does he pause to reflect on the validity or further possibilities of methods set forth.

But few working theatre artists will care to bother. They've got a job to do and will highly appreciate Mr. Wellington's understanding offer to help. If I were one of them, I'd have this book in a handy place in my workshop.—George Schutz.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

WE WERE DISCUSSING PLAYS and things, the other cocktail hour, with Mr. William deMille, motion picture director, playwright, author, Jeffersonian Democrat, fisherman and brother of Cecil Blount. He does not believe that a playwright should follow any formula, scientific, theatrical or otherwise, although others disagree. Here's deMille's reason: Back in the 80's, the editor of Harper's Weekly asked Henry deMille, father of William and Cecil, to set down on paper, for publication, a set of rules which should be followed by the student in order to achieve success as a playright. The elder deMille, a play author of no little ability some 50 years ago, refused to submit such regulations on the grounds that if he did, he feared he would have to follow them.

The chat then turned to deep sea fishing, William's pet diversion, in which he holds several enviable records. One of his most noted achievements in this connection was the landing of a sixty-pound baracuda, after a brief struggle, with a rod weighing only five-and-one-half pounds. We saw the rod; it tapers off to almost toothpick width, and has a breaking strength of only fourteen pounds. Some Izaak Waltons use that kind of a rigging to catch minnows in a two-foot pond.

On another occasion, de Mille hooked into a 500-pound sea brute in the Pacific. He struggled with it for six hours, holding on over a course 18 miles long. Just when deMille was about to land him, his line broke.

William is 56, three years older than Cecil Blount. He spells his name with a small "d"; Cecil spells his with a capital.

Good subject for the newsreels: "The Electric Wonder" clock, eleven feet high, just completed at Akron, Ohio, by Marvin Shearer, seventy-year-old cripple. The instrument tells the time of twenty-seven large cities, and sings, talks and plays a reedless pipe organ each hour. Daily at the hour of Lincoln's funeral it recites the Gettysburg address. Commemorating the assassinated President McKinley, it plays "Lead Kindly Light," and in memory of President Garfield it renders "Gates Ajar." Valued at $50,000, the clock took Mr. Shearer some ten years to make. It contains 5,000 pieces of wood and metal and has several miles of electric wiring.

The Paramount theatre in Borger, Texas, cashing in on a timely town topic, placed a want ad in the morning gazette asking 10,000 persons to pray for rain—they hadn't had a drop in three months. It began raining at noon. Dave Chatkin probably will cite that as a benefit of decentralization.

MR. HOWARD E. JAMEYSON, district manager of Fox Midwest theatres at Wichita, Kansas, is at last vindicated as a selector of stories for the screen.

For two years Mr. Jameyson attempted to convince the Fox studio people at Movietone City in California that "David Harum" as a picture with Will Rogers in the title role would be a "natural."

The "wise" men of the coast scenario department threw cold water on the idea. They said that no one who goes to picture shows had ever read the book. Of course they wouldn't know that, since 1900, it has been among the first ten most widely read novels and is one of the very few books that has grossed more than a million dollars.

However, they finally concluded that, after all, what with boss Sidney R. Kent calling for "down-to-earth" stories, and, considering the success of other Rogers vehicles of a rustic nature, there might be something to Mr. Jameyson's proposal. So, the studio began a cautious trailing of the copyright. At the same time they informed Mr. Jameyson that even if the picture rights should be available, the price probably would be prohibitive.

Eventually, and after long investigation, the Fox studio discovered that it had bought "David Harum" some time ago.

To show its appreciation to Mr. Jameyson they permitted him to stage the "world premiere" of the film in Wichita—day and date with Hollywood.

Two writers hired by a prominent Hollywood film factory were told to report to their cubbyhole offices each morning and await assignments. Regularly at 9 a. m. on the dot the writers would greet each other, deposit their outdoor apparel, take out a pinochle pack and thus wile away the time until the whistle blew. Two weeks having elapsed without either of the scribes getting an assignment, they nevertheless received their first pay checks—which disturbed one of them. Rushing into the executive's office, he exploded:

"It's an injustice, that's what it is. It's unfair. Here I've been working two weeks and I get $450, while so-and-so gets $750. I do exactly the same kind of work he does; it's not right."

Accordingly, Goldwyn's expert personality builder-upper (press agent), Mr. Lynn Farnol, had wired Moffitt to interview the "great discovery" at the Union Station in Kansas City.

"A young woman fair as moonlight on the Caspian got off the train," related Moffitt. "I addressed her in English. She replied in Russian. Then in German."

"Ask her how she likes America," suggested Mr. Farnol.

"I loff it," answered Miss Sten.

"You do?" countered Moffitt.

"I loff it," she repeated.

"Are you married?" asked the critic.

"I loff it," said Anna, a trifle wearily.

"After a press agent had sat up every night for three weeks teaching one of his foreign charges to say one of these cute little sentences," concluded Moffitt, "he thinks nothing of pulling every newspaperman between Gotham and San Pedro out of bed to hear her say it." Mr. Farnol hasn't changed a bit.

Mr. Goldwyn did a much better job on Miss Sten in the capacity of English teacher; but he took two years to do it.

HAYS NOTES GAINS IN FILM TASTE OF PUBLIC

Says Attendance Has Grown, Theatres Reopened; Declares Films "Laughed Big Bad Wolf of Depression Out of Mind"

Public opinion "will not forgive the insult to public intelligence inherent in the deliberately tawdry, suggestive or banal," and the objective of the industry must be to increase the proportion of "really fine" entertainment, Will H. Hays declared this week in his annual report as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Emphasized in Mr. Hays' report to the annual meeting were these developments:

Attendance increased materially over 1932.

With social and educational leadership cooperating, 72 pictures were indorsed last year by previewing groups as suitable for children, as against 51 in 1932.

Through the Advertising Advisory Council, "the advertising and publicity of our companies is not only cleaner and in better taste, but is better advertising as well.

"Historians of the future will not ignore the . . . fact that the movies literally laughed the big bad wolf of depression out of the public mind through the protagonism of 'Three Little Pigs'."

Mr. Hays attributed the improved public taste for pictures "of the better kind" in part to cooperative social and educational leadership, and cited the successful results of incorporating a study of the classics of the screen into the curricula of many high schools.

At the same time, the MPPDA executive deplored the attitude of those who have permitted purely artistic successes of the screen to "die in oblivion at the box-office."

"Public intelligence," he said, "has been underrated by producers who have been misled by the fact that even the degrading and the vicious may command paying audiences, but who have overlooked the potential support for pictures of the better kind.

"Public intelligence has been underrated by those who have so little faith in the basic honesty of the public mind that they would prohibit crime plots on the screen and presumably detective stories in fiction.

"It has been underrated by those within our own creative ranks who have been wont to rest their artistic laurels upon double meaning in dialogue and the suggestive in action.

"It has been underrated by such as argue that the character of public entertainment should be reduced to a standard that could not emotionally affect the most youthful and unstable mind.

"The screen must supply adventure, romance, laughter and the thrill of beauty to its audience."

Material gain in attendance in the past year, Mr. Hays pointed out, has helped reopen many theatres.

Of types of story source, Mr. Hays said: "It is a significant . . . that rival producers should contend, as they have done this year, for priority claims to the production of the classic works of Charles Dickens. Among the film presentations planned or projected for the coming season are Jane Austen's 'Pride and Prejudice,' Charles Dickens' 'David Copperfield,' Oliver Goldsmith's 'She Stoops to Conquer,' Thackeray's 'Vanity Fair,' Sheridan's 'School for Scandal' and 'The Rivals,' Victor Hugo's 'Les Miserables,' Charlotte Bronte's 'Jane Eyre,' Swift's 'Gulliver's Travels,' Washington Irving's 'Rip Van Winkle,' Kipling's 'Kim,' Bulwer Lytton's 'The Last Days of Pompeii.' Similarly, plans are announced for the production of historical romances based on the lives of Marie Antoinette, Pasteur, Joan of Arc, Napoleon, Benvenuto Cellini, and others, as well as film productions of 'Cyrano de Bergerac' and 'The Count of Monte Cristo.'"

And as examples of artistic progress he mentioned such pictures of the past year as "Little Women," "Berkeley Square," "Lady for a Day," "The World Changes," "Christopher Bean," "Gallant Lady," "The Masquerader," "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," "Tugboat Annie," "King's Vacation," "Cradle Song," "Only Yesterday," "The Invisible Man," "Morning Glory," "When Ladies Meet," "Looking Forward," "Voltaire," "The Great Jasper," "Carolina," "Dinner at Eight," "The Power and the Glory," "Three-Cornered Moon," "If I Had a Million," "Night Flight," "Gabriel Over the White House," "Peg o' My Heart," "Counsellor-at-Law," "Saturday's Millions," "Zoo in Budapest," "The Stranger's Return," "Smoky," "No Greater Glory," and "The Lost Patrol."

"No medium," he said, "has contributed more greatly than the films to the maintenance of the national morale during a period featured by revolution, riot and political turmoil in other countries."

HAYS REELECTED TO HEAD MPPDA

Will H. Hays was reelected president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America at the annual meeting Monday. Other officers reelected included Carl E. Milliken, secretary, and Frederick L. Herron, treasurer.

BRITONS PLEAD LOWER ADMISSION TAX AS BUDGET TIME APPROACHES

Recalls Chancellor's Promise to Consider Plight of Small Houses Playing to Industrial Workers, Hardest Hit by Levy

By BERNARD CHARMAN

Numerous matters are filling the minds of British exhibitors at this time, but of them all the Entertainments Tax is the most urgent.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer makes his annual announcement of budget plans in April of each year, and the trade considers the time ripe for him to make some statement regarding this particular duty. In strict contrast to most other nations, Britain is anticipating a substantial surplus over the past year will be revealed when the Chancellor makes his statement; and with such a happy state of affairs anticipated everybody, from the mere payer of income tax upwards, has his thoughts concentrated on ways and means by which the Treasury can relieve his particular burden.

Recall Chancellor's Promise

The trade's hopes are based on a variety of factors, basic of which is that last year, when an appeal for some easement of the entertainments duty was asked, the Chancellor expressed sympathy with the request, saying that when the opportunity arrived he would give material consideration to it. All he did, however, was to relieve the brewers of duty on that universal comforter, beer, to the tune of fourteen millions sterling per annum, leaving the amusement individual just where he started.

Now the kinemas are not making any preposterous demand (in strict equity a good case could be argued for complete abolition of a levy imposed originally as a "wartime measure" purely and simply), but only ask for remission of the tax on admissions of sixpence (12c.) and under.

This, it is calculated, would cost the Treasury a mere £1,600,000.

If, in a bad year, the beer tax can be cut by as much as £14,000,000, it is only reasonable to hope that the entertainment purveyor's modest request may be met now that times promise to be distinctly better.

A third reason for the trade's optimism is the greater share of support exhibitors are receiving from members of Parliament. So sure is the belief in certain quarters, indeed, that leading trade personalities have been heard to declare publicly their faith in some measure of relief in the next budget.

Workers' Theatres Hardest Hit

The reason for the trade's insistence on relief for the cheapest seats is that it is the theatres of modest proportions, which play to workers in the depressed industrial areas, which are being most hard hit by the tax. Until the emergency budget which followed the national crisis in the fall of 1931 these seats had been free of duty.

Appalling figures, revealing how halls have been not only crippled but in many cases strangled by the burden of the entertainments duty, have been quoted right and left to substantiate the trade's case. One forceful argument is the fact that, since the emergency budget was put into operation, no less than 400 theatres have gone dark.

Again, trustworthy calculations have been made to show that the tax in many instances is the equivalent of a duty of more than 16 per cent on turnover. And beyond this, each hall has still to pay income tax, to say nothing of varying degrees of local taxation.

One line of argument suggests that by relieving the entertainments duty the Treasury would be assured of a higher yield from income tax, according as the relief stimulated attendances and the financial status of the cinemas.

Legitimate Theatres' Demand

Against the agitation of the motion picture business, which calls for reduction of the tax on cheap admissions irrespective of whether they apply to exhibitors or other amusement leaders, a strong movement has been promoted by the legitimate theatre business, which demand that forms of entertainment in which the "human element" predominates should be given precedence over mechanical entertainments — meaning the talking pictures.

This "dog in the manger" attitude is inspired by the fear that discrimination in favor of the talkers may benefit powerful foreign interests (meaning Hollywood), while British workers starve. Boloney!

This movement is said to have behind it strong support in the House of Parliament, chiefly because certain important theatrical interests have friends in the assembly of government. But the trade believes the Chancellor is too fairminded to prefer one section of the entertainment industry over another.

At bottom the tax is a difficult one to justify (no other industry is called upon to bear any equivalent imposition) and, on that assumption, any adjustment in its incidence must be made to apply over the whole wide field of amusement.

LITERARY MAE WEST CAPTURES LONDON

The crowning event of the personal publicity which has swept Mae West into prominence in London as one of the most talked of celebrities of the day, will be the publication of the star's latest literary works, "She Done Him Wrong" and "The Constant Sinner," just prior to the general release of "I'm No Angel," a culminating point of a terrific campaign.

Radio bands are exploiting the Mae West numbers which are all the rage of the West-end cabaret shows, while vaudeville headliners are all plugging the "come up and see me" gag.

Nearly 100 London dress shops and modistes are pushing special Mae West fashions.

Finally, Mae is now installed among the great figures of history at Madame Tussaud's famous wax-work exhibition, placed in proud distinction with Queen Elizabeth on one hand and King Henry VIII on the other. To the English mind this is the pinnacle of fame.—B. C.

Hardwicke in "Nell Gwyn"

Herbert Wilcox, director of productions to British and Dominions, reveals that Cedric Hardwicke is to play Charles II in his forthcoming production of "Nell Gwyn," remembered as the famous mistress of King Charles. Hardwicke, who received a knighthood in the new Year's Honors List and is now playing in the stage version of "Christopher Bean," has the reputation of being this country's most outstanding character actor, and his selection for the role is regarded as one of the finest pieces of casting effected in British pictures in a long while.

Hardwicke, it may be remembered, was a millionaire in "Rome Express" and a General in "Orders Is Orders."

B. & D. incidentally have shelved their plan to re-make "Somehow Good," with Norma Talmadge and Thomas Meighan. The stars have returned to America.

In its first week at the Regal, London, "Little Women" did its best to live up to the tremendous reputation it established with its great records at the R.K.O. Music Hall, clocking up 48,000 attendances during its initial seven days.

This figure beats everything the theatre has yet done, with the exception of one week of "The Singing Fool," playing when the novelty appeal of the talkies was at its peak.

The second week almost exactly duplicated the first.

"Catherine the Great" opened to £1,200 at its premiere at the Leicester Square theatre, beating the record opening day with "Henry VIII" by the substantial sum of £60.

Royalty and other notabilities attended the premiere in force, led by the Prince of Wales, the Queen of Spain and the King of Greece, the ambassadors and ministers representing 17 countries. The Prince of Wales came late and had to take a seat in the tenth row of the stalls!

AMERICANS LOSING ITALY QUOTA FIGHT

Costs Totaling $1,120,000 to U. S. Companies in Dubbing and New Tax Are Estimated; Approved Despite Protests

by THOMAS B. MORGAN
United Press Staff Correspondent, Rome

Protests made by the representatives of the big American producers of motion pictures as well as by an agent of the Hays organization against the new Italian film quota law do not seem to have yielded much result. The law has been approved by the Chamber and shortly will be effective.

Objections to the new law from the point of view of foreign and especially American motion picture producers are these: First, it imposes the obligation that all foreign films must be dubbed in Italy; second, it imposes a tax of 25,000 lire (roughly $2,000) on each dubbed picture; third, it provides for premiums in money, from the proceeds of the tax on dubbed films, for the producers of Italian films.

Dubbing Payment in Instalments

The dubbing tax must be paid by the agent of the producer of the original picture. It appears now certain that it will be possible to pay it in six or eight instalments.

The new law also grants the producer of each film made in Italy the right to dub four foreign films free of tax, and finally it increases the quota of Italian pictures, which must be shown, to one Italian for every three foreign.

Representatives of the American producers have urged here against the decree that the dubbing of foreign pictures has brought and will bring a lot of work to Italians as film directors, actors, sound experts, translators and all the other posts connected with dubbing and post-synchronizing.

There are 300 foreign films needed in Italy every year at present. The cost of dubbing runs around lire 50,000 so that the total cost of dubbing 300 foreign films would be about 15,000,000 lire, of which 60 per cent or 9,000,000 would be paid by American companies.

$1,120,000 Cost to Americans

Adding the cost of dubbing, nine million lire, to the total of the new tax of lire 5,000,000, we have a total of 14,000,000 lire (about $1,120,000), which American companies will have to spend in Italy to carry on their business.

Of course, the probable answer will lie in the direction of reduced American film exports to Italy. Only the big first-rate films, for which high rentals can be charged, will be exported. The reduction of film imports here generally considered likely will be from 25 to 40 per cent.

Another suggestion for making the situation easier for foreign producers faced with this tax is for them to do some producing here of Italian pictures. For these they will find a small but possibly remunerative market in the country, while they will gain the tax exemption from dubbing allowed to those producing so many films, locally.

The Italian motion picture has made some progress during the last few years, but producers have a lot to learn.

The newly reorganized Cines Company, at the head of which has been put the able business man, Paolo Giordano, formerly director of the Dramatic Authors' Society, ought to revive the fortunes of this company. It is understood that the policy of the reorganized company will be "few but big pictures," just the opposite of the custom that has ruled hitherto.

Italy turns out about 50 films a year and the gross takings from home-made pictures last year in Italy was lire 24,660,000. The figures of films made and cash box office takings are both on the upgrade and the new cinema law ought to give them both a useful push-along.

Reorganization Plans for St. Louis Theatres Completed

Thomas N. Dysart, chairman of the first mortgage bondholders committee of the Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central, St. Louis, has announced the plans for reorganization of the three theatres, which is expected to be approved by the United States district court, and which would take the properties out of receivership. Under the plan, the present bondholders would become the owners of the Ambassador and Missouri theatre buildings, and the leasehold on the Grand Central, through an exchange of their bonds for bonds and common stock in two Missouri corporations to be organized to acquire title to the properties.

Spyros, Charles and George Skouras, and C. M. Turley, who guaranteed payment of some of the first mortgage bonds, will also guarantee the principal of the new bonds in an amount equal to the share of the depositing first mortgage bondholders in the deficiency which will result from the sale of the mortgaged properties. The protective committee also proposes to lease the three theatres for a period of ten years. Stage shows probably will be used at the Ambassador and Missouri, while the Grand Central probably will be reopened with a straight picture policy.

Metzger Gets Sendoff

Lou Metzger, operator of the New Spreckels theatre at San Diego, Cal., was "entertained" at the Tavern in New York late last week before sailing for Europe. Attending were Ned Depinet, Grad Sears, Phil Reisman, Cresson Smith, Fred McConnell, Jack Connolly, Terry Ramsaye and Red Kann.

Schenck Due to Be Named Poli Circuit Head Shortly

A meeting, scheduled to take place within a few days, is expected to settle the election of Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, as president of the Poli circuit of New England, and the date and details of the acquisition of the circuit for operation by Loew's. Mr. Schenck recently declared Loew's already has control of the circuit.

Structure of KAO Revised

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, a subsidiary of RKO in which M. J. Meehan, stock broker, is reputed to hold the majority interest, last week shifted its theatre divisions in a plan which provides that its divisional managers are to confine themselves to KAO theatres only, thereby giving the circuit a greater entity and more of individualized operation than heretofore.

RKO division managers who have been handling KAO-controlled houses as well as Proctor theatres, will drop the Proctor houses, which will remain a part of the RKO structure, and retain through a number of new allocations already set up, only houses owned or controlled by KAO directly or through its subsidiaries.

The KAO holdings break down as follows with official designations as they now appear in the revised chart of the RKO theatre department:

New York Senior Metropolitan Division, C. B. McDonald, division manager: Albee, Kenmore, Madison, Prospect in Brooklyn; Keith's, in Flushing; Chester, Coliseum, Colonial, Fordham, Hamilton, Jefferson, Palace, 81st St. and 86th St., in New York; Keith's in Richmond Hill and Keith's in White Plains.

New York Junior Metropolitan Division, L. Goldberg, division manager: Bushwick, Dyker, Greenpoint, Orpheum, Shore Road and Tilyou in Brooklyn; Central in Cedarhurst; Columbia and Strand in Far Rockaway; Empire, Franklin, Regent and Royal in New York; Park in Rockaway Park.

Great Lakes Division, Nat Holt, division manager (no changes)—Palace and 105th St. in Cleveland; Majestic and Palace in Columbus; and Uptown in Highland Park.

Massachusetts Division, Charles W. Koerner, division manager: Bijou, RKO Boston and RKO Keith's in Boston; Keith's in Lowell.

Detroit Pool, David Idzal, director: Downtown and Fox.

New Jersey-Washington Division, James M. Brennan, division manager: Rivoli and State in New Brunswick; Broad, Capitol, Lincoln, Palace and Trent in Trenton; Keith's in Washington.

Rochester District, J. Golden, city manager: Palace and Temple, Rochester.

Syracuse District, W. J. Tubbert, city manager: Keith's and Strand, Syracuse.

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

No. 8—WEST VIRGINIA

WAGES FOR CERTAIN THEATRE EMPLOYEES

QUESTION—Can you furnish me with the wages that should be paid to ticket seller and ticket taker, both of whom are girls, and also what wages per hour the operator and janitor should get.

ANSWER—The ticket seller, ticket taker and janitor shall each receive as their minimum weekly wages not less than a 20 per cent increase over the wage which was being paid to them as of August 1, 1933, provided, however, that this 20 per cent increase over such August 1, 1933, wages does not require for any of these employees a wage in excess of 25 cents per hour or $10 per week for a 40-hour week. This is the scale fixed in the code for such employees working in towns having a population of less than 15,000 inhabitants. Higher wages are provided for the same classes of employees working in larger places.

Regarding the wages for the projectionist, the code says that the working hours and wages that prevailed on August 23, 1933, shall prevail, but that working hours shall not exceed 40 weekly, regardless, and in case of a disagreement over what wages and hour schedules prevailed as of August 23, 1933, then the matter shall be referred to arbitration.

NON-THEATRICAL COMPETITION

QUESTION—I have been approached by the authorities of a Negro public school to present in their school auditorium a series, on each Friday, of motion picture attractions composed of all Negro casts. The entire enterprise would be sponsored by the foundation.

There are no theatres in this town catering strictly to Negroes. Some of them admit them to restricted sections and others bar them entirely. There are upwards of 25,000 Negroes in this town and, of course, such shows presented in the manner above described, would cater to the better element when sponsored by its leaders.

Please advise me if such a proposition could be considered under the code, also an interpretation of my rights and privileges in the matter.

ANSWER—There is a clause in the motion picture code which prohibits a distributor from renting motion pictures to a non-theatrical account, but only when it has been proven that such a non-theatrical is operating directly in competition with a regular motion picture theatre, and then only after the Local Grievance Board in that territory has held a hearing and has ruled that such non-theatrical is operating as unfair competition to a regular theatre.

RETROACTIVITY OF 10% CANCELLATION PRIVILEGE

QUESTION—I read that the 10 per cent cancellation privilege clause provided in the motion picture code will be retroactive to apply to film contracts existing before December 7 last year (1933). Does your interpretation coincide with this?

ANSWER—The 10 per cent cancellation privilege clause in the motion picture code does not specifically say that it shall be retroactive as regards pictures played after the effective date of the code, December 7, but which pictures were contracted for before December 7. However, Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt, of the NRA amusement code division, issued an interpretation of the clause in which he said that the privilege was retroactive on pictures played after December 7, but which pictures were contracted for before December 7. The NRA has since stated that it will uphold decisions of any of the Division Administrators, such as Mr. Rosenblatt.

Meanwhile, the large distributors have each, separately, protested Mr. Rosenblatt's decision. It is their opinion that the privilege affects only pictures which have been contracted for after December 7. The matter rests there, although, quite unofficially, it has been intimated in distribution circles that the distributors will fight Mr. Rosenblatt's ruling, even bringing the matter to the courts, if necessary.

No. 11—MINNESOTA

GIVEAWAYS, FREE TICKETS, WHEN NO COMPETITION

ANSWER—We have two mediums of advertising, one each used by our two theatres. (These are cooperative advertising tabloids, arranged in tieups with merchants and are intended for shoppers, housewives and the like. On each tabloid are printed names of about 20 residents, probably selected from the phone book and similar lists.)

There are no other theatres in this town, and only one theatre within 20 miles, and no names of residents are ever placed in these mediums from that one town 20 miles away which has that theatre.

Names appearing in medium number one are given actual tickets to number one theatre, which divides 20 tickets among eight grocers and markets. The people getting the free tickets do not have to purchase anything, they just call at the store where the name appears and are given a ticket to the theatre.

The same thing applies to medium number two for number two theatre, except this theatre gives service passes on which there is a 10-cent service charge.

Are these mediums in violation of the code?

ANSWER—If a theatre is not in actual competition with another theatre, and is so thoroughly isolated that free tickets or service passes can not be construed to be unfair to a competing exhibitor, then the theatre is permitted to continue the practice of awarding such free tickets or service passes. The code clause which ordinarily outlaws such practices is intended to stop such practices only when they exist in probable or possible competition with another theatre and when such competition is considered to be an unfair trade practice. Obviously the practices are not unfair, if no other exhibitor is affected thereby.

King Cancels Lesser Deal

John King, formerly connected with Bennet-King Productions, and now owner of the dog, Kazan, has cancelled his distribution contract on the dog series with Sol Lesser and Principal Pictures. Mr. King will distribute his product through state rights while negotiating a new release.

Motion Picture Herald is receiving many letters from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. All communications immediately are answered directly. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service for all readers. They contain many explanatory points pertinent to the business as its conduct is prescribed by the Code.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

Kansas—Missouri Group Sets Plans

An educational campaign to acquaint the public with the community importance of the theatre is planned by the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association as part of an elaborate program of activity to be launched under the leadership of A. F. Baker, president, and R. R. Biechele, newly elected secretary-treasurer.

The directors, meeting in Kansas City, approved the plans and decided to initiate a membership drive to be launched at a convention of exhibitors in Kansas City where vital industry problems will be discussed. Every exhibitor in the territory not now a member will be invited to join. A questionnaire pertaining to code administration and designed to indicate to the local grievance and clearance boards the sentiment of exhibitors will be sent out.

A statement by the directors said that the association's program will purpose to "sell the organization to the exhibitors and the exhibitors to the public." Members will be given a sticker to affix to the box-office window stating that the owner or manager is affiliated with the KMTA, and through various projects the association will seek to enhance the exhibitors' prestige.

Directly in charge of the public relations work will be the directors in their various districts, including S. E. Wilhoit, Springfield, Mo.; C. C. McVey, Herington, Kan.; Sam Blair, Belleville, Kan.; John C. Stapel, Rockport, Mo.; E. B. Danielson, Russell, Kan.; Tom Edwards, Eldon, Mo.; Mr. Baker and Mr. Biechele. The latter will head public relations activities.

Wild Cargo

(Radio - Frank Buck)

Jungle Expedition

Frank Buck's "Wild Cargo" is an able successor to the earlier effort entitled "Bring 'em Back Alive." This latest expeditionary film is a first-rate circus attraction, brimming over with a full cargo of denizens of the Indian wilds and jungles and accounts of their capture. In it Buck and his native assistants perform many exciting exploits. Of especial interest are the detailed revelations of the technic and methods employed by Buck in bringing them back alive.

The production is the result of an expedition to the Malayan jungle, in the course of which much of the wild life of the country is encountered, tracked down and somehow made prisoners for subsequent exhibition in various zoos throughout the country. No possible scientific aims of the expedition have been allowed to transgress on the province of the theatre. In fact, the whole adventure has been carefully and effectively gauged in such a manner as to present a show.

A great asset of the production are its exploitation possibilities. The picture may be and should be circused vigorously, and in doing this the theatreman can feel well assured that he is not over-selling but is in fact insuring his patrons enjoyment as well as lubricating the turnstile.

An excellent photographic job has been done by Nicholas Cavaliere and Leroy G. Phelps. The narrative accompanying the picture is recited by Frank Buck, who is very much in evidence throughout. He well fills the eye as a hunter in the jungle and in many sequences appears to brush close to real danger. The narrative is by Courtney Ryley Cooper.—M. Q.

Produced by Frank Buck and the Van Beuren Company. Distributed by RKO Radio. Directed by Armand Denis. Based on the book "Wild Cargo" by Frank Buck and Edward S. Anthony. Photographed by Nicholas Cavaliere and Leroy G. Phelps. Editorial supervisor, Sam B. Jacobson. Dialogue and narrative by Courtney Ryley Cooper. Release date, April 6, 1934. Running time, 96 minutes.

You're Telling Me

(Paramount)

Comedy

Hokum comedy is the outstanding entertainment and showmanship feature of this picture. W. C. Fields comes up with a lot of old tried and true gags and quite a batch of new laugh-getters. Elemental in aspect, the smile and belly-laugh comedy is abetted by a ludicrous drama twist and an equally farcical cinderella Princess angle, both of which serve as background for the Fields tomfoolery. Woven into this hodgepodge is a juvenile poor girl-rich boy romance as the motivating medium. Wholesome and ridiculous in its amusement creation, it's a whole family type picture in caliber; and in it is a wealth of naturally suggested and easily adaptable showmanship that yells for one of those old-fashioned "funnier-the-better" introductions.

Bisbee, a reverse small town Babbitt, is given to Rube Goldberg inventing as well as liberal libations in the juice of spirits frumenti. Unmindful of continual domestic henpecking, he finally is driven to do something when the snooty Mrs. Murchinson thumbs down the proposed marriage between her Bob and Sam's little Pauline. Comedy values already well established, Sam takes his puncture-proof tire to town for a demonstration, but makes the mistake of shooting the wrong tires and makes his departure just a couple of hops ahead of an irate mob.

Aboard a homebound train, scared out of committing suicide, he unknowingly strikes up acquaintance with the Princess. Unloading his tale of woe to Marie, he wins her sympathy, only to have a couple of nosy spinsters carry the tale back home that he's cutting up with a foreign vamp. Riding past his station, he's both proscribed and kidded as he limps home. Then, so we'll have a story, the Princess decides she'll visit the Bisbee manor. The coming, highly publicized, has Mrs. Murchinson and all her ilk out to do the honors, only to have the Princess demand that she be taken to her friend Sam's home. The cavalcade catches up with Sam, who is driving an ostrich home as a peace offering. Sam, wondering what it's all about, presides over a dinner reception with all the Fields technique, that results in Mrs. Murchinson announcing the engagement of Bob and Pauline.

The finale is the screen version of Fields' famous golf green act which he made familiar on the vaudeville stage. Though slow at times, due to repetition, it swept the preview audience into laughter.

In every way "You're Telling Me" is an all-laugh show, and it should be sold on that premise. Many things lend themselves readily to accentuating the comedy atmosphere. Gagging the title is one; exploitation built around the nutty inventions can be made an attention exciter. Similarly they can be built into legitimate tieups with auto tire dealers along the puncture-proof idea.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Riptide

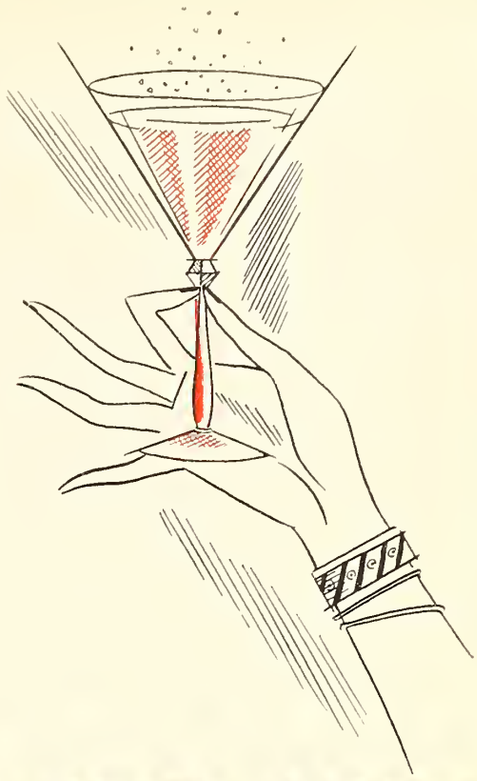
(MGM-Thalberg)

Dramatic Romance

Class for the intelligentsia, smartness for sophisticates, a sparkling, tastefully conceived, acted and presented picture for the modernes; all-around interesting entertainment for the regular rank and file—that is "Riptide."

It's dramatic romance, intimate, real and understandably human; never overstepping the line of discerning propriety. Fine dialogue carrying the story trend, absence of vivid action is hardly noticed as gripping illusion, precipitating a series of situations momentarily threatening to explode, endows the show with a verve that never misses its punch.

The picture always focuses audience sympathy equally on the three personalities swept into its triangle. It is a picture that should plumb the depths of the feminine heart, and by the same token appeal strongly to men. Naturally, in dealing with a familiar worldly topic, it is far too mature for children.



Starting as a lark, gay Mary, a Park Avenueite, and the staid English nobleman, Lord Rexford, marry. For several years she is deliriously happy with her husband and child. Then, on the Riviera she meets Tommie, flame of the gay days. Under the spell of the Mediterranean moon and breezes, Mary is the innocent victim of a romantic escapade that makes the headlines and scandal sheets. None of Mary's explanations will soothe Rexford, nor can Tommie heal the breach. Cold indifference drives Mary, who fights against it, closer to Tommie. Simultaneously, as the lovers surrender to their ardor, Rexford learns from his secretary that Mary had been telling the truth. Calling for her to come to him in Cannes, Rexford wants to wipe the slate clean. But it's now Mary's inning. Insisting that divorce be consummated, husband and wife, surrounded by solicitors, meet in Rexford's drawing room. Mary surrenders all rights to her child, who then rushes in to effect a reconciliation.

Those who really sell shows have lots to sell in "Riptide." It's the first Shearer picture since "Smiling Thru." It's presented in the atmosphere associated with Thalberg productions and Norma Shearer appearances—glamorous locales, beautiful gowns, elaborate production settings. Give it the status of an event, not just another motion picture, with an introductory campaign that accentuates all the picture's allure and reflects its dignity.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Manhattan Love Song

(Monogram)

Comedy Drama

Mixing topical comedy with light drama and weaving in three romantic love stories, this picture holds the Monogram entertainment pace. Title significance to the contrary, "Manhattan Love Song" is not a musical, excepting the two or three occasions where Dixie Lee (Mrs. Bing Crosby) sings the theme song. Ticket selling showmanship is equally divided between cast and story values, both suggesting salesmanship ideas that readily can be adapted. Wholesome comedy developed both by dialogue and situations is the outstanding feature. Seconding this element are the three love interest twists that see a debutante married to a chauffeur; the elopement of a pair of blue bloods, and a mother's boy, son of the wide open spaces, spliced to a parlor maid masquerading as one of the 400.

Following a standard formula, the show succeeds in incorporating many different brands of entertainment.

Opening with a sequence that cleverly conceals its real character, the show is a humorous picturization of the effects of the depression. Fortune swept away, the pampered socialites Jerry and Carol find it necessary to permit their unpaid chauffeur, Williams, and maid, Annette, to live in their apartment in lieu of wages due. Then to eat they must work. Williams, now the man of the house, uses the family Rolls Royce as a sightseeing car, having for his passengers Pancake Annie and her son Phineas, from whom comes the eating money. Anxious to meet some real blue-bloods, Williams fixes it so that the visiting westerners may meet Carol and Jerry. But the maid Annette goes ritzy and Phineas falls in a big way. Naturally there's conflict between Williams and Jerry. She, resentful of being an object of his charity, uses her junior league stage training to get a job in a hot-cha burlesque theatre, as Carol, sick of it all, elopes with Wetherby into security. Jerry pinched in a raid, is bailed out by Williams, and as Pancake Annie with her newly acquired daughter-in-law comes around to say goodby, Jerry discovers that Williams is a regular fellow and that she's in love with him, and inasmuch as Annie has made him a swell offer they might as well get married and go west.

The advance campaign should reflect the light atmosphere of the show and bid for the support of the regular run of the mill fan to the exclusion of the super-critical.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

From the novel by Cornell Woolrich. Songs by Bernie Grossman, Edward Ward and David Silverstein. Photographed by Robert Planck. Edited by Carl Pierson. Recorded by John A. Hold That Girl!

(Fox)

Comedy-Drama

The lively and romantic young team of James Dunn and Claire Trevor, Miss Trevor having some time ago taken the place of Sally Eilers, is here again in the expected type of picture and the expected type of performances, which fact is an asset.

It is lively, entertaining comedy drama, though not outstanding. There is plenty of comedy, considerable romance, handled in the typical Dunn style, a touch of the racketeer and gangster, all scrambled in the yarn of the quick thinking girl reporter and the young police detective, who declares rather too constantly that he will give the matter "my poisonal attention."

Our tough city editor is on the job, in the person of Robert McWade, as Miss Trevor's boss, to stimulate the newspaper atmosphere in the accepted motion picture style. The Dunn-Trevor combination is the best bet for the marquee, the other names being no more than slightly familiar to the regular run of patronage. Where previous Dunn pictures, in teaming, have been played, the exhibitor, with the information of the story's content, should quite thoroughly understand how this picture may be sold by him to best advantage.

Dunn's first encounter with the girl reporter comes when she seeks assistance on the street for a woman who is ill, and the comedy immediately is launched. The next meeting is active, when Dunn saves her from the apartment of a maniac with whom she is locked when she is assigned to investigate an unusual postcard sent to her paper. They begin the squabbling which is apparently part of every Dunn romance, she resenting his tone and attitude and he not understanding her adverse reaction.

Miss Trevor becomes involved with Alan Edwards, gang leader, but not learning until later his gang connections. Dunn is assigned to a major jewel robbery, for which the police are on the spot. Miss Trevor trails Dunn, much to his annoyance, in order to get a story on the robbery. She is accidentally witness to a gang killing, is held by the kidnapers at their suburban road house hangout, and there learns of Edwards' position as gang leader. It is decided to put her on the spot by permitting her to drive away in a small car, the gang following to drive her off the road, via a machine gun. Edwards follows in his own car, and the three cars are in a tearing, roaring race down the road, wherein Edwards saves the girl by deliberately crashing his car into that of the gangsters. Dunn, who had been in hot pursuit, comes up in time to view the wreckage. Miss Trevor gets the story for her paper, and Dunn, who cleared up the robbery case, gets a promotion. Incidentally, and finally, he also manages to acquire a wife in the person of Miss Trevor.

Straight entertainment is the selling line to take, with concentration on the Dunn-Trevor combination, the romance of the two, and making much of the comedy, as well.—Aaronson, New York.

Jimmy the Gent

(Warner)

Comedy-Drama

The bombastic, top-speed kind of comedy which is expected of a film in which James Cagney has the leading role is all here, in "Jimmy the Gent," which has the additional new element of turning the camera on a new kind of "racket," the uncovering of missing "heirs" to the estates of wealthy persons who have been so careless as to pass from this planet without the formality of making out wills. The "heirs" are dug up, by hook or crook, and sometimes they are really relatives.

Jimmy is that kind of agent, and he puts all the pep, speed and lively comedy into the role that the audience is going to expect, if the picture is sold to them properly. The exhibitor may pile it on as thickly as he cares to, putting all his emphasis on Cagney and Comedy.

Cagney could probably stand on the marquee pretty well by himself, but in effective support there are Bette Davis, Allen Jenkins, Alice White and Arthur Hohl, all reasonably good names. The title is one of those that occasionally give the exhibitor a real opportunity for a good tieup between leading player and title. "Jimmy the Gent" is a title made for Cagney, with its comedy, romance and bit of drama, and should bring results with proper lobby pictures of Cagney, as a "gent."

Cagney operates his racket in his own peculiar style, which is chiefly knock-down-and-drag out, and highly illiterate, as only Cagney can be properly and amusingly illiterate. His assistant, the lad on whom Cagney takes it out whenever he is disturbed in any particular, is Jenkins, who is a willing and wholly entertaining foil for Cagney's liveliness. Miss Davis, it is understood, has left Cagney's employ because she did not approve wholly of his methods. She is employed by Cagney's most vigorous competitor, Allan Dinehart, whose office, in contrast to Cagney's, is the essence of good taste, with tea served each afternoon, male secretaries in frock coats, and the like.

Cagney, incidentally, is still in love with Miss Davis, and she, strangely enough, with him. When a particularly strategic piece of shady work is developing Cagney goes to visit Miss Davis, after she has come personally to tell him what she thinks of him and his methods. Cagney is terrifically impressed with the swank of Dinehart's office, and decides to follow the example. The result is highly entertaining, and to show his gratitude, Cagney gives Dinehart a hot tip on a good lead with plenty of money in the offing. But ready money is ready money, and Cagney, with the aid of Hohl, heir and escaped convict, and two girls, one of them a witness to the crime, the other Jenkins' girl friend, he carefully and elaborately frames Dinehart, takes the money himself, after effecting Hohl's acquittal, and then shows up Dinehart, who had proposed marriage to Miss Davis, for the crook and the bounder he is. Miss Davis is convinced, and Cagney gets her as well.

Comedy and Cagney, and a new racket, with Jimmy trying to be a gentleman, is the selling angle.—Aaronson, New York.

Drama

A drama of the hospital, with its petty hates and jealousies, its romances, and the suspense and drama in its daily routine, are dramatically and effectively told in this film, the title of which is hardly indicative of the kind of picture it is. The romantic angle actually predominates, which would indicate this as a woman's picture, yet the active drama of the place, and the tense scenes in the operating room, make it a film which has punch for men as well. Both should be sold actively.

Heading the cast is Ralph Bellamy, a good box office name, while in support and also known are Fay Wray, Walter Connolly, Mary Carlisle and Walter Byron. J. Farrell MacDonald, in a minor bit, contributes a touch of amusing comedy, as does Mary Foy as a typical spinster ward patient. For the rest it is almost straight drama.

Despite the fact that the story is set in its entirety within the hospital, there is no drag in the pace of the film, no lack of active motion. It moves rapidly and forcefully to its conclusion, carrying audience interest and attention with it as it moves. The complications are worked out in logical fashion, the film as a whole emerging as good entertainment, which is, however, a little too strong for juvenile consumption. The copy is about the efficient and calm supervisor of nurses, an expert in hospital routine but a mere child in romantic matters. She learns her lesson in the new field from a probationary nurse, who knows as much about romance as she knows little about nursing. She learns by bitter experience, but at the same times discovers where she can find the happy solution.

Connolly is chief surgeon, Bellamy is his brilliant young assistant and pupil. Miss Wray is the supervisor, Miss Carlisle the probationer, while Byron is the woman-chasing doctor, with whom Miss Wray believes herself in love. The story pushes its way into one ward of the hospital, in which the dramatic and comic story elements are found. Then comes the developing drama. A girl patient, No. 5, is in need of a delicate brain operation. Connolly plans a superficial operation, which will not be dangerous but, in Bellamy's opinion, will not afford any sort of cure. He urges that he be allowed to operate, Connolly refuses, and Bellamy determines to resign.

Meanwhile Byron is flirting with the young blonde probationer, two-timing Miss Wray, who in turn ignores Bellamy's honest advances. There is an enormous amount of suspense and tense drama in the operating scene, during which Connolly, old and tired, falters, and Bellamy, taking over, performs his own operation successfully. An emergency arises later when a patient swallows iodine through the carelessness of Miss Carlisle. Byron on duty, is nowhere to be found, and Bellamy saves the patient. Bellamy finds Byron and Miss Carlisle on the roof together, and though Bellamy tries to shield Byron, Miss Carlisle tells Miss Wray the story, and warns her against Byron, giving her a lesson in men and romance. Connolly resigns in favor of Bellamy, Byron is on the way out, of his job and his romance, and Miss Wray and Bellamy are all set for the happy ending.

It is good entertainment, and will stand selling.—AARONSON, New York.

Western

Maynard rides and Tarzan rears, and their vigorous activity, pounding along a story trail that has some grass left on it, helps produce a picture with western values.

Maynard, after his father has been shot in the back, comes back to town at the call of Cecilia Parker, part owner of the ranch, to find himself being impersonated by Fred McKaye, at the instigation of Hooper Atchley. The pass on the Maynard ranch, as a cattle outlet, is the big objective of Atchley, and he's not averse to playing Walter Miller and Bill Dyer, brothers, against the real Ken Maynard with the hope they'll kill off one another. In fact, when the big showdown comes, Atchley sends his sharpshooter, Francis Ford, up among the rocks to pick off the three of them. He misses Maynard but does kill Miller, whereupon Maynard pursues Ford. The sheriff, Jack Richardson, has been sent to arrest Maynard, but when Ken is lassoed, a badge drops to the ground. It identifies him with the Rangers. So the sheriff joins the pursuit. Ford confesses and names Atchley as the slayer of Maynard's father. Miss Parker's love has been blowing hot and cold, according to misgivings, then explanations of the conduct of Maynard, who at the start has given Atchley to understand he favors selling the ranch—but only until he has learned just what the plot is. But now it's all cleared.

It's real rocky country that's the setting for this western, and while the big battle of rifles at the pass threatens but doesn't eventuate, there's something of punch value for the exhibitor, nevertheless.—ROVELSTAD, New York.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Directed by Alan James. Story, continuity and screen play by Robert Quigley. Photographed by Ted McCord. Art director, Nate Gatzert. Release date, December 11, 1933. Running time, 65 minutes.

Mystery Liner

(Monogram)

Mystery

An ocean liner, guided on its course only by radio directions from a laboratory on shore, and the complications which result from the efforts of unscrupulous interests to obtain possession of the photo-electric cell which makes all this possible, is the pivot on which this entertaining mystery film is spun. That the film is an adaptation of one of the mystery stories of the late prolific Edgar Wallace, "The Ghost of John Holling," is worth noting by the exhibitor.

Interest is well maintained, the suspense is good, and the action moves rapidly, with conflicting elements of what appears at first to be a shady romance and triangular jealousy complicating the situation effectively. The comedy designed to relieve the drama is not worthy of particular emphasis. There is a modern day interest in radio-controlled ships at sea, which may be played on in selling the picture.

The cast offers but little opportunity from the standpoint of selling, the most familiar name being that of Noah Beery. Astrid Allyn, Gustav von Seyffertitz and Edwin Maxwell are the only other names which may mean something to the patrons. Obviously, then, selling will have to be based on story and origin rather than names.

Beery, the Captain Holling of the liner, is carried off his ship to a sanitarium, strongly objecting to the test of the radio control of his ship planned by the owners. The new captain is informed that the all-important tube will be affixed the morning the ship is to sail, and that at a certain moment at sea the television writing apparatus will inform him when he is to relinquish control of the ship to the laboratory ashore.

During the night prior to sailing, the inventor is attacked, and lies near death in the laboratory as the tube, which had been hidden from the attackers, is inserted in the locked vault-room where the ship's corresponding receiving apparatus is housed. No one on board has the combination to the lock of the room. Aboard are Zeffie Tilbury, as the elderly woman, who with her grandson offers the comedy relief; von Seyffertitz, immediately assumed to be in league with the foreign power attempting to get possession of the tube; Maxwell, detective representative of the scientist. The captain and mate both are in love with the ship's nurse, Miss Allyn, also circumstantially involved. The captain dies by the same means employed in striking down the scientist. In a fast and furious sequence or two, some one gets into the control room, substituting a different tube, and leaves the ship unmanned either by its own power or the laboratory ashore. Then come the revelations, which are certain to be unexpected.

The romance between the nurse and mate is completed to end the film as the control experiment is proved successful.—AARONSON, New York.

The Vanishing Shadow

Action Serial

There is fast paced action, and real entertainment, in this latest serial from Universal. Designed chiefly for the consumption of juveniles, it should hit its mark with no difficulty, especially where boys are concerned. It is a little difficult of adult appreciation, being a bit farfetched, but the elders may well experience an exciting few minutes of entertainment. Featured are Onslow Stevens, Ada Ince, Walter Miller and James Durkin. Stevens, young electrical engineer, brings to Durkin, famous electrical wizard, his new invention, a vest-like apparatus which permits the wearer to vanish, leaving only a shadow. With the aid of the machine, Stevens and Durkin determine to bring about the undoing of the racketeer leader, Miller, whose unscrupulous activity had brought about the death of Stevens' father. The situation is complicated by the fact that Stevens has met and fallen in love with Miss Ince, who is Miller's daughter, but who cares little for his methods and goes under an assumed name. The first three chapters, titled respectively, "Accused of Murder," "The Destroying Ray" and "The Avalanche," give promise of rapid-fire serial type action, every chapter ending on the expected note of high suspense, calculated to bring the youngsters back a-running for the next chapter. It is worth exhibitor attention for the juvenile trade. Each chapter runs approximately 20 minutes.

Entertaining

The Four Yacht Club Boys, a group of entertaining vocalists, render several novelty numbers in highly effective style, while the subject is enhanced by the competent work of an orchestra and a striking ballet dance done on a polished black floor which reflects the movements of the dance. The quartet becomes really amusing when they sing of the "great American tourist," with appropriate scenes "on the road." It is entertaining.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Good Comedy

Andy Clyde contrives to supply a number of laughs in this fairly good comedy of the wealthy man who personally investigates his daughter's suitor. Learning that he is a clerk in the local hotel, Andy disguises himself as a porter, gets into trouble with the clerk, and comes close to permitting the escape of the jewel robbers on whose trail the clerk, a detective, has been. The boy gets a rude shock when he asks his girl's father for her hand. As comedies go, an amusing number.—Running time, 20 minutes.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ANN CARVER'S PROFESSION: Fay Wray, Gene Raymond—Very interesting and entertaining throughout. Fay Wray shows up well as a lady lawyer. This received more favorable comments than any picture we have shown of late. Wet weather spoiled the business but the second night receipts were much better than the first. The pleased customers had advertised it. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

BEFORE MIDNIGHT: June Collyer, Ralph Bellamy—Very mediocre picture. Photography dark and hazy. Couldn't focus the film. A pretty fair story; however, didn't figure it so hot.—Ned Pedigo, DeLuxe Theatre, Garber, Okla. General patronage.

FURY OF THE JUNGLE: Donald Cook, Peggy Shannon—Played this one double feature with "Master of Men." It is good. Dudley Digges takes the honors. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Mar. 2-3.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—Columbia certainly has registered in this one. I think perhaps the real credit should go to the director, Frank Capra, for turning out such a clean-cut picture. He had all the material to make suggestive and smutty production, but instead turned out one of the cleanest and most entertaining pictures that I have ever had the pleasure to look at. We had an unusual business for three days, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, March 11, 12, 13. Our patrons went out with a smile, and I assure you we were not afraid to look them in the face. Have been in the theatre business twenty years, and we can see no reason why we should not have more of this type entertainment. Wake up, producers and directors, for cleaner pictures. Step on this one, boys, if you have bought, and buy it if you haven't.—W. A. Middleton, Rex Theatre, Iowa Falls, Iowa. General patronage.

KING OF THE WILD HORSES: William Janney—Swell action picture. Ran it on bargain night and did a good business. The people in the small towns will go for this one. Played Feb. 28-Mar. 1.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

LADY FOR A DAY: May Robson—The guy who shows this and doesn't praise it, has something wrong with its praiser, or maybe it's his eyes, his liver or his pen may be tongue-tied. He might be all right but he just isn't, and that's that. Of course, I didn't "mop up," but I'm no scrub lady, no how. Running time, ten reels. Played Feb. 25-26.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

LADY FOR A DAY: May Robson, Warren William—Personally, did not see the picture but from what I heard it was a swell show. Some told us it was the best picture we had ever shown. Running it so late hurt us at the box-office. Played Feb. 26-27.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, Kine City, Cal. Small town patronage.

LET'S FALL IN LOVE: Edmund Lowe, Ann Sothern—Very poor. Just the same old six and seven, a girl crashing the movies. Lowe is a very poor lead as he proved in this. If this is a musical, as the company advertises, they surely cut that part out before it got to me. Miss Sothern tried to sing but for some reason she didn't get the job done in this one. Pleased 25 per cent. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Feb. 18-19-20.—C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

LET'S FALL IN LOVE: Ann Sothern, Edmund Lowe—A very good program picture. Good for one day only. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Feb. 21.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MAN'S CASTLE, A: Loretta Young, Spencer Tracy—Superb as to acting and direction. Spots a little raw for small town. Business off. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Mar. 4-5-6.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN'S CASTLE, A: Loretta Young, Spencer Tracy—Depressing but excellently done picture in the best Borzage manner. Finest thing Loretta Young has turned in. Ditto for Tracy but the story is hard to get over in the small town where the artistic angle makes less of an impression than in the bigger spots.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

MASTER OF MEN: Jack Holt, Fay Wray—A good Jack Holt picture. Jack does not look so hot in a dress suit, though. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Mar. 2-3.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MASTER OF MEN: Jack Holt—Typical Holt picture. Replete with plenty of action and thrills. Average business.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

McKENNA OF THE MOUNTED: Buck Jones—Good Saturday feature with plenty of the stuff that pleases that type of audience. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Mar. 3.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

SHADOWS OF SING SING: Bruce Cabot, Mary Brian—Just a fair picture. It will please joints like this of mine. We used it on our program serial days.—Ned Pedigo, DeLuxe Theatre, Garber, Okla. General patronage.

WHIRLWIND, THE: Tim McCoy—Exceptionally fine western. The wrestling match was the talk of the Saturday night crowd. Running time, 61 minutes. Played Mar. 10.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

First Division

ROAD TO RUIN: Helen Foster, Paul Page—Broke house record on Thursday and Friday. Good print, good photography, good recording. Don't pass up the independents. They have box-office pictures. Advertised no one under 16 years of age admitted. Price of admission 25 cents. Played Mar. 1-2.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb., Rural patronage.

First National

BEDSIDE: Warren William—Fair program picture but drew some unfavorable comment. Played on bargain nights to below average business. Personally, I think Warren William is better than John Barrymore, but the cash customers evidently don't agree with me. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Feb. 27-28.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

BEDSIDE: Warren William—From the reviews, I thought this would be poor. On the contrary, it is a pretty good program picture. Jean Muir will be okay with a little camera experience. Of course, the trailer helped business.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

BIG SHAKEDOWN, THE: Bette Davis, Charles Farrell—Good program picture. Used on bargain nights and drew better than average business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played Feb. 20-21.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

CONVENTION CITY: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—Very good Friday-Saturday program. Good cast and a good story. Frank McHugh and Hugh Herbert will keep them laughing. Played Mar. 9.—T. E. Ross, Strand Theatre, St. Geore, S. C. Small town patronage.

CONVENTION CITY: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—One of the best pictures we have run recently. Created more talk than any picture we've run since "Footlight Parade." Properly sold, this picture will make you money. Business above average for Sunday and Monday. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Feb. 25-26.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

CONVENTION CITY: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor—Here is a wow of a comedy that will roll 'em in the aisles. An all comedy cast that will draw plenty. Boost this one up plenty. As usual, the First National trailer helps a lot. I can't understand why all the major companies do not make their own trailers. Warner trailers are the best on the market, bar none.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

DARK HAZARD: Edward G. Robinson—Too bad that the coldest weather we had in two years spoiled attendance on this picture. It is very entertaining and every one who came complimented it. The dog track angle makes a most interesting novelty.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

FASHIONS OF 1934: William Powell, Bette Davis—A swell picture with a good cast but was sadly disappointed at box-office results. The word "fashion" seems to hurt the draw; it gets the women but not the men. The picture is fine, but don't expect too much business. Bette Davis no favorite here, but Frank McHugh pulled the laughs.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

MASSACRE: Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak—Not the picture that the producers would lead you to believe. A good program picture and that is all. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Feb. 22-23.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

MASSACRE: Richard Barthelmess—Made to order for my town. Drew well and pleased. Played Mar. 11-12.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, Kine City, Calif. Small town patronage.

SON OF A SAILOR: Joe E. Brown—I have a double reason for making a favorable report on this picture. It just about doubled my Friday night receipts and doubled up my patrons. Played Mar. 2.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

SON OF A SAILOR: Joe E. Brown—An excellent Joe Brown and clean as a whistle. Pleased and drew average Sunday and Monday business. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Jan. 28-29.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD: Frankie Darro, Dorothy Coonan—The freak draw of this and past few seasons. Brought in the "great unwashed" that never go to a picture show. Can only say like many others: The trailer seemed to do the work and that title seemed to appeal to the class that eats up the "true dream" and similar story magazines. Running time, seven reels. Played Feb. 14-15.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD: Frankie Darro, Dorothy Coonan—Very interesting. Did extra business. Pleased all, old and young. A picture all small towns should run. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Feb. 28.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

Fox

CHARLIE CHAN'S GREATEST CASE: Warner Oland—Well, you all know this Charlie Chan and I won't say any more. We had a two-reel Warner Brothers comedy, "Yeast Is Yeast," and boy don't ask me any more about Warner comedies. They make them to please. When people come to your theatre they come to see things full of life, music, dance and songs. For this I recommend Warners. Played Feb. 10.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

DOCTOR BULL: Will Rogers—Good crowd the first night. Very few the second. Haven't been able to figure out why it didn't hold up, as it is a very good picture. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

HOOPLA: Clara Bow—Too bad, too bad. It's a shame to waste this girl as Fox is doing right now after she has shown that she can really deliver. This one is just plain bad. Hootch dance atmosphere throughout. Ends right where it starts and leaves that dark brown taste. But Miss Bow is good. Why not take advantage of that. Running time, nine reels. Played Feb. 25-27.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

HOOPLA: Clara Bow—Clara Bow in a big carnival show and it is not so hot as some have classed it to be. Not near what I have expected.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

I AM SUZANNE: Lilian Harvey—You will like this picture and it is different. First of its kind I have shown. Pleased well second night. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Feb. 16.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss General patronage.

I AM SUZANNE: Lilian Harvey, Gene Raymond —Few stories of such universal appeal have been made this season. Elaborately mounted. Splendid story.—B. Smith, Joy Theatre, Rockmart, Ga. General patronage.

LAST TRAIL, THE: George O'Brien—It is a swell western with lots of good love scenes and big fighting in action parts. Running time, seven reels. —Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

LAST TRAIL, THE: George O'Brien—This is a western with a truly modern touch, using a portable broadcasting outfit and a troop of motorcycle cops. The kids just ate it up. Makes a great weekend picture. Running time, 59 minutes. Played Mar. 2-3. —Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

MR. SKITCH: Will Rogers—Along the same lines of Mr. Rogers' pictures. He seems to always draw at my theatre. I see some theatre owners say no screen stars should broadcast on the air. Well, I will say I missed old Will Rogers Sunday night. I do not think it hurts us theatre folks and I think it makes the general public want to see them on the screen. Running time, eight reels.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

MR. SKITCH: Will Rogers—One of the Rogers' most entertaining pictures. I've seen in the reports that it was considered pretty light stuff for this star, and that is exactly right. But it is real entertainment and that's what we are all after in this business, patron as well as exhibitor. Running time, eight reels. Played Mar. 4-6.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

MR. SKITCH: Will Rogers—What a picture, what a cast, what business. Will Rogers can't miss and don't believe 'em when they say Rogers is slipping. He can't. Picture liked by everyone. Zasu Pitts and Florence Desmond do nice work.—G. C. Knight. American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

MY LIPS BETRAY: Lilian Harvey, John Boles—Good picture. People would like to hear John Boles sing again. Lilian Harvey very nice but can't get them in to see her. Average business on midweek change.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

OLSEN'S BIG MOMENT: El Brendel, Skeets Gallagher—This is a scream from the first fade-in until the final fade-out. If they like a lot of foolishness, they should go for this one.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

PADDY, THE NEXT BEST THING: Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter—Delightful in every way and pleased everyone. Business was good on Sunday but when the weather turned very cold on Monday even Janet couldn't draw folks away from their own fireside.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

SLEEPERS EAST: Wynne Gibson, Preston Foster—Good mystery story. Starts off slow but it picks up along about the third reel and ends up good. Our patrons liked it.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre. St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

WORST WOMAN IN PARIS: Adolphe Menjou. Benita Hume—Poor. Don't insult your patrons with this film. Adolphe will never get on our screen again. —G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

MGM

BROADWAY TO HOLLYWOOD: Alice Brady, Frank Morgan—A feature with an all-star cast in which each gave a splendid performance. As a story of vaudeville life in the gay 90's, it has everything to please—pathos, comedy, thrills and music. The story is built around the life of the grandson of the vaudeville family who goes to Hollywood and makes good in pictures. This part is played by Eddie Quillan, who gives an outstanding performance. Many of my patrons spoke of Eddie's splendid work in this and asked why I did not have him more often. He was very popular here in the series of features he made for Pathe and we need that type of picture badly now.—B. Smith, Joy Theatre, Rockmart, Ga. General patronage.

BROADWAY TO HOLLYWOOD: Frank Morgan, Alice Brady—Very poor, Patrons like dancing and music but are sick of all this hack stage stuff, and that is about all there is to this one. Morgan did fine with what he had to work on. Can't say much for Brady. Big number of stars but nothing for them to work on. Running time, 88 minutes. Played Feb. 22-23-24.—C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

CLEAR ALL WIRES: Lee Tracy—A very good picture. Plenty of action, good comedy situations and the fast talking, wisecracking Lee Tracy gets out of more tight situations than ever in this one. We did better than average business and they liked it immensely. Running time, 77 minutes. Played Feb. 28-Mar. 1.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

DANCING LADY: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—Can not class as a special. I think the poorest Crawford ever made. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Feb. 23.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: Marie Dressler, Jean Harlow, Lionel and John Barrymore, Wallace Beery—Big draw for first night showing, but close your theatre for the second night. Nuf said. But another thing, I saw no dinner, no supper and no breakfast. Boys, it is a crime to fool 'em like this. Running time, 10 reels.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre. Durant, Miss. General patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Jean Harlow—This picture is just a sketch of characters built around a dinner. The public had become "Dinner at Eight" conscious. There was too much John Barrymore as the down-and-out actor, with Billie Burke, society climber, being all hot and bothered about some lord and lady that run out on her for dinner. She twisted and squirmed all through the picture, affected as to dialogue that did not go over with the audience very well. It was the opinion of most of them that she was miscast and was a relic of the old ten-and-twenty days. Burke the weak spot of the picture. Beery and Harlow were the high spots of the picture. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery—First of all I want to say it's a better picture than "Grand Hotel," if that means anything to you. There are those who enjoy every minute of this picture. This class constitutes ten per cent of the small town audience. Forty per cent will say it's a fair picture, 40 per cent will not like it at all and ten per cent will say it's just no good. If one lives in a large city there are enough people in the first two classes to make this a very satisfactory piece of entertainment. The many big stars alone are sufficient to satisfy hundreds of thousansd in the large cities, regardless of anything else. So, naturally, it is a money-getter with the big fellows. The stars all do excellent work, and it's quite a thrill to see one after another come on and do their parts. Wallace Beery and Jean Harlow steal the picture. John Barrymore commits suicide before he has time to tire the audience. John is no favorite here. Marie Dressler does well, but her part will not help her popularity. Phillips Holmes is seen in the picture for one full minute only, and has his back turned most of that time. Miss Burke and Lionel Barrymore both get on your nerves. The picture did a big business the first night, and dropped to almost nothing the third night. Everyone should play the picture because it has been advertised so heavily, and your best people will expect you to show it regardless of its cost, and the loss you may have. Yes, Metro will check it, but I am sorry to say with their own checker on the door, and with the heaviest advertising campaign in a year, it did not go over the split. Running time, 113 minutes. Played Mar. 4-5-6.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.

ESKIMO: Native cast—I would not play it over as a free gift. I am no kicker, but I do not care for shows like this one. Running time, 12 reels—Walter Odom, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

FAST WORKERS: John Gilbert—We can't give this any stars. Just another fill-in. Just one less on your contract. They make them and we have to play them. You can tell your brother exhibitors what you please, rave how bad they are. Has it done any good? Running time, eight reels.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery—Big bust picture running wild through a blizzard. Robert Montgomery seemed out of his place in a picture like this one. If you can make one-half rental first night, I would say let it go back, and call it another poor one of your contract. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Feb. 7-8.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery—Here is a fine picture. Good story, well acted, good photography, excellent sound, etc. Most of its action takes place on or near a transcontinental bus. It's something different, and keeps you in suspense all the time. It has plenty of action and thrills. It's just an all around good picture. Played Feb. 28-Mar. 1.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Bing Crosby—Bing gets them in. He is great in this one, but is worthy to be put in the biggest productions the producers can make. For his name draws them in. Running time, 79 minutes.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre. Durant, Miss. General patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Marion Davies, Bing Crosby—This pleased them all. Some liked it better than "Dancing Lady" and they ate it up. Marion Davies did some of the best acting in this one she has ever done, not to speak of Bing Crosby. Put out some extra advertising on this one and you won't regret it. Played Mar. 5-6.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C.

HELL BELOW: Robert Montgomery—Fair. Can't make money on these MGM supposedly big specials. And after all, that's what we're in business for.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

MEET THE BARON: Jack Pearl, Jimmy Durante—Rather disappointing. The patrons expect more after the build-up by radio. Very few real comedy situations, borders on the slapstick. Didn't go over here. Not as good as average business resulted. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Feb. 26-27.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY, THE: Myrna Loy, Max Baer, Jack Dempsey—Here is an extra good picture that has no drawing power. The ladies do not want to see prizefights and the men will not come without the ladies. However, this has a good love story and the last two reels are full of action. The fight between Baer and Carnera alone is worth the price of the show and should draw extra business. We played this only one day to a poor business. Running time, 102 minutes. Played Mar. 10.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY, THE: Myrna Loy, Max Baer, Primo Carnera—I played this on a midweek bill, when we usually show to a lady audience, and I thought this would fall down, being a fight picture, but to my astonishment the ladies liked it and turned out to see it in good numbers to do better than average with it. Don't pass this up. Go after athletic and baseball clubs, etc. Running time, 101 minutes. Played Mar. 7-8.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE?: Alice Brady, Lionel Barrymore—The acting of Alice Brady and Lionel Barrymore in this picture is fine. One of the best comedies we have shown in some time. Played Mar. 7-8.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE?: Lionel Barrymore, Alice Brady—Ran this one on a double program and it is entirely too weak for a double. If you want to see them walk out, and you have to go up to the operators' room to hide, play this one. Pleased five per cent. Lionel did all right, but he won't much longer if MGM keeps playing him in such pictures as this. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Feb. 25-26-27.—C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

STAGE MOTHER: Alice Brady, Maureen O'Sullivan—Poor. Not much to this one. The story was poor and so was the acting, with exception of Miss O'Sullivan, who did very nicely with her acting and singing. Too much sex in this one to be good, and a throwback at the old stage angle. Failed to draw. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Mar. 1-2-3.—C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

STORM AT DAYBREAK: Nils Asther, Kay Francis—The most miserable calamity of nothing ever shown on my screen. It made me mad enough to fight even those who did come to see it. We sent it back to MGM with a cuss in our hearts. Running time, 85 minutes.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery—Pleased about 50 per cent. For some reason Marie is losing her punch here. Everyone raved about Wally's performance. Personally I thought it a fine show, but as to the box-office it was a complete flop. Running time, 105 minutes. Played Dec. 7-8-9.—C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

TURN BACK THE CLOCK: Lee Tracy—This is

FIVE MORE JOINING REPORTERS THIS WEEK

From western and southern states this week come five theatremen to join the ranks of the contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me." Read the reports of the following in this issue:

C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kansas; W. A. Middleton, Rex Theatre, Iowa Falls, Iowa; B. Smith, Joy Theatre, Rockmart, Georgia; H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Florida; and G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho.

Mr. Johnson points out that he is not the H. M. Johnson of the Unique Theatre at Bricelyn, Minn. Inasmuch as one is in Florida and the other in Minnesota, the observation is well taken. Suggestions from readers as to how the Department is to distinguish between the Johnsons will be relayed to the reporting staff at large.

the hundred per cent talking kind of a picture and Lee Tracy can say more words in one minute than most actors can say in one hour. We always play two-reel comedies with our features and this time a Warner Brothers comedy saved the show. Running time, seven reels.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

Monogram

RAINBOW RANCH: Rex Bell—Here is another good western picture from the studios of Monogram. Plenty of action, thrills and fighting in this one and has everything the western fan could want. Bell does not have as much drawing power as Wayne, but his pictures are all good. We played this picture to only a fair business due to unusually bad weather conditions, but it should do a good business. Running time, 55 minutes. Played March 10.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WOMAN'S MAN: Wallace Ford, Kitty Kelly—This is only fair entertainment. It is supposed to be a comedy drama, but is entirely too slow. Wallace Ford is cast in a role that is not suitable for him, and the whole show is only fair entertainment. We had many unfavorable comments on this one. I hope Monogram will do better next time. I'm with you, Monogram, come on and show the industry you can make good pictures. Business fair. Running time, 64 minutes. Played Mar. 14.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Paramount

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry—A fantasy suitable for children only, although the parents had to come along, of course. The matinee was almost a record while the evenings were below average, proving we lost the male element altogether. A good matinee picture. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Feb. 23-24—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry, Gary Cooper, Edna May Oliver, Jack Oakie—For kids one of the greatest pictures ever made. For adults a lot of hooey. However, bought it right and about broke even. Don't give us any more like this.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry—This would not be classed as adult entertainment, but it did bring in the children and also some of the parents. The adults did not care much for it. Curiosity as to how it would be produced brought some, but it was the general opinion of most of the adults that they had wasted an evening on it. One will be enough and had I to do it over again I would have eliminated it, or just run it for the children's matinee. If they still believe in fairies after these three years of depression it is okay, but not many do. I will say that Paramount was trying on this one. A lot of care and time was apparent on the making of the characters in the technical end, but it just wasn't a picture for the adults.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ALL OF ME: Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March—Sordid picture that did not please. Business below average. Stars wasted in this type of story. Played Feb. 4-5.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

ALL OF ME: Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins, George Raft—Another picture where everyone has a baby except the cameraman. A fair picture with a good cast that failed to draw average business.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

CRADLE SONG: Dorothy Wieck—This was a very good flop. Why do they make 'em this way.—W. F. Roth, Jr., New Palace Theatre, Gallatin, Tenn. General patronage.

CRADLE SONG: Dorothea Wieck—An excellent picture that surprised us with its drawing power as this is not a particularly strong Catholic community. Very beautifully done, though Miss Wieck did not register to any extent. Can't quite see the reason for all the rave and effort in her behalf when there are so many American girls of greater ability and appeal right in the Paramount roster. Running time, six reels. Played Feb. 28.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

DESIGN FOR LIVING: Gary Cooper, Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March—This is a very good picture that failed to please our patrons. The story is different from the usual run of pictures with spicy dialogue, wonderful acting and good direction. With another title, this one would draw a good business. Come on, Paramount, let us have some good pictures again. Played one day to only a fair business. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 13.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DESIGN FOR LIVING: Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins, Gary Cooper—Excellent picture and pleased those who appreciated the excellent acting. However, the working class couldn't understand it. Business average on Sunday and Monday. Running time, 88 minutes. Played Feb. 18.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Four Marx Brothers—This was the best thing so far the Marx Brothers have appeared in, we thought. A lot of real laughs. It will satisfy your curiosity, please your vanity and tickle your fancy. It's really good.—Ned Pedigo, DeLuxe Theatre, Garber, Okla. General patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Four Marx Brothers—Tough luck on this. First, I paid too much for seven reels of this. Second, on the third night, when I hoped to break even, our power plant burned out, and the town out of lights. Running time, 80 minutes. Mar. 11-12-13.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Four Marx Brothers—Rather disappointing. The patrons expected more music for one thing. Harpo does not play the harp nor his brother the piano and the comedy was almost silly in spots. They just didn't click here. We did not make any money on this and their next will have to be good or we might as well pass them up. Running time, 67 minutes. Played Mar. 2-3.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

EIGHT GIRLS IN A BOAT: Kay Johnson, Dorothy Wilson—Because of lack of stars, played this on bargain nights and did better than average business. Pleased and created very favorable comment. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Jan. 23-24.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

EIGHT GIRLS IN A BOAT: Kay Johnson, Dorothy Wilson, Douglas Montgomery—Was surprised on this one. Double billed it with "Sons of the Desert" and proved okay. People liked it fine, although poor Dorothy Wilson had to have a baby. I never did think that having a baby was entertainment, so why put it in pictures?—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE: Claudette Colbert—This picture drew the best Thursday and Friday in weeks. Colbert popular here. Pleased about 90%. Would say it should have been played Sunday and Monday. If Colbert is popular with you it will make money. Running time, 95 minutes. Played Mar. 8-9.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE: Claudette Colbert—Not another "Torch Song" by any manner of means. Made the poorest Sunday show we've had this winter. Very few liked it and it drew poorly. It takes place almost entirely in the jungle and is tiresome to the ninth degree. Personally, I'm surprised at Mr. DeMille for not making a more entertaining picture. If you do play it, surround it with some good singing and dancing shorts. Playcd Mar. 4-5.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

bert, Herbert Marshall—This picture misses for some reason despite the cast and DeMille directing it. It wanders around in the jungle with Colbert doing her best to put it over. She had hysterics a couple of times that did not ring true and all in all it is just another picture that makes it just a run-of-the-mill jungle picture. DeMille seems lost if he does not have a spectacle picture to produce, as in this day and age he did not have much.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HELL AND HIGH WATER: Richard Arlen, Judith Allen—A good tale of the waterfront with lots of comedy situations. Good light entertainment. Could be used to advantage on a double bill to effect some heavy sophisticated feature. We did good business with it and the customers liked it. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 1.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

HELL AND HIGH WATER: Richard Arlen—A bit different but pleased our weekend crowd. Arlen always good if given a chance and he seems to have a knack for making any picture a better one. Running time, eight reels. Played Feb. 23-24.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

HIS DOUBLE LIFE: Roland Young—Lay off this. It is pictures like this that kill your business. It might take a year to get a regular customer but it just takes one picture like this to lose him. Why does Paramount have to step out and get a poor picture from an independent producer? It can make plenty of poor ones without hunting for them.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

KING OF THE JUNGLE: Buster Crabbe—Played it in preference to some of the new ones. Did plenty of biz on bad night. Use it.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott—Here is the picture. Not an outstanding picture but how it draws. Played it on bargain nights and stood them out for the first time in months, and the second night they came back for more. Should have played on Sunday and Monday but it made money for us this way. Brought people in the theatre I haven't seen in months. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 13-14.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott, Barbara Fritchie—A knockout at the box-office wherever they like horse opera. It cleaned up.—Herman J. Brown, Magestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper—Good picture but the kid star apparently kept the regulars away. Plenty of action and all that, but the name on the posters kept them off. That's my only explanation for the poorest Friday and Saturday run in weeks. Running time, eight reels. Played Mar. 9-10.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper—Great kid business. Adult trade not so good. Kid pictures just won't go over. Jackie Cooper nice little actor but you have to have a well known adult star to get them in.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Randolph Scott—Another good western, perhaps not so exciting as most but good entertainment for both young and old. Has some new shots showing a young mountain lion as a pet watch dog with a litter of pups, too. A trick mule provides the comedy. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Feb. 23-24.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Randolph Scott—Right up to the usual Paramount Zane Grey standard, which means top notch for outdoor entertainment. Running time, seven reels. Played Mar. 2-3.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck, Baby Le Roy—A splendid timely audience picture that will please 100 per cent. Alice Brady simply steals the picture and Spanky McFarland came near stopping the show. How could they, why would they, put this foreign star Dorothea Wieck at the head of a cast in this great picture. We have dozens of American stars who can act. I for one am about fed up on these lisping foreigners. Give us American stars. Played March 9-10.—Ned Pedigo, DeLuxe Theatre, Garber, Okla. General patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck—Paramount gave Miss Wieck something to work with this time. I was afraid of this picture after the terrible licking I took with "Cradle Song." This picture brought them out and they liked it and said so. Good Sunday-Monday feature. Business above average. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 11-12.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck, Baby Le Roy—This picture gets away to a slow start, it drags for about three reels, and then picks up. Alice Brady steals the picture from Dorothea Wieck, and Spanky McFarland supplies what comedy there is in the picture. It will take some selling to get them in. The action of the capture of the kidnapers at the end is all that saves the picture from being just another program picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: Buster Crabbe—A very weak program picture. Made a mistake in playing on Sunday and Monday. Entertaining but lacks that certain something that goes to make a picture draw. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 4-5.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: Larry ("Buster") Crabbe, Ida Lupino—Plenty of peaches in this one. A very nice program picture that will please generally. Should draw above average.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

SIX OF A KIND: Charles Ruggles, W. C. Fields, Alison Skipworth—An extra good comedy. Fields steals the picture. Business average. Good midweek program picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Feb. 15-16.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

TAKE A CHANCE: James Dunn, Buddy Rogers, June Knight—Although the first of this picture was considered a little raw most of the patrons enjoyed the screening. Business was good in spite of the very severe weather. Played Feb. 24.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott. Judith Allen—Here is another typical Zane Grey picture, full of action, thrills, fighting and killing. A real Saturday picture and will appeal to all western fans. Advertise it as a Zane Grey story and you will profit by it. Scott and Allen play their parts well as do the entire cast. Come on, Paramount, give us some more of these. Played one day to very good business. Running time, 58 minutes. Played Mar. 17. —J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott—Excellent western action picture. Paramount gives us those Zane Grey westerns that are surefire. No better western are on the market. Running time, 58 minutes. Played Feb. 24.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott, Judith Allen—Westerns have surely staged a sharp comeback in the past few months. This pulled the best Saturday business in months. These Zane Grey westerns are about the best box-office draw that Paramount has in the small towns. Keep them coming.—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

TORCH SINGER: Claudette Colbert, Ricardo Cortez—Colbert's portrayal excellent. Some patrons disapproved theme of movie, but most pleased. Business good. Played March 17.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y.

TORCH SINGER: Claudette Colbert—This is truly a picture that gives satisfaction. Miss Colbert wins your love and interest in this one. I like a picture like this, but many other exhibitors see it different. But why should I worry so long as I do my part? Running time, 75 minutes. Played Feb. 27.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

TORCH SINGER: Claudette Colbert—Best Wednesday-Thursday business for months. Claudette Colbert a sensation. This baby can sing, and how. Pleased 100 per cent.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho.

WAY TO LOVE, THE: Maurice Chevalier—I couldn't get anybody out on this. Running time, 84 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

RKO

ANN VICKERS: Irene Dunne—Did not draw. Too heavy for country town. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Mar. 14-15.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

ANN VICKERS: Irene Dunne, Walter Huston—Not so big as a draw or as a production.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

CHANCE AT HEAVEN: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea, Marian Nixon—I am sorry I did not know how good this picture was. I would have stepped on it. However, it is hard to "step on" all of them when one is making four changes a week. One of the ministers in our town who saw this picture made a point in his sermon the following Sunday on how easily marriage could be made a "heaven" or a "hell." He did not mention the picture in his sermon, but told me afterwards he had been much impressed by the picture. Marian Nixon gives a good performance of the spoiled rich girl who would see her marriage go on the rocks and lose the man she loves rather than face the inconvenience and pain of motherhood. Everybody in the audience is so glad she feels that way, for everybody wants handsome Joel McCrea to marry Ginger, who has been such a pal to him, who can make such good chicken pie and who, we are left to infer, will also round out a happy normal married life by having a family. The baby sequence is presented with niceness and dignity. We all thought this was a wholesome picture that will make any young person think a little. Played Feb. 1-2.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

FLYING DEVILS: Bruce Cabot, Arline Judge—Contrary to expectations on the part of our patrons who are fed up on aviation pictures, this picture met 100 per cent approval here. A good story, well acted. What more do you want? Me? Oh, I could have stood a little better gross than $11.95 but who's kicking? Not me. Played Feb. 21.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Fred Astaire—In my opninon the finest musical yet. Congratulate RKO in getting away from the worn-out back stage plot. Held up big for three days. Astaire a comer. Go after business on this picture, it's there 100 per cent. Everybody raved about tbis picture. Dolores Del Rio fine. Catchy music. Sell the new Carioca dance, it will bring 'em in.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

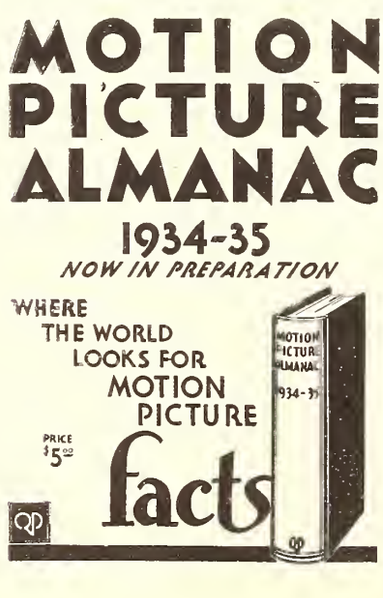
IF I WERE FREE!: Irene Dunne—A class production. Fair in middle of the week change. Irene Dunne and Clive Brook do nice work. Can't make any dough in small towns on this sort of stuff.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—The world, at least the American part of it, owes RKO a vote of thanks for giving us this picturization of Louisa M. Alcott's famous book. It's perfect. Play it, boost it and enjoy it as well as the compliments you will receive for showing it. Played Feb. 11-12.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn — Hit a blizzard on this one. Would of done big business if weather had of been good. It will draw people who never go to theatres. You can make money with this one. Several did not attend because they said, "We don't like midget pictures."—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN, THE: Pert Kelton, Zasu Pitts—A poor picture that didn't click. You can put all the stars in the world in a picture, but you can't fool the public. Not much comedy. A little dirty in spots. Pleased about forty per cent.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK: Bruce Cabot, Betty Furness—A dandy, clean, wholesome picture that did well on Saturday and Sunday.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.



MORNING GLORY: Katharine Hepburn—Tried to put this picture over on strength of "Little Women" but failed to do average business. A few liked it, a few thought they liked it and the majority panned it terribly. Personally, can't see Hepburn.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

NO MARRIAGE TIES: Richard Dix—It is the talking kind from beginning to end. It seems the producers love to make pictures along this line. It matters little how much we exhibitors make kicks about such pictures. They keep it up. Running time, eight reels.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

ONE MAN'S JOURNEY: Lionel Barrymore—An exceptionally fine picture. Drew extra business. Lionel Barrymore does great work in this. Fine cast helps put over piceure.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho.

ONE MAN'S JOURNEY: Lionel Barrymore—This is a true story of a small town doctor. I remember one in my home town about forty years ago. Barrymore at his best. A fine small town picture. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Mar. 4-5.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

finest actresses on the screen. Give her something big she'll wow 'em. Pleased 90 per cent.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho.

SAILOR BE GOOD: Jack Oakie—Jack, with an excellent supporting cast, contrived to make of this little comedy drama a nice entertaining picture. Just one of those that does not interfere with your relaxation yet contributes considerable to your amusement. Played March 14th.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville. La. Small town patronage.

SON OF KONG: Robert Armstrong, Helen Mack—If we had not had "King Kong" to compare this with, it would have been a splendid picture. As it is, people are just a little disappointed in this. It is tame by comparison with the former picture. Where "King Kong" was intense melodrama, "Son of Kong" is almost comedy drama. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

SON OF KONG: Robert Armstrong, Helen Mack—A little "King Kong" is right. Where RKO got the idea to sell this as a special is beyond me. Opened up fair, and then—well, why talk about it. Watch your step on this one. Maybe all right on a Friday or Saturday change, but don't play it on a Sunday. Played Mar. 4-5-6.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

United Artists

MOULIN ROUGE: Constance Bennett—I do not care to rave about this picture Constance Bennett's playing in. I love true American talking and I think the general public are in line with me on the subject. Too much make-believe won't do. Running time, eighty minutes.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN: Lee Tracy—Lee Tracy will give you all the talk you can stand in this one. He shoots his lines like flashes of lightning. He can say more words in one minute than any other man can say in a day.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

BROADWAY THRU A KEYHOLE: Constance Cummings, Paul Kelly—This is the third United Artists picture in a row to lose money for me. Good picture. Hard to sell. No business.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho.—General patronage.

SECRETS: Mary Pickford, Leslie Howard—Went back and picked this one up and believe me it is sure real box-office in a small town. It pleased young and old 100 per cent. This one has a wonderful variety of English life, western life and every day modern life. Play it. You won't be sorry. Running time, 115 minutes. Played Feb. 11-12-13.—C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

BELOVED: John Boles, Gloria Stuart—This is a very good picture and will please the average patron. It is a drama, with music and comedy. Entirely different from the current musicals. It is a story of the life of a man who had two loves—his wife and his music. In the supporting cast are many popular players to help sell the picture. "Beloved" offers good entertainment for the whole family. Business good on one day. Running time, 82 minutes. Played Mar. 19.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

BELOVED: John Boles—A mighty fine motion picture to only average business. It appears that people like pictures with more life, laughs and pep, although this picture should please all you can get in. Another picture where the leading lady must suffer by having a baby. Why don't the studios practice birth control, at least in the pictures?—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

BOMBAY MAIL: Edmund Lowe—Edmund Lowe, as usual gives a finished performance. Business not quite so good as usual. Played March 10.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BOMBAY MAIL: Edmund Lowe—The comments were divided on this picture, some liked it, others thought it only fair. Played Mar. 2-3.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

BOMBAY MAIL: Edmund Lowe—Not good, not bad. A one day picture. Good acting but a poor story. Pleased about 50 per cent. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 9-10.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

BOMBAY MAIL: Edmund Lowe—Will be okay on double bill, otherwise will not draw. Not much to this mystery story. Edmund Lowe is all washed up as a draw. I am afraid that Uncle Carl is a little misinformed as to what constitutes an all-star cast.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

BY CANDLELIGHT: Elissa Landi, Paul Lukas—Here is a fast moving romantic comedy with lots of fun, in dialogue and action. Just the type of picture for a family day, as it will appeal to all classes. Miss Landi, Lukas and Asther all play their roles superbly and add much to the entertainment of this one. Universal has given us some good pictures this season and this is one of them. Played one day to a good business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 16.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

BY CANDLELIGHT: Paul Lukas, Elissa Landi—Fine picture but not enough action for small town. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 7.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

CONSELLOR-AT-LAW: John Barrymore—A fine picture but did not draw extra business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played Feb. 25-26.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW: John Barrymore—A very good picture of its type, but few pictures of this type are very box-office. Well produced, well acted and well directed but not so hot at box-office.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

GUN JUSTICE: Ken Maynard—Western fans satisfied. Better than business of previous weeks due to sudden change in weather and issuance of bank dividend. Played March 3.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine—Another miss. Not so good. Plot jumbled up. However, the horse looked mighty good.—G. C. Knigbt, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

I LIKE IT THAT WAY: Gloria Stuart, Roger Pryor—A very good program picture witb a couple of songs that go over okay. Was glad to see Marian Marsh back again. Plenty good to look at and pretty fair actress. This picture should go over in the small towns all right.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN, THE: Claude Rains, Gloria Stuart—A splendid picture. Great trick photography. Did not draw on account of sleet storm. Did not exploit it as beavily as we should. We will hand Universal a bouquet on tbis one. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Feb. 25-26-27.—A. B. Jefferis, New Pidemont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN, THE: Claude Raines—Played old, the only way Universal will let us have them, but it's a good shock picture.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

KING OF THE ARENA: Ken Maynard—An average western to average Saturday business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

MADAME SPY: Fay Wray—Don't get confused. There are only two main spies, one for each side except February which has 28. Drew fair. Played March 8-9.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, Kine City, Cal. Small town patronage.

MYRT AND MARGE: Myrtle Dale, Donna Damerell—Take my advnce. Pay for it and leave it in the can. A bunch of high school students in your home town can do much better acting. I had the first showing in the state of Kansas on this one and if I had any say, it would be the last. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Dec. 7-8-9.—C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

ONLY YESTERDAY: Margaret Sullavan, John Boles—Average Sunday-Monday business and pleased most people. Of course, there are some people who do not like a sad ending no matter how good the rest of the picture is. But this is certainly a picture any exhibitor can be proud to show on his screen. Running time, 105 minutes. Played Feb. 18-19.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

S. O. S. ICEBERG: Rod La Rocque—I am an exhibitor. I see a show seven nights a week and two matinees. I sat through this darned thing seven times. Need I say more? Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 9-10.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard: As good a western as was ever made by anyone, anywhere, at any time. Ken is always good, but horses performing in this picture stole the show. Played Feb. 17.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard—A natural. Impossible to miss on this one. Best Friday and Saturday business in years. Not a great picture, but who cares as long as the shekels come rolling in.—G. C. Knight, American Theatre, Caldwell, Idaho. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard—The best western I have run in three years time. You can say all you want to about Metro's big productions (and I play them too), but the box-office on "Strawberry Roan" was a third better than the above mentioned. Old times would soon come back with a few more westerns like this one. Running time, 61 minutes. Played Jan. 11-12-13.—C. W. Shattuck, Pastime Theatre, Protection, Kan. General patronage.

Warner

BABY FACE: George Brent—This one will please. Warner Brothers hardly ever disappoint us. We get what we are looking for in their pictures. Recording the best, songs the best, dancing excellent, music grand, costumes wondcrful, stars beautiful, stories interesting and love making grand. Running time, eight reels. Played Feb. 5-6.—Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

BIG SHAKEDOWN, THE: Bette Davis—Fair programmer with little appeal. Played March 1-2.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, Kine City, Calif. Small town patronage.

EASY TO LOVE: Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor—The comments on this picture were easy for the showman to take. Business above average and reaction very favorable. Used on bargain nights and pleased about 100 per cent. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 6-7.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

EASY TO LOVE: Adolphe Menjou—Clever show. Plenty of comedy but no draw. Played March 6-7.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, Kine City, Cal. Small town patronage.

EVER IN MY HEART: Barbara Stanwyck, Ralph Bellamy—Here is a sweet little picture, that will please every one. It is strictly a woman's picture, but they will bring the men. It is a drama, very sensimental, and is one of the best Stanwyck pictures to date. Miss Stanwyck, Bellamy and Kruger all handle their parts wonderfully. The Warner trailer sold the picture for us and we played one day to a very good business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Mar. 15.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre. Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

FOOTLIGHT PARADE: James Cagney, Joan Blondell, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Guy Kibbee—Well we are a little late playing this one and most all have seen the boost every one has given it. So I am passing it on, giving it a big boost and wishing Warner Brothers a long life in making good pictures as they have done. They seem to know what the people want. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Mar. 7.—Walter Odom, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

FOOTLIGHT PARADE: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—Heard complaint about first part being tiresome, but last three reels surely made up for it. The Water fall number is without any doubt the most beautiful spectacle ever presented on the screen. It did not draw near as well as "Gold Diggers of 1933," however. Running time, 101 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

FROM HEADQUARTERS: George Brent, Margaret Lindsay—Good program picture. Used on bargain nights and drew average business. Running time, 63 minutes. Played Feb. 13-14.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

HI, NELLIE! Paul Muni—Excellent newspaper picture. Business below average but almost impossible to sell Muni in this town. No fault of the picture as those that saw it liked it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Feb. 11-12.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

HOUSE ON 56TH STREET, THE:—Kay Francis—An excellent program picture which should please. Business average. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 1-2.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

KING'S VACATION, THE: George Arliss—Good acting, but this type of picture is all Arliss. He is the whole show.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

LADY KILLER: James Cagney, Mae Clarke—James Cagney is a big drawing card for us. Picture good. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Mar. 7-8.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

LADY KILLER: James Cagney—Full of action, comedy, romance, suspense and everything it takes to make a good evening's entertainment. Everybody likes it. It drew fairly well.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

MARY STEVENS, M.D.: Kay Francis—This is old

but we had heard so many good comments on it we picked it up. It is all right. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

WORLD CHANGES, THE: Paul Muni—This was an exceptionally good picture but, unfortunately, there are so many of the younger generation who demand pep and nothing but, that it did not meet with percentage of approval it and that sterling actor deserved. Mary Astor and Guy Kibbee were also good but they could have spared Mary and us that one horrible scene. Played Feb. 18.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

HOLLYWOOD BABES: Scrappy Cartoons—Good one-reel subject. Very amusing. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town.

MICKEY'S TENT SHOW: Mickey McGuire—This is one of the best two-reel comedies that was ever shown here, and received as much praise as "Tugboat Annie," which played here the same day.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

MICKEY'S TOUCHDOWN: Mickey McGuire—A good comedy ruined by poor print. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MR. ADAM: Ernest Truex—Sold to us for a comedy, but is poor. Refuse it.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

MR. ADAM: Ernest Truex—Here is an excellent two-reeler. Just a little brisque but that makes the people like it. All about joining a nudist camp and the troubles Ernest has. He can dish it out but he can't take it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Red Harkins, State Theatre, Tempe, Ariz. Small college town.

Plenty of good stunts in this and will please practically all who see it. Running time, nine minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

CRACKED ICEMAN: Charley Chase—Very good. Clever ending.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

HELLO POP: Ted Healy—A fair example of how to butcher a musical comedy with no material for the comedians.—Charles Bern, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

HELLO POP: Musical Revue—This is only fair entertainment with Ted Healy and his Stooges in the lead. In spite of the fact it is in color, it does not add to the entertainment. Come on Metro, give us good shorts or don't give us any. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MIXED NUTS: All Star Series—Very good. Some music in last reel, and another smashing finish.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

PALE FACE: Flip the Frog—A very good cartoon comedy with plenty of laughs and is sure to please all. Too bad Metro should discontinue this series, if they all could be as good as this one. Here's hoping the new cartoon will be as good as the others. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

RHAPSODY IN BEER: Musical Revues—Poor. So far I can't say much for Metro's shorts.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum Theatre, Mellen, Wis. Small town patronage.

RADIO ROUNDUP, A: Headliners—Song and patter single with Molasses and January, Vaughn De Leath, Mary Small and Three X Sisters. This type of single will fit anywhere and please. Three X Sisters finish with "Big Bad Wolf" and "Three Little Pigs." Running time, 10 minutes.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Colo. General patronage.

RED HOT MAMA: Betty Boop—I can remember several years ago after sound had been established that a great cry arose within the industry that the youngsters of that day (and the show patron of tomorrow) were unable to find any entertainment in the movie palaces because the biz had gone high-hat and no entertainment remained for them. I screened "Red Hot Mama," a cartoon, yesterday on my Sunday matinee, hence this letter. I have always felt that in booking these cartoons the youngsters were getting a treat. I enjoy their hearty laughs and suppressed excitement when their favorite cartoon is on the screen. However, the cartoon "Red Hot Mama" must have been drawn while the guy was drunk. Betty Boop starts out sweetly, is suddenly transported to Hell and pursued and tortured by all sorts of fire devils, imps and what have you. One variety, the ability to bound in the air and come down on a spear studded tail stabbed in the floor. A grand subject for your juvenile trade? Naturally my Sunday program was without a cartoon. The only recommendation I have for this is that the one responsible for it be compelled to sit through a screening of this every time he has a pink elephant fantasy. Some exhibs have said they hesitate to report on products through the Herald for fear of getting in bad with local exchange. My opinion is that the people who are sincere in this business welcome constructive criticism. Report fairly on pictures of merit and likewise that class of product which is detrimental to our investments. I'm not a crank but it is cartoons such as Symphonies and "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Little Red Hen" that are in demand and not such a thing as "Red Hot Mama."—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

KISSING TIME: Jane Froman—This comedy is fair. Not up to the standard Vitaphone comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

MELODY MASTERS: These one-reel musicals are in great favor with my patrons, and deservedly so.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND: Melody Masters —An excellent one-reel band number for your best days.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Neligh, Nebraska

DEAR HERALD:

We are wondering how many readers of this magazine could tell us where New Mexico is. Some think it is a part of South Africa and some think it is the name of a new breakfast food.

It reminds us of the fellow who was from Idaho and he was driving down east and he came to New York city and the police got in ahead of his car and piloted him through the town. One New Yorker who saw his license plate yelled at him, "Say, Mister, where in hell is Idaho?"

For your information we will say that New Mexico is bounded on the east by the Panhandle country, on the south by the Rio Grande and Old Mexico, on the west by Arizona and on the north by Pikes Peak, Denver and Harry Huffman. It is part of the United States and isn't ashamed of it. Among other points of interest she has a town called Las Vegas. There has always been a question as to just how the town got its name, but it came about in this way. A Mexican used to live there and one day he left his wife and ran away with the hired girl. The boys caught him and brought him back and they asked him why he did this and he said "Las Vegas." They didn't know just what he meant but it sounded like a good name for a town so they named the place Las Vegas.

And There's M. E. Berkheimer

Las Vegas has a population of 9,000 people, the most of whom stand up on their legs and walk just like they do in Chicago and Baltimore and other inland villages. Some of her population go to Sunday School and some go out to the streams in the mountains just back of town and catch trout. And when the basket ball game isn't on, and when there is too much static on the radio, the folks go down to the Coronado theatre, which is the rallying place of the town where M. E. Berkheimer, the manager, tries to make everybody comfortable and glad that they are living in New Mexico.

M. E. says if we will come out to New Mexico and spend a day in their wonderful sunshine and climate it will cure us of our difficulty. If we felt sure of this we'd do it, but we've been buncoed by these theatremen so often that we are getting to be a little sun-shy. M. E. tells us that we should not pass up New Mexico—just as though we had—why, bless your sunparched skin brother, we have seen every cactus, horned toad and sand lizard in the state, that is, in the southern part of the state, but we will admit we have never been up in the mountains. We always took the southern route because we missed the mountains. Then again, there aren't many theatres up in "them thar hills" outside of Las Vegas and a few more belonging to the Fox organization.

M. E. says that out there even the old men ask theatre managers for a picture of Mae West. Why, gee whiz, why should we want a picture of Mae West when we already have a picture of Winnie Lightner and Elissa Landi?

We give it as our unbiased opinion that the Fox organization is still running true to form in the selection of their managers, as is evidenced by the very delightful letter Mr. Berkheimer has written us. He says we should have come on and seen him when we turned east from Trinidad, Colorado, a few months ago. Well, listen boy. We never were in Trinidad. We turned east from Pueblo and went down the Arkansas river valley into Kansas, and that's why Kansas has been so dry ever since. We hope to come to see you, M. E. We don't know when, but tell the girls to keep a date open. Thanks for your interesting letter.

We have just received a very fine letter from Mr. A-Mike Vogel, editor of the "Round Table" department of the Herald. A-Mike is about the busiest man in New York. Outside of his editorial duties he is training a pet bullfrog to croak in three keys. After he gets him well trained he is going to get his frog an assignment to croon on the radio. Thanks, A-Mike, for your letter. We hope we do, too.

On "Cappy Ricks"

Peter B. Kyne must be pretty well posted on how they write scenarios and make motion pictures as is set forth in his "Cappy Ricks Comes Back." Cappy deserts the sea and turns motion picture producer, in which he proceeds to hand the producers and scenario writers a wallop that ought to loosen their back teeth. Cappy voices a conviction that has been grounded in the public mind for some time. If you have never read the book you better get it and read it.

This is the anniversary of the day when St. Patrick drove the snakes out of Ireland. How the dickens they ever lived to swim across the Atlantic to Florida is more than we can understand. And just why Pat had it in for Florida is something else for you to figure out.

We don't care what they do with the air mail. It's a lot of expensive hooey, anyhow. They used to carry the mail across the continent on a pony, and people lived. Then they carried it on a bus, and they didn't live any better. Then they carried it on the trains and the trouble started. Now they carry it by airplane and when the letter gets there it finds that the addressee has gone up north fishing and won't be back until next week, so whatinhell is the use anyhow.

Sooner Walk

They tell us that it is safer to travel by airplane than it is by automobiles. Well, maybe it is, we don't know. But you put as many airplanes running up in the air as there are automobiles running on the ground and then see what you think about it. In spite of our corns and bunyons we'd sooner walk.

Farmer Jones raised some hogs and fattened them. Then he sold them to Butcher Smith for three and one-half cents per pound. Butcher Smith butchered them and sold them over the block for fifteen cents per pound. Looks like Farmer Jones was hitched to the short end of the whiffletree. NOTE. For the information of those living in New York City. A whiffletree is a crossbar to which horses are fastened when they draw the wagon. A wagon is a vehicle having a tongue, four wheels and a box in which they transport things. A horse is an animal a little larger than a cow. It has a head, a tail and four legs, one on each corner, and it eats hay and raw oats and corn. The dangerous end of a horse is the end with the tail on it.

From "Uncle Herman" Brown

Herman J. Brown is not the fellow who drove down through New York but he operates the theatres in Nampa, Idaho. Nampa is where they raise the big apples and Hubbard squashes. All the kids in Nampa call him "Uncle Herman." That shows that he is very popular. We called on him once and had a very delightful visit with him. Thanks for your good wishes, Mr. Brown. We hope to see you again.

Don Bloxhom of Sheldon, Iowa, writes us that they nearly lost their theatre recently by fire. Glad to know that they saved it, for it was a beautiful playhouse. Thanks for your letter, Mr. Bloxhom.

From Portland, Oregon, comes a very nice letter from Chic Sale. Chic says he expects to be in Omaha soon and hopes to meet us there. Chic is not only an actor but he is the president of "The Specialist Publishing Co.," of Hollywood, California. MURDER AT THE VANITIES

This is a dramatic murder mystery story. Practically all action takes place backstage while one of the famous Earl Carroll shows is being presented. There the crimes, actual and attempted, are committed, investigated and solved, but story telling technique so cleverly conceals the guilty party and suspense is so built that tabbing the killer remains baffling until the climax.

The picture is based on a play by Carroll and Rufus King. It enjoyed a six months run in New York. The screen play is by Carey Wilson, who collaborated on the original of "Bolero" and adapted "Gabriel Over the White House," and by Joseph Gollomb. Added dialogue is contributed by Sam Hellman, who recently worked on "Search for Beauty" and "Good Dame." Song numbers, of which there are several, are by Johnston and Coslow. Direction is by Mitchell Leisen, who handled "Death Takes a Holiday."

Besides the already highly publicized Earl Carroll girls, the picture introduces two good showmanship personalities in Carl Brisson, famous continental stage star and England's outstanding motion picture leading man, and Kitty Carlisle, wellknown New York musical stage star. Several of Paramount's younger players—Dorothy Stickney, Barbara Fritchie, Toby Wing, Clara Lou Sheridan and Gwenllian Gill—are presented. Outstanding familiar screen names are not lacking as Victor McLaglen and Jack Oakie are featured and Gertrude Michael, Jessie Ralph, Charles Middleton and Donald Meek are included in the supporting cast. The music, backgrounding half a dozen girl glamor song dance numbers, features Duke Ellington and his orchestra.

The story is a unique combination of a number of standby theatre values. Name values are good. There's plenty of spectacle contrast which endows the basic mystery premise with elements that can be made the foundation for a real appeal to both men and women patrons.

TOO MANY WOMEN

Fox

Modern dramatic romance, supplemented by melodramatic mystery, is the entertainment essence of this story. Adapted from the novel, "Odd Thursday," the screen play is credited to Jane Storm and Oscar Sheridan with added dialogue by Leonore Coffee. Direction is by James Flood, maker of "Life Begins" and "The Mouthpiece."

The story, dealing with the affairs of a muchly feminine admired author and three women, has Warner Baxter in the leading role. Principal supports are the two comparative newcomers, Rosemary Ames, who made her Hollywood debut with Victor Jory in "I Believed in You," and Mona Barrie, New York stage actress, who had a leading role in "Carolina" and also appeared in "All Men Are Enemies," also Rochelle Hudson, whose last Fox picture was "Mr. Skitch." Topping the long list of supporting players in minor parts are Henrietta Crosman, Herbert Mundin and Irving Pichel.

Placing a unique aspect on the multi-angle love interest situation, Baxter, who likes to love 'em and leave 'em, is jammed up when one of his admirers is found dead. As contrasting comedy serves to lighten the melodrama, circumstantial evidence points to Baxter as the killer. Unable to present an alibi, story assumes a semi-mystery air as an undelivered note is tossed around. Torn up when placed in Baxter's hands, his secretary, Rosemary Ames, pieces it together and the information contained therein proves Baxter's innocence.

Title and cast names appear to be the outstanding showmanship asset. The provocative tone suggests numerous intriguing exploitation ideas to arouse womanly curiosity. This thought being particularly applicable to the story value, advance cast publicity should take advantage of the possibilities for exciting interest accruing to the new personalities as well as the proved draw of the veterans Baxter, Mundin, Pichel and Henrietta Crosman.

THE FIREBRAND

UA-20th Century

Under a modern sounding title, "The Firebrand," a costumed historical romance drama, is the love saga of Cellini, 16th Century lothario. Adapted from the stage play by Edwin Justus Mayer, by Bess Meredyth and directed by Gregory LaCava, the production has Constance Bennett and Fredric March in the leading roles. Fay Wray and Frank Morgan have important feature parts. Principal supporting roles are in the hands of Vince Barnett, Jessie Ralph, Louis Calhern, Jay Eaton, Paul Harvey and John Rutherford.

The script indicating that comedy will be equally important with the romance, drama and intimate love interest, production coincident with the present drift and is done in the sock and buskin atmosphere. The locale is Florence, Italy. Painstaking research has been devoted to assuring authenticity in costumes, settings and contrasts.

The story, following the theatre premises out of which modern triangle affairs evolved, retains the laughing-at-love savor of the up to date sophisticate's forebears. Romance becomes complicated as the philandering Cellini (March) is philandered out of his model, Fay Wray, by the Duke (Frank Morgan), only to have the robbery make him the object of affections of the Duchess (Constance Bennett). Proceeding with medieval color, intrigue, threats of torture chambers, duels, clandestine meetings and poisoned wine cups, everything gets pretty exciting. But in the end, true love loses out as the Duchess grabs Cellini and the Duke is more than satisfied with the model.

In strength of cast names, novelty of story, and deference to the historical romance trend that means so much in the rise and fall of nations, "Firebrand" apparently has a brand of showmanship possibilities to provoke some new ideas in picture selling.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING

Paramount

Music and comedy appear to be the big showmanship assets in this story which co-stars Bing Crosby and Carole Lombard, features Burns and Allen, brings Leon Errol back to the screen and introduces a new stage and radio luminary, Ethel Merman. The original story is by Benjamin Glazer, who wrote "The Way to Love." Of the trio collaborating on the screen play, Horace Jackson functioned in a similar capacity on "Animal Kingdom" and "Bolero," Francis Martin on "International House" and "Tillie and Gus," and the third is George Marion, Jr. Lyrics and music, which feature a dozen big numbers, are by Gordon and Revel, composers of many tuneful hit numbers. Direction is by Norman Taurog, who in the past year made "Bedtime Story" and "The Way to Love."

"We're Not Dressing" establishes two action locales: first is a ritzy cruise to nowhere yacht; second is a desert island. The early part of the story has Carole Lombard on the make for Crosby, a deckhand, but really a man of affairs himself, in which songs by the crooner and Miss Merman feature and the comedy contrast teams Errol and Miss Merman. Wrecked and tossed upon an island, the melange bumps into Burns and Allen, whose new line of comedy turns the yarn into a fun-laden, music tinged, romantic farce.

A reading of the script indicates that show should be a fast-moving and novelly interesting bit of tuneful entertainment which will offer numerous new showmanship selling angles with which the strong name power cast can be effectively sold. Several of the song numbers possess melody and rhythm that indicate popularity. This value, supplemented by the hectic romance angle and the different brand of comedy from Errol and Burns and Allen, earmark the show as both an audience and showmanship picture.

Mary Pickford Calls Talking Pictures "Tiring, Provincial"

The advent of talking pictures was blamed for making motion pictures "tiring and provincial" and causing the industry to lose "the world's market" by Mary Pickford, speaking last week before the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents in New York.

She declared that the screen of the silent era was "the greatest ambassador of them all," and said she would be "bitterly disappointed" if Charlie Chaplin speaks in his next film. There will be a minimum of dialogue in her next picture, she said.

EDUCATION FILM NOT INDUSTRY'S JOB

GEORGE Z. ZEHRUNG, DIRECTOR OF YMCA MOTION PICTURE BUREAU

HARASSED BY SOCIAL GROUPS AND LAWS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Commenting upon your editorial, "More Educational Piffle," the pity of it is that this pert statement of yours will not reach the people who should read it and heed it.

For twenty-two years we have endeavored to gather motion picture films of informational nature and to provide them to churches, clubs, and schools. Teachers and preachers have made considerable progress in adapting the motion picture as a working tool, and it has been because of American industry's vision to tell its story in motion pictures.

While few of these pictures have ever been built along entertainment lines, they always did carry interesting, usable and practical information. Because this material could be had without rental expense, it provided material with which teachers and peachers have constantly experimented. Progress has been made.

However, few people in the educational field and in the motion picture field realize the truth of your statement, "The educational machine is not yet able to adjust itself to the screen, as an instrument. It is also proved that motion picture people are not educators." Too many of our reformer groups have the idea that they can pass the buck to the motion picture industry, and thereby shake their own responsibility.

When the people of this country exercise the same discrimination in their entertainment for children as the majority of them exercise their discrimination in the matter of foods, comforts, and reading material, the motion picture industry, which you say is in "the amusement business and that its sole social and moral obligation is to be adequately and properly amusing," will not be harassed by representatives of social groups and antagonistic legislation, but be permitted to develop itself in the nth power of amusement.

Out of this vast quantity of excellent material will be ample supply of material suitable for the amusement of children. The time may come when the efforts of our social groups will support theatres catering especially to children. Under no condition whatever can I see the responsibility of the amusement industry to assume the obligation of the production of purely educational material, and with the progress that has been made during the past ten years in this field, there is no doubt but that specialists will be developed who can produce the needed educational material, but this material will not be forthcoming until the market is established.

It has been rumored that the motive behind the educational efforts of Eastman and Erpi is the primary interest in increasing the market for raw stock and a market for projection equipment. Even if this be true, their failure (and success) are bound to contribute to the future of the motion picture as a teaching aid.—GEORGE Z. ZEHRUNG, Director, Motion Picture Bureau, The National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations, of the United States of America, 347 Madison Avenue, New York City.

"GETTING ONE MORE HOT FILM BY"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Some weeks ago, while driving to the Coast, I tuned in on a radio broadcast from Salt Lake City, which was one of a series of lectures on "The Menace of the Movies." I learned that two more lectures were to follow on Sundays following. I notified some of the trade papers and producers to tune in at the announced time and hear for themselves what was said.

There are a lot of fine pictures being delivered this season. They are deserving of the highest praise—and getting it, too, and yet, it seems that from some quarters, somebody is not playing the game square. I have read many articles in the daily press and in our own trade papers that clearly indicate that the court of public opinion does not agree with, and is not satisfied with, a lot of things that are being put in picture entertainment.

As I see it, public opinion is rapidly crystalizing, this storm of protest is gathering momentum every day, and once it gathers speed as a national movement it will come mighty close to paralyzing this industry.

Time To End "Buck-Passing"

The time has passed for producers to hesitate or permit some one of the bunch to pass the buck, to permit side-slipping and sharp-shooting. Present facts call for united action, and if it is not possible for independent and associated producers to see that they will both lose heavily unless they get together and work together and do their own house-cleaning, then there is no hope of evading the penalty that is sure to come in the form of stern legal measures, in addition to the bitter attacks from church and civic bodies that will be pulled into the fracas. Patronage would suffer and many life-long enemies for the industry may be made. Strife is never profitable. There should be brains enough in this industry to avoid this threatened trouble.

In a news item I see that from Fall River, Mass., comes one of the most bitter attacks ever made on the movie industry; a high authority sent a letter to most of the churches in the city and the charges made were strong enough to make one shudder, and to those people who heard the charge, and if they had not attended the movies enough to be acquainted with some of the good things that are being made and shown every day, they could easily hate it the rest of their lives and wish that all theatres were closed.

Producers must search for and clean out that which is eating on the industry like a cancer—and threatening to destroy the very foundation on which it stands. It calls for action that will kill off parasites and inject better blood in every department where needed to do a satisfying job. Promises will no longer do—they must do something and do it quick!

Must Keep Public Goodwill

Producers, with millions invested, must undoubtedly want this business to grow and pay dividends in the future as well as the present. The same should be true of theatre men who expect to stay in this business. And if we are to realize that hope, we must keep the goodwill of the people, we must hold public opinion in our favor and that can't be accomplished by making or showing that which honest and intelligent people believe will help to break down the moral and social structure of the nation.

There probably is a market and quick profits for pictures that throw reason and discretion to the winds, that treat virtue, self-respect and wedlock as lightly as would the inhabitants of some south sea islands.

But there are leaders in human affairs, very much like the pilots on the great ocean liners, who are seen very little, because they are on the job, guiding the mighty liner through storms, fog and the dark hours of night, holding the ship to its course while the passengers dance, dine and drink, without a care or a thought of any danger that might be just ahead.

In a news item from Kansas, I see that the state censor board is on a rampage; liquor and drinking scenes are getting the shears. I must agree that there is much room for complaint on this liquor and beer business in pictures. I hear much complaint from my patrons. You see more or less of it in 75 per cent of the pictures released; some scenes are literally dragged in by the heels. The national vote shows that more than 25 per cent of the nation is dry—and always will be. Why slap those people in the face, when they have good money to spend for entertainment!

Free Advertising in Films

After looking at some pictures, I could easily believe that the bird that made them had an uncle running a brewery or a distillery and that he had sneaked in this free advertising for the family. This same opinion goes for cigarettes also. If producers have no interest in those industries, they will do the smart thing and cut out this million dollars' worth of choice publicity in the form of a silent or suggested endorsement.

Some producers have tried harder than others to correct the things that have been objected to by various groups. Some of the associated groups of producers have kicked over the traces and made that which they knew or should have known would react unfavorably, and then there are independents on the outside, with no strings tied to them and no pledges to any one, the fly-by-night kind, with little invested and with no regard for what damage his product may cause, although he realizes full well that the whole industry is blamed when any picture proves objectionable.

Unfavorable public opinion for our industry could have and should have been avoided. It is growing worse day by day and box office receipts will certainly fall, and fall hard, if it is not checked. In a recent radio address our President made a statement that was in effect something like this, that no single group could long stand up or hold out against the demands and force of public opinion. It is a vital force that any man or group of men will do well to pause and think before they decide to oppose it. The present situation calls for wise thinking, united and quick action. It calls for teamwork or suffer a censor yoke.—B. P. MCCORMICK, McCormick Theatres, Canon City, Col.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

CIVIC APPROVAL

The conspicuous honors heaped upon the winners of the Quigley Awards are definite proof that this project has already established itself as a certain means of uncovering the talents of the industry's able theatremen. Inaugurated but a few months ago, the Awards have not only earned the praises of leaders in every branch of showbusiness but have also been recognized officially in important government circles.

We allude, first, to the Washington ceremonies in which January winner Kenneth Grimes received his reward from Presidential Secretary Stephen Early and, second, to the recent Detroit Variety Club luncheon where Governor Comstock of Michigan presented the February plaque to Howard G. Sweet.

These instances of civic approval further affirm the worth of the Quigley competitions in advancing the cause of theatre exploitation and of theatre managers.

GLAMOUR

It appears to us that showmen in their eagerness to exploit screen attractions from every possible box-office angle are sometimes inclined to reach for—in baseball parlance—a "bad ball." There are tieups and tieups, but great care should be exercised so as not to hook into promotions that tend to lessen instead of adding to the glamour with which we seek to surround our stars. We are not mentioning any particular instances, but there have been a few examples in the recent mails which might have been better left undone.

By all means vigorous exploitation must be encouraged, but so long as this is a business that prospers on make-believe, tieins incorporating endorsements or other star slants should be entered into with this in mind.

UNDER-COVER MEN

Espionage by any other less distasteful name has no place in the theatre. We refer to the practice of certain operators who employ so-called under-cover men to check up on managers. And despite the fact that reports of supposed delinquencies are forwarded to the erring ones, we claim that the idea is hardly sporting and reveals a lack of confidence in the theatreman's ability.

By all means, we encourage inspections of theatres and, for that matter, of the individual showman. But that checking up should be made by capable executives in the company of the manager, who will be only too willing to explain satisfactorily those items that must count as bad marks on the home office report.

Under-cover methods are unnecessary. Managers who are proven incapable or unreliable should be replaced with men able to do a good job without the necessity of onerous surveillance.

Any system that battens on the self-respect of the manager is morale shattering and must in the end defeat the very purpose for which it is intended.

WIDER HORIZONS

If the code has done nothing else, it has already proven that showmen seemingly restricted in their activities will find profitable ways and means of keeping up box office interest without violating code regulations. Instances of this are already being reported to Club headquarters from time to time, and we point to two excellent examples of quick thinking showmanship recently received.

Julius Lamm's Chevrolet lobby display promotion and Irving Feinman's costless program idea, both detailed in this issue, are just a few of the box office sources that are ready to be tapped by theatremen seeking new fields of exploitation.

Sometimes it takes an obstacle of this sort to widen the horizons of showmen limited by daily routine to a somewhat narrowed perspective.

FRANKENSTEIN?

We see no reason for any lengthy discussion in the Round Table pages on the merits or demerits of the Chatkin blast against circuit operation. Opinions on the advantages of chain management over individual operation, or vice versa, are in the same category as capital versus labor.

It all depends upon what side of the fence you happen to be on.

Box office failure cannot always be traced to the weaknesses of operation methods. Too many other angles are involved. And frankly, for every circuit executive who doesn't belong, there is an independent who is just as bad, which of course proves nothing.

Mr. Chatkin now regards chain operation as a Frankenstein. Mebbe so. But as one of the most gifted and indefatigable of its creators, he is hardly in any position to condemn others for the sins of the monster.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!

City Helps Sig On "Clark Gable Day"

Receiving confirmation of booking on "It Happened One Night" only a week in advance, undeterred Sig Solomon, city manager Wheeling, W. Va., Warner Theatres, built up showmanly campaign around Clark Gable Day, this because of star's birthplace a few miles from Wheeling. "Local Boy Makes Good" idea enthusiastically endorsed by civic heads and leading citizens who cooperated. Special meeting was called in which civic officials, heads of service clubs and other important prominents helped lay out program.

Newspaper tied in with Sig, allowing him to write all subscribers regarding big Day. Telegram and invitation to Gable and regrets from star blown up and shown in lobby. Paper sponsored "itinerary contest," prizes given to those sending in best lists of day's program of entertainment if they were hosts to the star on his visit to city.

This was hooked in to a "proxy" which consisted of papier-mache head likeness of Gable built on body that matched star's proportions. Solomon visited Gable's birthplace and arranged to have his first sweetheart in town for the day. Imprinted gum stickers were placed on street windows and autos with cooperation of Chamber of Commerce, six squads subdividing city into zones working on this.

All local organizations endorsed idea with messengers, sales people, etc., greeting all contacts with "This Is Clark Gable Day." Automobile parade in downtown district was opening event, after which Gable's sweetheart posed for photos with "proxy." Radio interviews, civic luncheon, personal appearances of sweetheart at theatre and wire from star thanking Sig for putting on Day, were other of the ace ideas on the unusual record breaking campaign, put on by Sig for a cost of only a few dollars above his usual budget, bespeaking plenty of effort on Sig's part.

Though birthplaces of films stars are not readily available for like occasions, the idea of "days" to bring in folks from outside areas is always profitable and insures invaluable citywide cooperaiton.

Andorfer Answers Kopplin's Article

For the information of those who have not been following this discussion on poster art, in last week's issue, Hal Kopplin took exception to some of the opinions expressed in Don Andorfer's recent series of articles on the subject, and below is Don's rebuttal in the form of an open letter to Hal.

Dear Mr. Kopplin:

I appreciate your reaction to my articles on theatre art and advertising, although I am sorry you took such emphatic exception to them.

As in everything else, there are two kinds of theatre advertising. Both successful. I have no argument but that you are right. I agree that the kind of advertising you mentioned in your article has been, and always will be, used by second and third rate theatres.

However, I was writing on theatre art and advertising as practiced in modern up-to-date deluxe houses. A first class theatre must necessarily be discriminate and conservative in its advertising and use only the best ideas and methods; on the contrary, Mr. Kopplin, they do sell seats. The modern up-to-date house does not make use of blare, noise and ballyhoo except on rare occasions when showing a picture that can be appropriately advertised in this manner.

I do not expect you to agree with everything I say. We couldn't agree. There is a wide gap of preference between us, and if you should "go so far" as to let me do your lobbies I would do them just as you wished. It would be useless to attempt to do otherwise, as it is obvious that you are definitely set in your ways, whereas I prefer new ideas and modern methods. The motion picture has progressed beyond the stage of the crude movie to a living screen presenting the best in entertainment. Our art and advertising must progress beyond the stage of ballyhoo and keep in step with our product.

Wishing you every success, I remain,

Very sincerely,

DON ANDORFER.

Lamm Sells Tickets On New Car Display

To Julius Lamm, Uptown, Cleveland, Ohio, a bow for working out worthy tieup that does not violate code. Approached by Chevrolet dealer to give away car, Julius conceived idea of selling motor man regular admission tickets permitting display of car in lobby, giving dealer exhibit in choice spot he could not otherwise obtain.

Dealer went for it by buying 350 tickets at regular price including tax. One was sent to each prospect for purpose of insuring presence at theatre to see car. Lamm discovered in many cases ticket holders brought friends who paid their way in. Idea reported to have resulted in definite box office increase without cost, plus attractive lobby display.

Thus proving many ways of "skinning the cat" in brains of fast-thinking showmen, code or no code. Above recommended widely for tieups wherein display of new merchandise lends itself to this treatment.

GOVERNOR PRESENTS SWEET WITH AWARD AT VARIETY CLUB LUNCH

Michigan Executive Honors the February Quigley Winner in Presence of Detroit Showmen and Leading State Officials

By W. B. LANDIS
Detroit Correspondent

On Monday, March 26, before a representative group of producers, exhibitors, exchange men, theatre managers and others connected with the motion picture and allied industries in Michigan, Mr. Howard G. Sweet, manager of the State Theatre at East Lansing, was presented with the February Quigley Award by the Honorable William A. Comstock, Governor of Michigan.

The presentation took place in the English Grill Room of the Book-Cadillac Hotel, Detroit, at a combined meeting and luncheon of the Variety Club, and after the presentation many of those present crowded about Howard to offer congratulations upon the strikingly unique campaign on "Queen Christina" with which he copped first honors.

It is all the more to Howard's credit that Governor Comstock braved the icy roads and made a trip from Lansing to Detroit especially for the purpose of making this award. He came at the invitation of Mr. George W. Trendle, president of United Detroit Theatres, who appointed and headed the Arrangements Committee responsible for the successful carrying out of the presentation.

Howard was brought to Detroit by Ed. Beatty, of the Butterfield Circuit, operators of the theatre which Sweet manages. Mr. Beatty, along with Edgar Kirschner and William B. Landis, your correspondent, were the other members of the committee appointed by Mr. Trendle. Edgar Kirschner is treasurer of Allied Theatres, first vice-president of the Variety Club and manager of the Family Theatre, Detroit.

The luncheon had been planned by Harold Munz of the Detroit Tuxedo and Century Theatres, and Roger Kennedy, business agent for Universal. The actual presentation of the plaque was made just prior to the luncheon. Governor Comstock was introduced by Mr. Trendle, who told the purpose of the monthly Quigley Awards and expressed a desire that Mr. Sweet's victorious campaign might serve as an incentive to other Michigan Round Tablers.

SWEET (AT RIGHT) RECEIVES FEBRUARY AWARD FROM COMSTOCK

In making the award, Governor Comstock congratulated Howard upon his victory and spoke encouragingly upon the progress in motion picture exploitation which is made evident in Michigan by the fact that the Quigley Award for February went to a theatre manager in that State.

In accepting the award, Round Tabler Sweet responded to the Governor's remarks with a few well chosen words of his own, in which he expressed an appreciation of the honor which was his at receiving the Quigley Award from the hands of the Governor. Howard also stated that his good fortune in winning the February plaque had placed upon his shoulders a responsibility and reputation which he sincerely hoped to maintain in future campaigns.

Seated at the speaker's table were Harold Munz, Roger Kennedy, Edgar Kirschner, George W. Trendle and Dave Newman, Judge Ferguson and of course Howard Sweet.

It would require far too much space to list the names of all those present to see Howard receive his award from the Governor. Suffice it to say, then, that the meeting and luncheon was attended by practically every representative moving picture man in Detroit and its suburbs.

Among the guests present, perhaps the most outstanding of those not connected with the amusement world were Burnett Abbott, Secretary of the Michigan State Administration Board; James C. McCabe, secretary of the Michigan State Racing Commission; and J. J. Cronan, Superintendent of State Building Construction. These gentlemen came as guests of the Governor.

Moss Stops 'Em With Ice Gag in San Diego

Ice, no winter gag in many other states, stopped Californians in front of United Artists Theatre, Long Beach, where Manager Dick Moss planted one sheet card in frozen block as stopper on "Eskimo," with further bally of man in Arctic costume carrying seal spear to point out poster highlights of picture. Drug stores and soda fountains selling much ice cream in warmish San Diego labeled drinks with picture title further exploiting via windows and ads.

Post cards with excerpts from reviews were mailed to members of local clubs; Motion Picture Council tieup made possible P. T. A. endorsement in schools and Dick made further good hookin with local radio station offering tickets for best 50 word description of Eskimo life. Plus newspaper ads and extra billing, Moss reports cost of entire campaign under $35, denoting much effort and little expense for fine box office returns reported on this engagement.

Bamberger's Windows Sell Extra Tickets

Smart window tieups created by Manager Herman Bamberger, Poli, Springfield, Mass., have brought profitable attention from locals and excellent cooperation from stores. Instance of fine work is illustrated in center column wherein ingenious idea with film background sells both merchandise and picture. Same store, town class leader also made cinema shop tieup, reported first time any leading Springfield store has gone for more than one window on a single attraction.

Although Bamberger uses other mediums to publicize his pictures, his window tieups are featured, displays on "Dinner at Eight" being effective and strong sellers.

Golden Advertises Show In 100 Mile Radius

Chevrolet put on a free motor show at the Armory in Jacksonville, Fla. Manager Walter Golden of the Riverside Theatre wanted to advertise "Roman Scandals" to the thousands who attended. No outside advertising was allowed. The theatre needed a new truck so one of the show models was purchased. Result—"Scandals" display was placed in front of truck with theatre copy.

Two chariot ballys were put out, drivers staging impromptu races wherever space permitted, sound truck and fleet of new cars all bannered parading behind the ballys with police motorcycle escorts.

Tabloids were distributed by eight men in Roman costume store to store and house to house, and small bars of Hershey chocolates were promoted and distributed in imprinted envelopes in all restaurants. Whitmark music post cards were planted in all hotel key boxes, clerks addressing cards individually in return for passes.

Booking arrangement allowed advertising outside city, and a 100 mile area was covered with newspaper ads, extra billing and road signs, the latter also used within city limits by permission of Mayor. Leading taxi company carried stickers in every cab and tire covers in exchange for short trailer.

Other tieups: Complete music hookins with stores, windows and counter plugging and bally records used on all radio stations. Lobby phonograph playing records attended by usher in costume. Lipstick tieup secured sixty drug windows; Masury paints, Cello ribbons and Standard Brands press book hookups used extensively to promote and Walter earns cheers for embracing so wide an area in selling this attraction. Campaign was applied vigorously both in Jax and in outside asea.

A distinctive front covered the entire lobby with the title in silver metallics, this idea also being used on marquee in place of valance (photo center column).

Shaffer Recommends Pay Envelopes for Advertising

Recommended for towns with factory payrolls is a pay envelope idea used extensively by Manager F. K. Shaffer, Virginia, Harrisonburg, Va., in which he supplies the money containers free of charge in return for imprinting them with his programs. This is one of the slants Shaffer put to work on "Son of Kong" wherein he contacted his schools and distributed picture literature.

Delis Reports Recent Activities in Canton

From George A. Delis, now elevated to publicity director and supervisor of the Constant Ohio Theatres, a few of the ideas he has used on recent attractions at the Palace, Canton, with Manager Keith Chambers. Starting with "Flying Down to Rio" in which the Carioca ballroom tieup was made, and plane front was used with ship promoted to fly over city throwing out heralds and passes.

For "Carolina" street bally with eight girls dressed in Carolina frocks, each carrying one letter of the title, the gown tieup also being made with department store.

Giant electric sign with five foot letters featured "Palooka" as was used at New York Rivoli. During run of trailer, laughing record was played over the sound equipment at the same time, this also being projected out front, via P. A. system.

George promoted large bannered bus for "It Happened One Night" and also had two boys ride in all local busses engaging in loud conversation regarding the picture, frequently mentioning theatre, title and starting day. Comment card distributed to patrons on this attraction added interest.

"Wonder Bar" Sells Well In Miami

Puppet Contest Brings Returns for Brinham

Marionettes are especially interesting to children. Manager Alden Brinham, New Grand, Massillon, Ohio, found this interest very profitable on "I Am Suzanne" by tying in pupils, ages from 9 and 12 at all schools, to make their own puppets. Enthusiastic teachers helped build stage and platform for marionette performance. Best of all these creations was selected and displayed in local market (see photo, center column). Sour Faces Costly Says Round Tabler

by RICHARD L. MOSS
United Artists, Long Beach, Cal.

Every time I go into a restaurant I learn a lesson in theatre operation. I will not limit my source of theatre education to restaurants, but will also take in cigar stores, department stores, gas stations—in fact, any establishment having employees.

Every time I receive a smile or a scowl from an employee, I think of my own staff. The smile makes me feel good, makes the food taste better, whereas the scowl or the curt reply gives me a touch of dyspepsia even before I start eating. I don't usually go back to a place where I haven't been treated warmly. I feel that I am entitled to this pleasantry; I'm paying for it. But, many an employee feels that he or she is doing the patron a favor by waiting on them.

So, with this long-winded analogy I come to the gist of my argument, and that is the employee's attitude in a theatre either keeps patrons or chases them away. When a patron is scowled at or directed to an aisle curtly, his frame of mind is certainly not conducive to having an enjoyable time. The trouble with most of us is that we are very sensitive and it is just these little things that either spoil or enhance our enjoyment. Just as a waitress' cold stare can chase away a customer, so can a theatre cashier's condescending glance make a patron freeze up and mentally make a note that in the future he will pick a theatre that will treat him more cordially.

From the manager right through to the ushers, a theatre should have a staff that understands and practices courtesy. A smile and a pleasant good evening will help to make or break a patron's enjoyment.

Don't have sour faces around a theatre—they'll chase dollars away from the box office.

In Boston—

Harry Browning's "Miss Fashions of 1934" local contests in M. & P. towns brought the winners to the stage of the Met, Boston, the ultimate winners touring the above towns, spotted with the picture's openings. Mayors were met, stores visited, stories planted, parades formed, excitement aroused. Myron Shellman and the rest of Browning's crew worked hard, accomplished much.

And in Erie, Pa.—

Manager Jimmy Totman, of the Warner, fired 40 "broadsides," many scoring. On "Stage Door of Hollywood," Warner radio hour, Jimmy built up interest, and did likewise with hose display with models at prominent store. Two co-op pages clicked, and paper ran three week advance want ad hookup. Radio sketch was broadcast from theatre and lettered congoleum mats on street corners brought eyes to the ground. Elaborate lobby made grand flash, cost little, due to a remake from that used on "Footlights." Smart!

Likewise at Washington—

Frank La Falce and Warner stalwarts intrigued well dressed Capital women with feature stories, style broadcasts, previews, to back up well planned ad campaign for the Metropolitan. Featured was a co-op page in busy paper, no small feat for town with Washington's high newspaper rate.

Then to Toledo—

Where Howard Feigley, Rivoli manager, fashioned unique stage revue and effected co-op page with one model dressing in a complete costume, each item supplied by different stores. Six bridesmaids assisted behind a silhouette screen, and M. C. presented each article, announcing merchant contributor.

And in Salt Lake City—

Warner-ite A. J. Kennedy aided Capitol Theatre showmen in selling designing contest to paper with fulsome publicity forthcoming a week ahead and many readers reported to have competed for promoted prizes. Western Union supplied costless messages from stars to residents, theatre supplying large badges to messengers with tieup copy. Two co-op pages, fashion broadcasts, etc., rounded out campaign that other spots are reported to have endorsed and duplicated. A bow to Kennedy.

Also in San Diego—

The New Spreckels Theatre ad crew aided by Kennedy here duplicated a number of the Salt Lake stunts, and topped those with a "perfect girl" contest with one of the papers, wherein the local girl whose measurements came closest to those published in the daily was chosen winner. Prizes included cash and an option on winner's services at Warner studio. Another smart idea was the distribution of miniature shots of the scene stills in small imprinted envelopes. All in all, a swell campaign.

Erle Brings Them In On Snow Shoes

Recent heavy snows in many sectors slowed up normal operation of business but not brains of quick thinking showmen who resorted to many devices to overcome weather obstacles in securing business. Instance, Manager Erle Wright, of Palace, New Haven, Conn.

Breaking trail through snow from home to theatre, Erle contacted radio station to broadcast announcement that theatre would be opened at the usual hour. And that special arrangements had been made for the care of snowshoes, skis, etc, which patrons were advised to don wherever possible. Special check room provided is reported to have been speedily filled with these rarely used means of locomotion.

So successful was Wright's suggestion that all sport equipment stores sold out on snowshoes and skis, resulting in satisfying business at theatre and helpful front page newspaper stories that included mention of theatre and attraction.

Erle is still making good use of his unused lobby box-office for displays on coming attractions. His latest flash is on "Queen Christina," which he states was seen by at least 4,000 patrons during the week it was shown. Photo on this in next issue.

Schools Get Behind Boucher's "Alice"

Working from various angles to stimulate grosses on "Alice in Wonderland," Frank Boucher stressed publicity among high and grade schools, arranging benefit shows whereby students sold over 3,000 children tickets and another thousand to adults.

Profitable tieup allowed posters in all city and county schools with further encouragement given pupils by awards of passes and "Alice" toys to those selling most tickets. "Alice" books given to all teachers in grammar grades who read from story to children.

Local Kiwanians plus transportation company made possible free show for orphans and other underprivileged children, and P. T. A. also aided with result that lines in front of theatre occasioned pictures and news stories in local dailies.

SELLING PICTURES VIA RADIO

Boston Member Details Procedure Of Radio Broadcast "Screenings" That Actually Boosted Grosses

by HY FINE
Production Manager
M. & P. Circuit, Boston, Mass.

That radio can be as effective a medium in ticket selling ideas as newspaper or merchant tieups was demonstrated as follows on "Sitting Pretty."

Scenes were selected from the print which best suited the purpose of demonstrating over the air the highlights of the picture. This was broadcast from our screening room and the sound was taken right from the horns and sent, by wire, to the main studio, from which point it was re-broadcast.

I represented myself as Mr. Charles R. Rogers, the producer. I had presumably received a visit from a member of the radio studio staff, and together we were witnessing some of the "rushes." The dialogue represented my explanations of the scenes and the comments of my visitor, Ed Herlihy, an announcer from the studio. My talk tied the scenes together and pointed out the highlights which were to follow, the whole creating a desire on the part of the listeners-in to see the pictures named.

The following is a sample of the dialogue used:

ROGERS: Glad you came in, Eddie. You're just in time for a treat. Let's go up to the projection room and have a look at some rushes on my latest picture, "Sitting Pretty."

HERLIHY: Fine. Say, isn't that the picture that's playing at the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, right now?

ROGERS: No, it opens there tomorrow.

HERLIHY: Well, if hit tunes mean anything, you've got a great picture. Everybody's singing and playing "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking" and "Good Morning Glory."

ROGERS: You ain't seen nothing yet, Eddie. Besides some great songs, there's a down-to-earth story. Here we are. Are you ready for us, Joe?

VOICE: All set, Mr. Rogers.

ROGERS: Sorry I can't show you the whole picture, Eddie, but it concerns a couple of song writers, Jack Oakie and Jack Haley. Shortly after the picture opens, we find Haley in the boss' office singing their first collaboration. Okay Joe, shoot!

FILM—Part 1

Then following dialogue regarding one of the hits, scene is shown where Ginger Rogers sings "Good Morning Glory." Then back to dialogue as follows:

HERLIHY: That's a great number, Charlie. Weren't they the Pickens Sisters singing that last chorus?

ROGERS: Yes.

HERLIHY: You know, a number like that, Charlie, gives one an idea of the complications involved in producing a picture.

ROGERS: I'm glad you mentioned that. This next scene takes place in the office of a film producer, played by that grand old trouper, Lew Cody. It's a madhouse, if ever there was one.

After which the "Dream Walking" number is screened and followed by final dialogue, which again mentions title and theatre.

It is interesting to report that not only were the listeners' comments most favorable, but what is more important, the business done on these pictures was outstanding.

I should like to mention that the radio station contributed both the time and the line charges necessary to transfer the program from our screening room to the main studios, which was accomplished through the friendly relations which exist between the writer and the radio station. Assuming that such relations exist elsewhere, I have no doubt that the experiment herein described will prove as successful if executed with a picture containing excellent music and interesting dialogue.

AN IDEA FROM HERE AND THERE

Baker's "Alice" Advance Lobby

(Right) H. M. ADDISON'S ad crew tied in with the Cleveland Board of Education for this Junior Aviation Show, held in the grand lobby of the State. Prize posters and models were shown, the schools allowing distribution of theatre heralds to pupils in all classes.

A Busy Front on "Kong"

(Left) ANTON JANSSEN, Aster, Minneapolis, expended a lot of profitable effort on this front to spread the word on "King Kong." Note the effective treatment of the marquee with the overhead lights for use after dark. Fronts of this nature sell well on traffic laden streets.

(Right) FRANCIS DEERING, assistant to ELMER BRIENT, Loew's, Richmond, Va., went for the always reliable upside-down 24 on "Six of a Kind." The poster company contributed the location gratis, and as to be expected, there were many phone calls to the theatre calling attention to the "error."

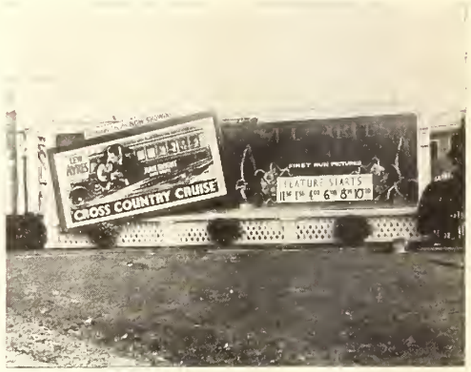
Some More Upside Down Stuff



Plenty of "Palooka"

(Left) HARDIE MEAKIN, skipper at RKO Keith's, Washington, promoted this man-sized display on "Palooka" in one of the town's best windows. Those blowups of Schnozzola and Erwin stopped many a passing foot. Hardie managed to get most of the space, but we do see one or two shirts.

(Right) HARRY S. McLEOD, operating the St. Charles, New Orleans, is responsible for this flash, said to be the only one of its kind in town. Located at a prominent traffic intersection, it catches many an eye. The 24 is changed weekly. Commendable is the starting time of feature.

A Real "Dinner at Eight"

(Left) BOLIVAR HYDE, Polk, Lakeland, Fla., is the first to put this one over, a real dinner for eight on "Dinner at 8" in the window of the leading furniture store. Store also paid for special ads calling attention to the gag, and Hyde says over 500 outsiders looked in. Aces Bolivar.

(Right) BYRON FARLEY and assistant, ARTHUR PALEY, take a bow for this window on "Easy to Love" for the Ritz, Albany, N. Y. Charley Smakwitz says it was a "first time," with the store, which managed to do a sweet job of selling the picture—and, of course, men's clothes.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 217.—(A) Just what would you use to recoat the interior of the projection lens barrel were some of the coating to come off? (B) Tell us just why the projection lens free diameter should be no larger than is necessary to admit the light beam. (C) Just why is it impossible to measure accurately the focal length of a plano-convex condenser lens? (D) Can you tell us two methods of measuring the approximate focal length of a plano-convex lens?

Answer to Question No. 211

Bluebook School Question No. 211 was: (A) What are the planes called from which a lens receives incident rays and at which rays are focused into an image? (B) If a lens be moved closer to, or further away from, one conjugate foci point, what is the effect upon the other conjugate foci point? (C) What law is brought into operation every time you move the projection lens forward or backward to sharpen the screen image focus? (D) If the lens be too close to, or too far from, the film, exactly why will the image be out of focus on the screen? (E) What constitutes the two conjugate foci points of a projection lens?

I find before me a goodly pile of acceptable answers submitted by S. Evans and C. Rau; Dale Danielson; R. J. Arntson; B. S. Englander; H. H. Menefee; W. Lemke; R. DeTotto; P. Gaeth, Jr., D. Ferguson; D. Caladine; A. F. Sprapke; G. E. Doe; J. Wentworth; H. Edwards; T. Van Vaulkenburg; W. Broadbent; G. Thompson; P. Felt; F. H. S. and P. Dalbey; L. G. Gregeson; L. Klar and F. G. Klar; B. R. Walker; B. H. Sanders, J. Jansen, D. L. Lode and K. Y. Spencer; G. Johnson and L. R. Spooner; S. T. Nic Granby; B. R. Hanson; L. R. Doty; J. H. Rathburn and D. Little; L. M. Richards; F. and J. L. Hanson; B. W. Williams; M. F. Fallon; C. B. and L. N. Traxler; L. Jones and B. L. Banning; D. D. Davis and L. Thomas; F. Sims and O. L. Davis; J. Hendershot; K. L. Hess; D. U. Granger; F. L. Benton and A. L. Dodson; G. Lathrope and N. L. Tomlinson; T. T. Golley; J. J. Richmond; D. Sanders; R. and K. Wells; D. L. Monehan and L. B. Bryant; C. Haugan and J. Torner; D. Goldberg and L. Hutche; J. J. Richmond; L. C. Northup; R. S. Fielder; D. L. Sinklow; M. F. Surmord; F. L. Sanderson; J. Lansing and R. D. Oberleigh; L. B. and D. H. Palmer; F. Ferguson and D. Lally; H. R. Baldwin; F. L. Granby; D. T. Arlen and M. Spencer; J. Turner and L. Condon; D. Breaston and D. Haber; F. Harlor and G. Harrison; M. Henderson; J. G. Paulson; T. H. Norton; T. M. Vinson; D. Jurts and D. Howard; T. Granger and T. Wythe; J. Williams and O. Allbright; A. F. Sprafke; R. Schuler and M. R. Davidson; F. J. Lyons and G. R. Squires; M. U. Sampson; P. H. Cupero; L. Grant and R. Geddings; U. L. Danielson; B. H. Thaler and S. Spanner; M. Henderson and K. L. Knight; G. Sargent.

(A) This is well and concisely answered by Evans and Rau, who say, "The planes from which a lens receives incident rays and at which the said rays are focused into an image, are known as the conjugate foci points of the lens.

(B) R. Arntson says, "If the lens be moved closer to one conjugate foci point, the other conjugate foci point will be automatically moved further away, or vice versa, if the movement be reversed."

B. S. Englander says, "Moving the lens closer to one of its conjugate foci points will lengthen the distance between the lens and its other conjugate foci point."

(C) D. Danielson answers: "The law of the definite relations existing between conjugate foci points of a lens, that altering the length of one alters the length of the other. To secure sharp definition we must so locate the lens that its two conjugate foci points are the film and screen."

(D) G. E. Doe says, "If the lens be too far from, or too close to, the film to establish the other conjugate foci point exactly at the screen, the light rays will either be in focus before they reach the screen surface, or would only focus after having passed the screen surface plane. In either event they would not at the screen surface represent the spot they should, but one larger, either because they had not yet concentrated enough, or had concentrated and started to spread out again. I say 'spot of light' advisedly, since the rays from a point in the film photograph must, of course, cover considerable area in order to secure the huge magnification existing."

(E) Some hundreds answered this correctly. The two conjugate foci points of a projection lens are the film and the screen.

I am afraid I will have to tighten up some on accepting answers as correct which really are not quite correct in all points. The list slowly grows as the number of "students' increases, and space is at a premium. I will not apply any more pressure than is necessary, though, for I believe it must encourage men to find their names among the successful ones.

I must, however, again compliment those many who have turned in answers every week for a long while without hardly ever finding themselves adjudged correct. I believe their fault is partially inability to express themselves well in writing. One man especially, down Texas way, and another in California, have answered every question for fully two years, without ever once being close enough to being correct in all points to enable me to squeeze them through, much as I would have liked to.

Recently I wrote the Texas man complimenting him highly for his courage and stick-to-it-iveness. In part his answer reads, "Yes, Dad, at times it has made me pretty blue and I've come near quitting the 'school.' But I have learned so very much by studying and trying to answer the questions, and then seeing where I was wrong when the right answer came, that I got over it and stuck. And now am I glad! Last Christmas the boss made a Christmas present of a wage increase of three dollars a week, and that is $156 a year, even if it doesn't sound like much for one week. It will get friend wife and our two kiddies a lot of things, and it was due directly to improvement in my work through knowledge gained in the Bluebook School.

"I am really not such a dummy as my answers make me seem, though maybe dumb enough after all. I just can't seem to get things on paper right, and I have no one to talk things over with, or any way to get help except through your life saving comments and the Bluebook, without which I would be sunk."

So you see, improved knowledge and its honest application to one's work is appreciated after all by at least some exhibitors and managers. Sometimes we are all a bit skeptical, but this letter provides proof.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributors. Where they vary, the change is probably due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1933, unless otherwise specified.

"1933's TEN BEST"

OF THE Ten Best Pictures of 1933 chosen in the Film Daily's poll, eight were American productions. Of those eight, seven were photographed on Eastman "Gray-Back." This is outstanding evidence of the acceptance enjoyed by Eastman Super-Sensitive Panchromatic Negative among cameramen and producers . . . and a signal tribute to the versatility and unfailingly high quality of the film itself. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

CHECKING ON TELEVISION

AMONG the periodic admonitions of our desk calendar is a notation to "check up on television." Every few months we do it with dutiful unenthusiasm. Now and then from certain quarters perhaps not too remote from considerations of the status of some quotations on the stock market there comes a gust of inferences that television, commercial television, is "just around the corner." There is also, from the same quarter, the implication that it will be important when the corner is turned.

Our latest approach was with an inquiry addressed to Mr. Merlin H. Aylesworth, of National Broadcasting Company and Radio Keith Orpheum, who can be considered to know.

"Three years ago," remarked Mr. Aylesworth, "I ventured to say that television was 'five years away.' I might just as well have said 'six, seven or eight.' So I'll say now that it is at least 'five years away now.'"

Mr. Aylesworth was talking of course in terms of television as the motion picture exhibitor might be interested in it, as a possible vehicle of competitive entertainment.

Examination of the physical facts tends to indicate that already such television as the public knows, produced by the scanning disc method, is obsolete, and that the new principles upon which the laboratories are now concentrating reveal nothing close at hand with which the public would be in any degree satisfied as pictorial presentation.

And if you like astronomic figures, consider that if the same public which is now equipped with some 17,000,000 radio sets were to go in for television on the same scale, it would be necessary to replace each radio set with a radio-picture machine costing between three and four hundred dollars—making a lovely minimum total of $5,100,000,000. That will take a lot of selling and a lot of expectancy of a very good show.

"ON THE SCREEN FOR THE SCREEN"

PARAMOUNT has just completed a one-reel exploitation picture entitled "The Stars of Tomorrow," done with rather more skill and taste than is presented by the usual standard of what may be called "trailer film." It has that element which is the essence of all good advertising, in that it is entertainment as well as "news about merchandise."

And this brings to mind again that often, but not loudly enough, reiterated notion of Mr. Will Hays that it would be well for the motion picture to concern itself with doing something "on the screen of the screen for the screen."

In this reel, the distribution of which is yet to be determined, Paramount presents an array of players of promise, including some not so promising and some who in all probability will be important box office tomorrow.

It is not immediately germane, but vastly amusing, to observe in this reel that Mr. Cecil Blount DeMille, doing a bit for his forthcoming "Cleopatra," proceeds also to demonstrate that the old maestro can steal a scene from a young actor. We left the projection room with a notion that Mr. DeMille would make as good a Caesar on the screen as he is off—with almost no make-up.

IF Mr. Harry Reichenbach were still extant one would be tempted to suspect that Miss Sally Rand's fan dance was evolved at the order of the opticians' national society. Eye strain is becoming a national curse—and the debate is not settled.

"RIGHTS" ON DILLINGER

AN advertisement* purporting to speak for Paramount gave notice that it was putting in process a story "derived entirely from the Dillinger story." The advertisement was calculated to warn other producers off. Not long thereafter Will H. Hays, as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., issued the positive statement that no picture based on the Dillinger case would be produced or distributed by any company belonging to the organization.

Now from Hollywood percolates the report of contemplated evasion under a new titling and treatment.

Meanwhile Mr. Charles Furthman, an author and criminologist, once upon a time attached to the office of the state's attorney in the hell-roaring city of Chicago, has given utterance to a plaint about "the same rights of free expression as those enjoyed by the newspapers."

To Mr. Furthman it may be pointed out that the possession of rights does not necessarily imply that their literal enforcement is discreet. For instance, under the law a pedestrian has the right to cross the Boston Post Road, or Broadway, at any moment he so desires. There are, however, times when it is best not to do so.

Those who believe in the principle of self-discipline for the industry as opposed to a super-imposed control from the outside have been cheered mightily by Mr. Hays' decision, and prayerful in the memory of "Sadie Thompson" that it does not "Rain" again.

 Paramount has subsequently issued a publicity disclaimer saying that the advertisement was "inserted in a Hollywood trade paper by an individual scenarist," . . . and that "the statements made by the advertiser were entirely false . . . " This disclaiming statement from Paramount was, however, issued under date of March 29, and subsequent to the ruling from Mr. Hays, whereas the advertisement appeared March 7.*

INDEPENDENTS PLANNING LARGER FEATURE OUTPUT

Total of at Least 346 Tentatively Scheduled for 1934-35, Compared with 306 Planned in May Last Year, 289 in 1932

By FRED AYER

Independent production and distribution in 1934-35 is due for a boom, if tentative plans for the new season made known this week by a number of the leading independents become an actuality. Sales conventions and regional sales meetings later will crystalize these plans.

At least 346 features are tentatively scheduled for independents' programs for the next selling cycle, comparing with 306 tentatively set by the early part of last May, and 289 at approximately the same date in 1932. As in the case of the majors' plans for next season, reported in the March 31 issue, the 334 figure is subject to many probable changes before the new selling season.

Double Featuring Widespread

Whether the apparent spurt is due to the increasingly widespread double feature policy is problematical. Several of the independents are increasing their output of short subjects for 1934-35. However, with dual bills not prohibited under the motion picture code—no mention whatsoever of the practice being made—it seems obvious that independents are looking forward to a less restrained market for their 1934-35 product. In the first tentative draft of the code last summer was a clause providing that double featuring would be permissible except in localities where 75 per cent of the exhibitors voted against them. In the final code, however, all references to double bills had been dropped.

Approximately 7,000 theatres are playing double features, according to Edward Golden, Monogram sales director, who declared that some of the most frequent users are among those ostensibly opposing the policy. He said this indicates an increase of 2,000 double feature theatres in the past year.

Ben Goetz, vice-president of Consolidated Film Industries, said this week that just so long as "double and triple featuring continues," the outlook for those independents with whom Consolidated deals—Monogram, Liberty and Mascot—will continue good.

Moffitt Sees Advantages

A philosophical summation of the situation was made recently by John C. Moffitt, film commentator of the Kansas City Star, who found that dual programs bring to the screen pictures appealing to the discriminating "which otherwise might remain in the can."

"There are certain advantages to the double feature policy," said Mr. Moffitt, "when it is administered intelligently and where price is low. The moviegoer who desires a lot for his money gets it."

"On the other hand, the moviegoer who demands intelligent entertainment with finesse can get it. In most cities there are not enough of these people to make it pay to operate a theatre for them."

A few weeks ago there arose a "scare" over triple-featuring, both in New York and on the Coast, but Fox West Coast local managers, the most notable "offenders" in the case, were ordered by Charles P. Skouras to stop the practice.

Joseph Schenck's View

Another turn was given the situation by Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, who arrived in New York from Hollywood this week. The independents, Mr. Schenck asserted, are flooding the market with inferior product at a time when overproduction already exists and are fostering double and triple billing, and therefore financial backing should not be made available to them, he said.

"While there is over-production," he said, "there is not enough meritorious product to permit two features on one bill."

Nevertheless, the outlook for the 1934-35 independent market looks brighter at this time than ever before.

Two of the largest independents in the business—Monogram and Majestic—were formed during the stress of the general depression, and weathered conditions to a point where their annual production budgets are placed above $1,000,000. Liberty Pictures, formed within the past year, says it is contemplating a 1934-35 production schedule comprising eight Class "A" pictures at an average negative cost above $100,000.

A comparison of the product for 1934-35 of those distributors and producers, majors and independents, who have tentatively completed releasing plans to date, shows 783 features as against 672 tentatively set last year at this time for the current schedules.

1932-33		1933-34		1934-35
Features	Shorts	Features	Shorts	Features	Shorts
*397	719	366	760	437	?
†289	99	306	194	346	?

*Majors.
†Independents.

The increase, gradual and steady, in the programs of the various independent companies over these three seasons is clearly indicated.

Tentative plans of eight independents call for 234 short subjects, including serials and two and three-reelers. This contrasts with a total of only 194 from a great many more independents last year at this time.

Higher Admissions Contemplated

With these tentative plans currently being made known, admission prices are a subject of controversy. The fixing of a 20-cent minimum admission, either by contract provision or other means, was held by New York sales executives this week to have been given legal authorization by the ruling handed down Saturday by Federal Judge John Knox in New York which upheld price-fixing under the NRA code for the cleaning and dyeing industry. Several distribution companies are considering a 20-cent minimum in new season contracts.

There has been a marked increase in the number of 10 cent admissions, but distributors now feel that with general business improving, a 20-cent minimum would meet little public resistance.

Allied of Michigan is sponsoring a plan to raise admission prices in every theatre in Detroit, and according to H. M. Richey, president, the 125 wherein the new scales are now in effect have seen no difference in attendance.

American film companies operating in Great Britain will be required to produce or acquire approximately 25 more British-made pictures this year than last, under the two and one-half per cent film quota increase which went into effect to distributors in England on Sunday.

A company listing of independents' tentative plans for 1934-35, together with additional plans of the larger companies, follows:

Announcements made by major companies during the week include the plan of Columbia Pictures to start a stock company of 12 players, who will be kept busy throughout next season. Those signed thus far include Richard Heming, Arthur Rankin, Geneva Mitchell and Patricia Caron. William Perlberg, studio casting director, is in charge.

Winfield Sheehan said this week there would be no summer shutdown at either the old Fox studios or the Westwood plant.

Paramount will reduce its 1934-35 short subject program appreciably. The schedule will be definitely set next month, according to Lou Diamond, in charge of this branch. Included will probably be the Paramount Pictorials, the Headliners series, Screen Souvenirs and the Max Fleischer cartoons.

Paramount also announced its first two features starring Lee Tracy will be "A Son Comes Home," an original, and "One Woman," with Miriam Hopkins opposite. The company will take fourteen features for release this year from British producers.

Nine features will go into production at the RKO Radio studios this month.

Douglas Fairbanks announced in London he will make a series of pictures in England for London Films, with distribution probably through United Artists.

Vitaphone plans no reduction of its short subject schedule next season. This season's program includes 130 one- and two-reelers, including 13 "Looney Tunes" and 13 "Merrie Melody" cartoons.

CHURCH SERVICE TIMED FOR FILMS

Having "fully convinced" the local clergy and the city board of Grant City, Mo., that "it is far better for the young folks to see a show in their own town" on Sunday than to drive miles for the purpose, theatres of the city are now exhibiting their wares on Sunday evenings.

With the performance beginning each Sunday evening at 8:30, ministers, it is reported by Robert O. Robison of the Grant theatre, are announcing their sermons in a manner to indicate that the service has been arranged to permit those attending to leave in time to "see the show."

WASHINGTON CONSIDERING LOANS OF SIX MILLIONS TO REVIVE THE STAGE

System of National Theatres Sought to Serve as Stimulus for Unemployment and To Rehabilitate the "Road"

The "road,"—onetime lifeblood of legitimate theatrical endeavor in the field, where the average manager was almost certain of substantial profits—is virtually on its last legs. For more than five years this branch of the theatre rapidly has been approaching its present stage of decadence to a point where theatrical interests are now turning to the Federal Government for financial assistance in a last desperate effort to resuscitate an historic enterprise, which is conceded, even by some of the theatre's most reluctant impresarios, to be "dying on its feet."

At this time requests for loans totaling more than $6,000,000 are in the hands of the government's financial agencies at Washington, with requests for at least $1,000,000 sent direct to the White House. Bernard Levey, president of the Theatrical Finance Corp., is seeking a loan of $5,000,000 through the Reconstruction Finance Corp., to revive roadshows.

Actors Seek $3,000,000 Subsidy

At the same time, a government subsidy of $3,000,000 to put actors in vaudeville and its allied fields to work, was being sought by the American Federation of Actors, a new union which now has been granted jurisdiction by the American Federation of Labor over the vaudeville and outdoor fields. The plan was proposed by Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the AFA, and was put directly in the hands of President Roosevelt. It calls for the establishment of an AFA Relief Employment Bureau to employ vaudeville units to play not only hospitals and government institutions, but also in theatres now dark. It is proposed that a national circuit of such theatres be created, with the Hippodrome in New York as a base of operations.

See Stimulus to Road

The request for $1,000,000 now in the hands of President Roosevelt was made by William H. Charlton, head of the radio and editorial division of the National Recovery Administration, as a means of setting up a National Theatre organization, which would not be only "an art theatre, but of a sound commercial venture," pooling failures with hits and showing profit on the whole, "the premise being," according to the plan of organization drawn up by Herman Gantvoort, producer, "that if all plays currently produced by men of experience on Broadway in one season were pooled, they would show a handsome profit."

The $5,000,000 asked of the RFC by Mr. Levey's Theatrical Finance Corp. would be used in a concentrated effort to bring back the status of the "road" to something approximately its "palmier days." No specific plan has as yet been worked out by Mr. Levey's interests for presentation to the RFC in order to justify the loan.

It is the belief of many New York managers and actor-managers that "National Theatres" throughout the country would serve not only to alleviate unemployment in the profession but also as a definite stimulus to the road and to stock companies. The plan is said to have met the enthusiastic approval of such managers as Arthur Hopkins, Brock Pemberton, Eddie Dowling, and others.

> About eight years ago a roadshow route sheet which sent a company into 150 cities and towns was a common occurrence. Today the record tour for two years is 17 weeks, held by the Theatre Guild's "Biography," starring Ina Claire.

According to this plan a producer would submit a play and probable budget to two advisory boards, one composed of actors and producers, and the other of prominent citizens. The members would read the play individually and discuss it at a general meeting. If the play is accepted, the producer automatically would become a member of the production board.

All profits above operating expenses on each play would be returned to the revolving fund, which would be maintained at a minimum of $1,000,000. The government loan would be repaid with interest, and Mr. Gantvoort said last week he believed this could be accomplished within two years.

Under such a set-up, which would have its inception in New York, similarly subsidized national theatres would quickly spring up in key cities throughout the country.

Hopkins Points to England's Policy

"Whether this plan goes through or not," said Arthur Hopkins this week, "it is the first concrete step in an agitation for governmental subsidy of the theatre. This country is the only one in the world except England, that has yet to take some hand toward subsidizing the theatre.

"There is no question in my mind that sooner or later the government will take an active interest in the theatre. I think the theatre will pass definitely into a government thing, because the commercial theatre, so far as I can see, is dead."

The reasons for the present state of affairs "on the road," with stock companies and, until the past season when the New York stage came ahead with a series of "smash hits" in New York's Broadway itself, have been centered chiefly around the motion picture as a competitor. Stock companies were found to have dropped from 219 in 1927 to but 22 currently, while the Broadway stage during three seasons prior to 1934 coasted downhill with similar startling rapidity.

Faulty Judgment Cited

Although some managers declared this week that the poor judgment of their fellow producers during more prosperous times in sending out third and fourth rate road companies has had much to do with the decline in theatre attendance on the road, motion picture competition, and especially the competitive angle of advance film publicity, is charged with being more directly responsible for what the managers describe as "shocking conditions" on the road today. For example, they point out, a film company has the time, money and facilities for building up an unknown player for as long a period as two years until the entire country is saturated with knowledge of his personal and histrionic career, whereas the roadshow manager is limited to a two-week maximum of advance publicity for the identical build-up.

Then, too, the competition offered by the comparatively low admission prices of motion picture theatres in the recent days of depression has helped in the downward trend of legitimate theatre attendance. Even prior to the depression, potential audiences in the field were fast becoming educated to the lower admissions of the motion picture theatres for their entertainment. This factor, of course, came into existence immediately sound pictures were established as practical entertainment.

The "road" had been "dying on its feet" for some years before the advent of sound, but the actual advent of talking pictures served in a large measure to further its moribundity.

Revolving Fund of $1,000,000 Would Be Maintained; Pictures Blamed for present Depressed Plight of the Stage

The Decline, in Figures

Eight or nine years ago a route sheet which sent a company into 150 cities and towns was a common occurrence. To be sure, the managers point out, many such routings often called for split weeks—three days in one city and three in the next—but a good play was almost always assured of at least 35 weeks on the road.

Today a two-year record is held by the New York Theatre Guild's tour of "Biography," which recently finished a 17-week roadshowing. The "Biography" tour, however, was a straight roadshow, and the Guild probably does not take into account its repertoire tours, especially those of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, which often play for more than one week in key cities like Chicago, Boston, Detroit, Milwaukee and Cleveland.

New York's roadshow managers vitriolically blame some of their colleagues for sending out second rate companies in more prosperous times and classifying them as an "original company direct from —— weeks on Broadway." This practice, they assert, has destroyed a tradition of excellent productions, maintained for years by first class road companies and has been a large contributing factor to the decline in attendance. Most of these companies were not even second rate. "Seventh rate would be nearer the mark," one manager said.

Thus New York has become the theatrical

PUBLIC PRESS APPLAUDS HAYS DILLINGER RULING

Never before in the years of his association with the motion picture has Mr. Will Hays so neatly rung the bell of public and press approval as in his ruling against the production of a story based upon the escapades of Dillinger-the-Outlaw.

The editorial pages of the daily press across the land from metropolis to hamlet are recording their cheers. The zeal of their expression tends to suggest that they have been looking for something of the sort, hungering for it, for a long time.

There has long been much talk of self-discipline for the motion picture industry, more particularly with reference to subject matter and treatment in dramatic production. Usually such of this interior discipline as is applied is by steps and of a nature that does not attain publicity, perhaps just as well. But in this rare instance in which the public gesture was made the public has approved.—TERRY RAMSAYE.

Hays Leaves for Coast

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, left New York Wednesday night for Hollywood, where he will address the MPTOA convention and confer with production executives.

RICHARD A. ROWLAND

Rowland Associate Producer at Radio

Richard A. Rowland, on Tuesday, signed a contract to become an associate producer for RKO Radio, and immediately announced he would leave Hollywood for New York to look for suitable story material for production.

Attention Turned to Films

Mr. Rowland's first contact with the amusement industry came in his boyhood when on the demise of his father he fell heir to the assets and problems of the Pittsburgh Calcium Light Company, which supplied the "limelights" of the region. The inventions of Thomas A. Edison resulted in an electrolytic method of producing oxygen for the calcium lamps and by whimsy turned the attention of Rowland to the motion picture, another Edison invention, as merchandise with which to keep his concern in business.

The Pittsburgh Calcium Light Company became in effect a system of motion picture exchanges. In 1910, after the formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company by Jeremiah J. Kennedy, and associates, Mr. Rowland sold his exchange to the Patent's company's marketing subsidiary, the General Film Company, and thereupon became interested in various "independent" motion picture projects.

Made "The Four Horsemen"

In 1915 Mr. Rowland launched Metro Pictures Corporation. Metro's first important player was Mary Miles Minter. Among others were Olga Petrova and Alla Nazimova. The most pretentious production of the concern was "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the story of which Mr. Rowland purchased, unread, when he discovered an advertisement in the New York Times announcing the forty-first printing of the novel. While this picture was in the making, Metro was purchased by Marcus Loew to safeguard his theatres in a film price controversy with his old friend and rival, Adolph Zukor of Famous Players Lasky Corporation.

In 1921 Mr. Rowland joined First National as general manager at $5,000 a week. In 1931 he joined Fox Film Corporation and subsequently became a vice-president and New York production executive. Early in 1933 Mr. Rowland resigned his Fox connection.

ASK U. S. SCHOOL FILM INSTITUTE; POSSIBLE $700,000,000 MARKET

Institute Sponsored and Conducted by Government Is Proposed to Break Deadlock of Producers and Makers

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

One hundred leading educators and non-theatrical motion picture authorities have concluded that a strong national films institute is needed in the United States, to be sponsored and conducted by the federal government, in order to effect widespread development of the educational film as a medium of instruction in all classes of educational institutions.

Such a development, they are convinced, would eventually strengthen the present weak and obsolete frame of the educational and non-theatrical film industry from a $70,000,000 structure to one worth $700,000,000.

The entire situation has been the subject of exhaustive study by the Office of Education of the Department of the Interior, at Washington. The results, compiled by Cline M. Koon, senior specialist of the Visual Education Department, in cooperation with the country's leading educators and non-theatrical film authorities, will be read at the international congress on educational cinematography, to be held in Rome, starting April 19, where 600 representatives of 60 nations will study the screen's educational potentialities in the world today.

Recommendation will be made that the League of Nations call another international congress to standardize the plans presented at Rome.

Milliken Among Delegates

The State Department at Washington last week appointed six American delegates to the Rome conference, as follows: Paul B. Mann, head of the biology department, Evander Childs High School, New York; C. F. Hoban, Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction; W. W. Charters, director, Bureau of Educational Research, Ohio State University; Cline M. Koon, senior specialist, Visual Education Department, Office of Education, Department of the Interior; Frederick L. Devereaux, Electrical Research Products; Carl E. Milliken, secretary, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

It is generally known that the leading equipment manufacturers have been quietly campaigning to make the educators of the country screen-minded, and while their efforts were suspended temporarily about two years ago in the general business situation, they now are looking forward again to the opening of this vast market.

Widespread use of motion pictures as a teaching medium probably would not mean much, tangibly, to the motion picture industry as it is now constituted. Their production probably would be placed in the hands of specialists, and not in the regular production plants of Hollywood or New York. The raw stock field, film laboratories, manufacturers of scientific school equipment and projection and screen interests would benefit most.

Nor would such films line up as competition to the regular exhibitor. On the contrary, the plan's sponsors felt that school films would make the young student mind more screen conscious.

Would Break Deadlock

The report of the United States Department of the Interior says that the motion picture is "potentially one of the chief contributions of science to education—if not the chief—but it is not being fully utilized."

The basic reason for such a governmental educational films subsidy, they say, is to break the deadlock, existing in private industry, over the fact that producers say they cannot afford to make such films until a sufficient number of non-theatrical projectors are installed, while the equipment manufacturers blame the lack of a nationwide comprehensive library of suitable films.

In addition, the educators report that such a federal subsidy is necessary because of the lack of uniform standards of equipment and films. Films in use range from 9 mm. to 35 mm., projected through many types of silent projectors and also both sound-on-film and on disc.

Various experimental projects show, according to the report, that 2,000 pupils in 31 schools in 19 states are now engaged in a single test to determine whether their English studies are improved more from the screen than from the usual book material. Preliminary reports indicate high school boys and girls are making greater strides in English from selected films picked for the experiment than from the books. The child retains two-thirds as much as the adult from his attendance at regular theatres, it was said.

35 Companies Making Films

More than 35 commercial companies now produce educational and non-theatrical films, and nearly 200 companies and educational and civic units distribute them. Most films are silent, although the demand for sound reels is growing. Virtually all the 16 mm. stock is made on safety film. Because of the illegality of running nitrate films in schools in many places without regular theatrical projection booths, there is a movement afoot to convert all 35 mm. film into safety stock wherever used as an educational medium.

Educational subjects usually run from 100 to 400 feet.

The report recommends the use of commercial sponsored reels, provided they are instructional, technically or otherwise, and do not contain any obvious advertising.

1,350 Churches Interested

The Religious Motion Picture Foundation—created and financed by the Harmon Foundation, is producing religious pictures and has 1,350 interested churches. These films are intended not only for basic religious education, but also for Sunday night services.

The report mentions the work of the Federal Council of Churches in organizing church film councils.

In explaining the need for a strong national federal films institute, the educators pointed out that its first duties should be to assemble, edit, classify, publicize and catalogue all non-theatrical and educational film material in existence, to set up a convenient and economical distribution system, and to stimulate production.

National life or historical developments are depicted in 50 regular theatrical releases annually. Mentioned were: "Wild Boys of the Road," "Alexander Hamilton" and others. The newsreels were cited as being the most constant and significant medium in this patriotic movement.

It was asserted, however, that "a considerable number of motion pictures are released each year that have an undesirable effect on national ideals and good citizenship."

The Government's investigation indicated that with business changes pointing toward more leisure for workers, there is developing an unlimited field for high grade, professional type films on vocational training. "The film is particularly well suited for teaching how technical work is done," they said.

There is a growing tendency in this country to produce pictures dealing with international topics of interest to Europe as well as America, said the report.

Mere labeling of outworn or outmoded theatrical short subjects as educational does not fit them for classroom use, warned the Department of the Interior, though agreeing that proper re-editing would make much of the newsreels and short feature films valuable to the teacher. It was said this procedure also offers much promise with some full-length features.

Use of 35 mm. Increasing

Although the silent 16 mm. type of projector is still the most commonly used in classrooms, 35 mm. are generally used in school auditoriums or in large assembly rooms. Only within the last two or three years has sound apparatus been purchased to any extent for school use.

There is no longer any necessity to provide a special darkened visual education room for the showing of educational films.

A typical experiment, conducted in Pennsylvania, showed only 11 per cent of teachers knew

U. S. AID URGED FOR EDUCATIONAL FILMS

Leading educators of the country declare that a national films institute, sponsored and conducted by the federal government, is necessary for the successful development of the educational motion picture. Reasons are: (1) to break the deadlock between equipment manufacturers and producers as to which group should take the initiative in launching the development, and (2) in order to effect a uniform standard of equipment and films now in use.

The immediate duties recommended by the educators for such a federal educational films institute should be:

1. Assemble, edit, classify, publicize and catalogue all non-theatrical and educational film material in existence.

2. Set up a convenient and economical distribution system.

3. Stimulate the production and effective utilization of educational films.

LOANS FOR STAGE ASKED

center of America to the exclusion of the rest of the country, as Katharine Cornell recently pointed out. Incidentally, Miss Cornell's tours during the past five years have been outstanding for their drawing power. Such a condition, however, did not exist before the war, when a number of cities produced not only old plays, but new ones as well, acting as a stimulus to the success of touring companies. As the development of roadshows became more apparent, only the larger cities like Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco continued to stage their own productions.

"Now this activity to all practical intent and purpose is confined to Broadway," Miss Cornell said. "This is not healthy for the theatre, for concentration of this kind not only lessens the excitement and interest the stage can exert upon the public at large, but it restricts the nature of the plays, written, produced and acted."

Miss Cornell also considers the radio as an important competitive factor to roadshows. Other New York managers said that radio entertainment could be of only secondary interest in localities where "good plays are supported." The actress-manager, however, concedes that the entire nation now receives its chief entertainment from the radio and the motion picture.

The "American Theatre"

Historically speaking, the road in American theatrical annals might justifiably be called the "American Theatre" more than any other branch of the amusement world. Rich in a tradition of names and plays, it built up personalities known to men and women from coast to coast. One-night stands, Shakespearean repertoire, tent shows and Chautauquas all contributed their bits to the creation of national interest and support of the road. Joseph Jefferson, Sarah Bernhardt, Lillian Russell, Sir Henry Irving, William Faversham and Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, in addition to scores of others, drew audiences from villages and hamlets into the nearest large town.

Today, the name of Eva Le Gallienne, a contemporary roadshow manageress, is hardly better known than that of Joe Jefferson.

Project Begun in November

Roadshow managers are not discouraged, however, or if they are, they attempt to conceal it. An example of what is being done to try to bolster up conditions on the road is seen in Kansas City. Writing off a reported loss of $15,000 in nine weeks, an ambitious attempt to revive the road in five middle western cities recently met with complete failure. The attempt was made, nevertheless, and while it was not given as the official reason for its failure, motion picture competition was generally credited with causing the sudden termination of the season and cancellation of bookings.

The project, begun early in November, and described in one of the articles in this series appearing in the January 13th issue of Motion Picture Herald, involved a combination roadshow and stock company circuit comprising Kansas City, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville and St. Louis. Arthur M. Oberfelder, Denver producer and chief factor in the movement, expected to revive popular interest in the legitimate theatre by presenting Broadway plays with well known casts at prices ranging from 35 cents to $1. Productions were cast in New York and played a week's engagement in each city on the circuit. After completion of the five-city tour, the company went back to Denver, the main base, to rehearse a new production, while another company started with another play.

The policy failed to hold up. Despite the low prices, the attractions drew small crowds after the first two or three weeks. The circuit is reported to have shown a reasonable profit at the Shubert in Kansas City, but lost in all other cities. A shortage of plays and outstanding stars available for the road was given as the official reason for closing the circuit.

Only Four Touring Organizations

Termination of the Oberfelder circuit leaves only four roadshow organizations touring the country today. These are units with Eva Le Gallienne, Walter Hampden, Katharine Cornell and the Theatre Guild.

Plays which toured the Oberfelder circuit during its shortlived existence included "Dinner at Eight," "Double Door," "There's Always Juliet," "Dangerous Corner," "Design for Living," "Ten-Minute Alibi," "Her Master's Voice," "Autumn Crocus" and "The Pursuit of Happiness."

Lowell Lawrence, drama and film critic of the Kansas City Journal-Post, pronounced the failure of the experiment as "the death rattle in the throat of an emaciated legitimate theatre which has fought a vain but valiant fight with the movies ever since the screen started talking."

Ghosts of Former Glories

"There is no question but what a fine film version of a play is better entertainment than a mediocre stage production. That is the sole reason why the Shubert has closed and, in the final analysis, that is why the legitimate stage is perishing on the road. That may not mean the stage is forever doomed," Mr. Lawrence concluded. "Ghosts of the drama's former glories may awaken from time to time, in outstanding attractions offered by the most celebrated stage stars. but changing times, and the motion picture's improvements require us to turn to the screen for our constant, unfailing source of dramatic entertainment."

Meanwhile, in New York, the managers, whom Mr. Lawrence describes as "the drama's die-hards," are unable to make any definite prognostications as to the future of the road. Nevertheless, they cling to the solace that almost anything "might happen," and point to the Broadway theatre, which has made a comeback this season with such gusto and suddenness that even the most seasoned of the town's entrepreneurs was taken by surprise.

Institute Urged For School Films

definite standards for evaluating motion pictures; and but 6 per cent knew the minimum amount of standard equipment necessary for effective instruction.

Essentials cited for the systematic introduction of the motion picture in the schools of the country are:

1. Necessary preparation on the part of teachers.

2. Adaptation of films to the various instruction units, i.e., establishing the definite relationship of the film to the unit of instruction and indicating just where the film should be used.

3. Appropriation of money in the annual budget for the purchase of films for the use of school districts.

The report urged that the United States Office of Education of the Department of the Interior, and the state departments of public instruction, also county and district education and school superintendents, the National Education Association and state teachers' associations join forces to bring about nationwide use of school films and establishment of a federal subsidiary.

350,000 Projectors in Use

At the latest count, there were 350,000 non-theatrical and educational projectors in use, with an estimated value of $70,000,000. About six-sevenths were 16mm, silent.

Thirty-four cities owned 2,579 projectors, used in municipal schools.

Sixty cents per pupil per year for visual instruction would provide an annual market of $12,310,000 for films alone. Replacement of the thousands of obsolete projectors would cost millions.

The steady growth in the use of films in classrooms was reflected in typical reports from six cities: 101,070 showings during the school year 1931-32, were increased to 148,943 showings during 1932-33, an increase of over 47 per cent.

There were 223 officials of city, district and county departments of visual education.

Less than 10 per cent of the public schools of the nation make systematic use of the motion picture for instruction, which would indicate a $650,000,000 possible market for equipment.

The Interior Department's report listed the following organizations as those most interested in the educational influence of motion pictures:

American Association of University Women, Washington.

Society for Visual Education, Chicago.

Department of Visual Instruction, National Education Association, Washington.

Federal Council of Churches, New York.

Exhibitor Groups Hear Kuykendall

Motion picture exhibitors in many states this week were holding their annual regional meetings as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America were moving toward Los Angeles for their 14th Annual Convention. At many of the regional meetings Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, was a featured speaker, notably at Memphis on Monday, where he spoke at a two-day convention of the Tri-States Association, and later in the week before the Gulf-States Theatre Owners Association in New Orleans.

Declaring that the motion picture code will be "fair because any board member or Code Authority member who is not will be drummed out of business," Mr. Kuykendall said that while it is quite likely true that exhibitors had been required to make great sacrifices for the achievement of the code, any benefits now remaining in the code were obtained by exhibitors.

Consider Ban on Star Broadcasts

Discussing the competition to the motion picture of the radio broadcasting industry through free shows in studios and theatres of the air, in addition to the appearances over the networks of motion picture stars, Mr. Kuykendall declared that the MPTOA membership, which he estimated at between 7,000 and 8,000 theatres, had contemplated barring any film star who goes in for broadcasting.

Mr. Kuykendall said the movement toward increased percentages "is growing overwhelmingly."

"With between 30 and 35 per cent for features, more percentages for that 'racket' known as score charges and five per cent for shorts, exhibitors cannot exist," he said.

Explaining the 10 per cent cancellation privilege under the code, Mr. Kuykendall said that all exhibitors should exercise it where rentals are $250 and less, regardless of what exchange men may tell them, and predicted the distributor practice of selling a block of 60 on the basis of eight specials and then pulling out specials to be sold separately will ultimately cease.

Mr. Kuykendall told the convention that steps are to be taken by MPTOA members against motion picture stars who receive unfavorable newspaper publicity, in the same way as against those who indulge in radio broadcasts—through banning of their films.

Kann Speaks on Code

Red Kann, editor of Motion Picture Daily, warned the assembled exhibitors not to expect too much from the industry's NRA code.

"The best that can be said for it is that it is only temporary," Mr. Kann declared. "For years distributors' and exhibitors' troubles have been wracking the industry. Therefore why, because of the NRA or any other alphabet department of the government, should you think four months of a code can or will do what years have failed to do?"

Among other speakers on the Memphis program were M. A. Lightman, Tri-States president and former head of the MPTOA; David Palfreyman, MPPDA; Cliff Davis, vice-mayor of Memphis.

Louisiana is faced by legislation calling for creation of an examining board of operators, which, if enacted, it was revealed at the Gulf States convention on Tuesday, would place all theatres under the domination of alleged radical labor leaders. Exhibitor leaders attending the session declared that if such an examining board were created, wages would rise to almost uncontrollable heights.

Ed Kuykendall repeated his Memphis speech, while Red Kann declared that a national analysis of theatre grosses shows an increase of 12 to 15 per cent over the same period a year ago.

Officers elected at the convention were: President, Harry McLeod; vice-presidents, A. Higginbotham, J. A. Barcellona and Charles Lauve; directors, E. J. Myrick, A. H. Yoemans, Rodney Toups, Philip A. Sliman and Joseph Alsina; legislative committee, Mr. Myrick, Mr. Higginbotham; secretary-treasurer, Mr. Sliman; assistant secretary, Jack Duffy.

Other exhibitor meetings in the past week included the sessions in Dallas of the Theatre Owners Protective Association of Texas, which Mr. Kuykendall also attended. He expressed the same opinions which he subsequently advanced at Memphis and in addition suggested the Texas group should ally itself with the MPTOA. The group voted affiliation.

In Kansas City a movement may soon get under way to affiliate the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association with the MPTOA, some exhibitor leaders there having expressed themselves as believing it to have been a mistake to have broken away from the national organization.

Three more regional meetings of the new Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio include one held Tuesday, at the Statler Hotel, Cleveland; the second on Wednesday, Deshler-Wallick, Columbus, and the third April 9, Netherland-Plaza, Cincinnati.

ADVERSE LEGISLATION PENDS IN SIX STATES

Taxation and Censorship Moves Fought in Delaware; Iowa Exhibitors Adding 2 Per Cent Levy to Admission Charges

Adverse legislation in six states is being fought by exhibitors and the industry in the last stage of this year's unusually extensive battle to protect theatres from discriminatory legislation.

The sweeping wave of law-making in the 1933-34 sessions, now nearing adjournment in several capitals, will be studied by delegates to next week's national MPTOA convention in Hollywood, and, it is expected, the organization's committee on legislation and taxes, headed by M. A. Lightman, of Memphis, will recommend concerted action locally.

State taxation and censorship laws are pending in Delaware. A general sales tax became effective this week in Iowa. Massachusetts again has a proposed state censor bill before it. New York held hearings on censorship repeal, while Ohio and South Carolina were discussing new tax measures.

The industry was generally successful in its fight, although in some places new taxes were enacted to balance budgets increased by local relief problems.

Legislative Activities in the Field

Delaware soon will be the scene of a censorship battle at a hearing in opposition to a House bill to create state censorship, sponsored by Representative George Hopkins.

Women's associations have evidenced interest in the proposed measure, which would establish a state board and make it unlawful to show pictures that had for the principal player any person who has been divorced or who has been convicted of any crime involving moral turpitude.

Representative George Elliott offered an amendment to the Hopkins bill which automatically would ban in Delaware any motion picture in which the leading player had been twice divorced.

Representative Elliott also has presented in the House a tax bill which would require each theatre in the state to pay a levy of ten cents per hundred feet of film shown. Those owning or leasing theatres in Delaware would be compelled to report monthly to the state treasurer.

2 Per Cent Tax Added to Iowa Tickets

Iowa theatres last Sunday started to include the new sales tax of 2 per cent in all admission charges. The schedule follows: one cent on tickets from 10 cents to 50 cents, and two cents on tickets from 51 cents to 80 cents. The law will remain in effect until April 1, 1937.

Massachusetts legislators again were presented with a bill to create a state censorship board. The measure was introduced by Representatives Dorgan and Dolan.

New Kansas legislation bringing state laws in line with NRA provisions is held by Kansas City distributors to legalize film contracts which had been voided by the Kansas supreme court some time ago on the ground of illegal price fixing.

The distributors have discovered that an act suspending the state anti-trust laws to permit industries to operate under NRA codes legalizes the minimum admission clause in contracts, by virtue of the fact that the film code does not forbid such minimum admission schedules.

The act which is interpreted by distributors to cover the point was passed by the state legislature at its last special session.

New York film interests were renewing their 13-year-old fight to abolish the state censorship board. The House recently held a hearing on repeal proposals, and the industry was backed in its arguments by many important liberals of the state, including Jesse S. Raphael, the City Fusion Party of New York City, former Governor Al Smith, Chancellor Harry Chase, of New York University, Bishop Francis McConnell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Will Irwin.

Ohio legislators still were wrangling over sources of revenue for relief purposes. Senator D. J. Gunsett introduced a bill to levy a tax of five cents per foot on films. The bill automatically would repeal the existing 10 per cent admission tax. Governor White sent a special message advocating a special 3 per cent general sales tax, which would include admissions.

South Carolina advanced a step further the proposed bill to tax theatres based on seating capacities. This would repeal the present 10 per cent admission tax. There would be a tax of $1 per seat per year in towns of 1,500 population, and $2 per seat for others.

DeForest Appeals Paramount Claim

Claims against Paramount Publix approximating $2,000,000 and filed by DeForest Phonofilm and General Talking Pictures, in addition to an undetermined claim filed by American Tri-Ergon, which were denied last week by Referee Henry K. Davis, are to be appealed this week in New York in the United States district court. The claims are based on alleged infringements of sound patents held by the claimants.

Referee Davis ruled that the claims did not represent damages resulting from the Paramount bankruptcy and disallowed them. A petition for a review of the referee's ruling by the district court was filed immediately.

A federal court action for an accounting by Paramount to determine the extent of damages resulting from alleged infringements of sound recording and reproducing equipment was filed by American Tri-Ergon more than a year ago.

A ruling by Mr. Davis that Chase National Bank, as trustee under a $20,000,000 Paramount indenture issue, has a valid claim against the bankrupt, was affirmed by Judge John M. Woolsey in U. S. district court, New York. Paramount trustees had asked for a review of the referee's ruling denying a motion to expunge the claim.

Louisville Supply Dealer Dead

Charles Nicholas Koch, 53, president of C. N. Koch & Co., a theatre supplies firm, of Louisville, Ky., died last week at the City Hospital in Louisville. He is survived by his wife, a brother, and a sister.

HAPPY ENDINGS FOR PICTURES

Happy endings to all pictures are demanded by 99 of every 100 persons attending the motion picture theatre, writes an exhibitor this week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S "What the Picture Did for Me," the exhibitors' own department in which America's theatremen—and showmen from other parts of the world—call a spade precisely one spade, redoubled.

Two reports in this issue that concern the matter of happy endings come from exhibitors in Virginia and Michigan, as follows:

MAD GAME, THE (Fox): This would have been satisfactory entertainment but for the sad ending. As one young man remarked, they went out of their way to ruin it. Ninety-nine of every hundred people want a happy ending to all pictures. Business off.—MRS. R. D. CARTER, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

ONLY YESTERDAY (Universal): Great work by Margaret Sullavan in a story with a sad ending. I couldn't coax the neighbors in to see it, but had a lot of nice compliments on the picture from the few who came.—ROY W. ADAMS, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Sheehan and Schwab Salaries Top List

An echo of the recent investigation by the Federal Trade Commission into large salaries of some of the nation's leading business men, and published in the March 3 issue of the HERALD, was heard this week when the Commission made public another report on the "better paid executives of the nation's highest paid executives."

Two men led all the rest during 1933—one of them Winfield Sheehan, vice-president of Fox Film Corporation, and the other Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of Bethlehem Steel Corporation—each with a salary of $250,000.

The only other executive in the country whose actual salary crossed the $200,000-mark was G. F. Kelly, president of Anaconda Copper Mining Company, who drew $208,402.

New Actors' Union Gets Charter from A. F. of L.

An American Federation of Labor charter was officially presented last week in New York to members of the newly organized American Federation of Actors. More than 1,200 performers attended the first meeting. Several city officials were present. Included in the membership are film players, vaudeville, club, cabaret and restaurant performers, and players in minstrels, circuses, carnivals and fairs.

Fred Keating presided. Bernard S. Deutsch, president of the Board of Aldermen of New York, the principal speaker, pledged his support to the organization and pointed to a "new era" for organized labor.

EXHIBITORS CONSIDER FIGHT AGAINST NATIONWIDE UNIONIZING DRIVE

Kuykendall at Memphis Convention Says New Unions Cannot Be Permitted Where None Existed Unless Exhibitors Say So

Threats of impending action by motion picture theatre owners against labor's campaign to effect wholesale unionization of theatre employees were heard this week in exhibitor quarters as new developments complicated the labor situation.

Addressing a convention of Tri-State Motion Picture Theatre Owners at Memphis on Monday, Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA and an exhibitor member of the Code Authority, gave the first indication that trouble is brewing over the growing movement to effect nationwide unionization of employees at theatres.

Although the code specifically says that no employer shall interfere with the rights of any employee to organize, Mr. Kuykendall told the exhibitor delegates that organized labor cannot be permitted to organize new unions where none now exist unless exhibitors want them.

This appears to be in direct contrast to Article III, Section 1 (a) of the Code, which says: "Employees shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives, or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purposes of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection."

Meanwhile the unionization campaign was underway, especially in New York, where a new union is seeking to organize service help.

"Stop Unions from Running Business"

Mr. Kuykendall stopped off at Memphis over the weekend en route to another exhibitor gathering at New Orleans. He told the Tri-State theatre owners that a way will be found to prevent theatre labor from running the exhibition business.

Approximately 700 IATSE (projectionists and stage hands) organizers recently were sent into the field to organize theatre employees, Mr. Kuykendall said, and as many more will go out shortly for the same purpose.

Later in the week at the annual convention of the Gulf States Theatre Owners' Association in New Orleans, Louisiana delegates revealed that they are faced by special legislation designed to create an examining board of operators, which, it was said, would place all Louisiana theatres under the domination of alleged radical labor leaders.

President Roosevelt's recent request that industries effect a 30-hour week, wherever possible, to alleviate the unemployment situation, caused the Code Authority in this business to launch this week a nationwide investigation of of wage conditions and schedules of working hours in exhibition, distribution and production.

Meanwhile, the Code Authority started mailing 18,000 applications for NRA labor wage posters to all interests. Under a recent NRA ruling, all theatres and other enterprises in the business must post, in a conspicuous spot, the wage scales and working schedules in effect.

Regional Labor Boards, set up in each of the principal cities, may investigate cases on complaint of either the exhibitor employer or any of his employees, individually or as an organization. The boards have no authority to force the appearance of anyone at a hearing, but since the boards are not supposed to be prejudiced, it would appear to the advantage of both sides to appear.

WEEK'S HIGHLIGHTS IN LABOR SITUATION

1. Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, told a southern exhibitor convention that a way will be found to prevent labor from running the business, indicating 700 IATSE union organizers are now busy in the field and as many more are about to go forth to attempt nationwide organization.

2. The Code Authority was preparing to undertake nationwide investigation of wage conditions and hours.

3. Exhibitors were investigating status and rights of local Regional Labor Boards as the boards pushed complaints for non-compliance.

4. The Code Authority began to effect compliance with an NRA order to compel exhibitors and others in the business to conspicuously post wage scales and working schedules.

5. Regional Labor Boards succeeded in adjusting troubles between labor and owners in some places, as complaints were being heard in others.

Compromise Scale in St. Louis

The troublesome labor situation in the St. Louis independent theatre field was ended last week. The operators will receive some $14,000 in back wages, while their basic wage in 21 independent theatres seating less than 700 persons will be reduced from $45 to $40 a week. The reduction will prevail during the period the code is in effect.

The projectionists were receiving $75, $66.50, $47.50 and $45, up to April 16, 1933, according to the size of the theatre. On that date wages were reduced, respectively, to $60, $56.50, $42.50 and $40, to remain in effect until Aug. 23, 1933. On that date the projectionists demanded restoration of the old rates, which was made. However, on September 5, the reduced scales again were made effective pending a final settlement.

Last week, at Washington, exhibitor and union representatives reached a satisfactory settlement. Under it the projectionists are to receive the back pay to September 5, some $14,000, but in turn they agreed to accept the $40 a week scale in houses seating less than 700 persons.

During the next year and a half, the 21 independents are expected to save $16,000 under the compromise.

While representatives in New York of the new theatre service workers' union, Local 118, Theatre and Amusement Employees, had resumed conferences with some of the large New York circuits, over recognition of the organization, charges of discrimination against Local 118 members by independents were lodged with the Regional Labor Board of the NRA in New York.

Discrimination charges also were preferred against RKO and against the management of the Tivoli theatre, Brooklyn. The NRA Regional Labor Board is said to have forwarded to Washington a report of activities of Loew theatres in connection with employees who are members of Local 118.

The NRA is seeking to compel Manhattan Playhouses, New York, to reinstate two Local 118 ushers who were said to have been discharged for their union activities.

The NRA regional labor board in New York ordered RKO to grant back pay to 14 employes of the RKO Albee in Brooklyn who had filed charges that they were working 52 hours weekly instead of 40 hours, as prescribed by the code, although they were being paid on a 40-hour basis.

Code Authority Plans Inquiry on Wage Conditions; Exhibitors Study Rights of Regional Labor Boards Handling Complaints

Other Independents Warned

Other local independent owners were warned against continued violations of the code's labor provisions on wages and hours. Twenty-five employees appeared at an NRA hearing and charged they were compelled to work 50 to 84 hours weekly, in some instances for 14 cents an hour. The New York State NRA Compliance Board, headed by Nathan Straus, Jr., took this matter under advisement.

New York's complex situation involving independent owners and projectionists was nearing a climax. The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York sought an appeal on Monday in the state court of appeals against a recent order made by Judge Collins in supreme court ordering 11 theatres belonging to the ITOA to reinstate 55 projectionists affiliated with Local 306 of the IATSE, who allegedly were dismissed in violation of the National Recovery Act.

The independent exhibitors' organization, in a brief filed Monday at Albany by Weisman, Quinn, Allan and Spett, New York attorneys, charged that "the National Recovery Act is unconstitutional."

The exhibitors denied that they were trying to "bring about the disintegration and destruction" of Local 306, by boycotting it or otherwise.

Unions Fight in Cincinnati

Charles Elston and Arthur Fix, attorneys representing the projectionists' local, No. 327, at Cincinnati, filed suit in common pleas court against the Sound Projectionists' Union of America, asking for an injunction against the defendants using the name they have adopted, and that Sound Projectionists be declared not a bona fide union.

The union situation in Milwaukee is on the mend. Seventy-five union projectionists were reported as having returned to work through agreements that have transferred 28 local houses from non-union to union classification.

Theatre ushers in Milwaukee and thereabouts are not guaranteed a 40-hour week under a new agreement reached with exhibitors, but where they are employed 40 hours they are to receive $12.50 a week, which represents a compromise between the $10.00 code minimum and the $15.00 minimum formerly received under the President's blanket re-employment agreement of last year. Ushers employed for less than 40 hours are to receive a pro-rata scale at the $12.50 rate.

YELLOW JACK

The life and death of a black mosquito held a Broadway audience spellbound for two hours and twenty minutes without any intermission.

The life and death of this mosquito was epical, dramatic, frightful. This mosquito challenged the brain, the resources of man; it challenged Science. And Science, in the name of Walter Reed, Jesse W. Lazear, Aristides Agramonte, Dr. Finlay and others, licked it.

Paul De Kruif wrote a famous book about it, "Microbe-Hunters." Sidney Howard, aided by Guthrie McClintic, Jo Mielziner and Paul De Kruif himself, put it into a memorable "play" in nearly thirty scenes.

It will make a picture that ought to outlast any picture made up to date. For here is the dignity of Man re-asserted in all its rarely encountered self-sacrificing grandeur. Here is nobility. Here is great adventure—the eternal adventure of Man with Disease—in this case yellow fever and how it was stamped out.

The scenes are mostly in Cuba in 1900, during our first occupation. There are humor and pathos in the lives of the soldiers, the bravery of those who volunteer for inoculation and the historic sacrifice of Lazear for Science.

There are also scenes today in Africa, where the fight of the soldiers of Science goes on against yellow jack and its carrier, the mosquito.

There is one woman in the Howard play, a nurse. In the picture a romance could be woven around one of the doctor-soldiers—Love or Science? Here is a dramatic possibility which I offer as a suggestion, a choice between love and death that future generations may be saved from a scourge.

There is fine acting by Edouardo Ciannelli as Agramonte, and Whitford Kane as Dr. Finlay, the somewhat demonic originator of the mosquito theory of yellow jack.

Here is work for the most intelligent and serious director in Hollywood.

THE PERFUMED LADY

After that scintillant piece of airy hilarity, "March Hares," I am always on tip-toe expectancy when a new play by Harry Wagstaff Gribble (a most competent play director also) is announced. Gribble has a laughing madman in his head.

But it wasn't very mad and didn't chortle wildly enough in his latest opus, "The Perfumed Lady," which promises more than it exudes.

The audience, I believe, enjoyed it more for its sex-quips and the stationary offstage bedroom of a young and amorous bachelor than it did for the story, which is pretty creaky and old. Besides, there is an interminable amount of padding and much sandy waste between giggles.

PLAY RATINGS FOR PICTURES

Benjamin DeCasseres, noted essayist and critic, gives the following ratings as potential screen material to the plays discussed in this issue:

"Yellow Jack"—100 per cent.
"The Perfumed Lady"—50 per cent.
"Too Much Party"—20 per cent.
"4 Saints in 3 Acts"—"Double or quits."

All this does not sound promising for the screen. Nevertheless, there is in "Perfumed Lady" solid substance for a picture for some swanky actors and actresses of the sophisticated-the-cat's-whiskers school. It must also be soaked in soapsuds in spots. Some of the dialogue is smelly.

In brief: Homer Pellett and Warren Pascal, bachelors, well-heeled, live together. Warren is engaged to Homer's sister Catherine. Warren is a high-necker and Homer is somewhat old-fashioned, a hard-worker and a ten o'clock bedtimer.

The complications (too complicated technically) come about through the girls that Warren smuggles into his room, the conflict between the two friends (libertine and Puritan), and the ultimate collapse into marriage of goody-goody Homer with the very worst one of the female lot, who is a gun-toter just for good weight. One of her victims shows up—a Hans Platt—in the last act.

But they all boob Homer to a finish, and the play ends with knowing smiles and the cat's-whiskers wiggle on all lips but Homer's, who is ignorant of the real character of his fiancée.

Helen Brooks, Ben Lackland, Thomas Bate, Marjorie Peterson, Brian Donlevy and others did good work (Wee & Leventhal producing).

TOO MUCH PARTY

An organization styling itself the Metropolitan Players, produced a play called "Too Much Party" (not a bad picture title for one of those fillers between Laurel and Hardy and the newsreel). Hiram Sherman was the author.

Mr. Sherman did his honest best to portray an "advanced" Middle West family called the Deans; but there only resulted one of the worst plays of the season—which doesn't mean it wouldn't do after some touching up for picture jack.

The Deans are a pretty tough lot. Papa is around Europe mostly, making the upkeep.

Mrs. Dean is going in for politics—wants to be a probation officer, or a Dillinger Sheriff, or something.

Miss Dean is careless of her honor. She's a débutante who goes in and out of her boy friends' apartment thataway.

Son Dean's idiosyncrasy in forgery.

In blows Agnes. She has fits, head trouble and is about to have a baby. She's the new soivant goil. Hagar, the high-toned soivant, walks out on the Deans.

Out of this lobscouse, the action, the dilemma, the creeping menace, and the denudement begin to swirl and spurt.

By the way, the boy Dean marries the saloonkeeper's daughter. A scenarist might start right from this important fact and bridge-work the script backward.

4 SAINTS IN 3 ACTS

The vogue of nonsense on the screen, the stage and books is a proof of the tragic times we live in. If it wasn't for this escape through the back-door of the Absurd we'd all become crackpots (if we haven't already become so).

Personally, I can't get too much of the Marx brothers, the Schnozzle, Cagney, Disney, Joe Cook, Willie Howard, Bobby Clark and the other Lords of Nonsense. It takes my mind off of the Big Bad Wolf, Spengler.

But have you ever tried to read Gertrude Stein? Nonsense has its common-sense laws, you know; but Gertrude's stuff is just dippy-daffy. It is sheer maundering.

It's the screaming abracadabra of a magpie sitting at the bottom of Niagara Falls under a pink umbrella with a tassel of baloney.

And here she's made a hit in a play that no one understands, that no one knows what the words in the play mean, that no one can ever hope to understand!

"4 Saints in 3 Acts," words by La Stein and ear-pelting music by Virgil Thomson, succeeds just because it is the last word in dazzling hokum. For dazzling it is—all in cellophane, with blaring costumes of all periods, exotic scenery, piercing, fulgurant light effects, and sung by negroes as only these born warblers can sing.

"4 Saints" came for two weeks only (Harry Moses took the chance). It remains indefinitely. (Well, who knows anything about the public, Messieurs?)

Personally, I was puzzled, enchanted, floored, crowned, hypnotized. I don't know what it's about. It's something for the most advanced and crack-brained producer of Hollywood.

Picture value, double or quits.

Reopening Kansas City Pantages

Rewot Corporation has been formed in Kansas City to operate the Pantages and the next-door 12th Street, a smaller house. M. W. Reinke is president, and S. Bernard Joffee, recently resigned as manager of the Fox Uptown, is vice-president. The plan is to reopen the Pantages April 17 under a new name, the Tower theatre. The 12th Street will be known as the Downtown.

No Plans to Drop Film Boards, Says C. C. Pettijohn

Vigorous denial of a published statement that there had been discussion pointing to the abolishment of the Film Boards of Trade in the field was voiced Wednesday by Charles Clyde Pettijohn, general counsel of the boards. Said Mr. Pettijohn:

"There has been no such discussion, nor has there been any occasion for such a discussion. Every one in the motion picture industry who wants to see the code machinery in the field operated in a thoroughly efficient manner will first want to see how many of the well-trained Film Board secretaries are accepted as secretaries of the Local Grievance and Local Clearance Boards. After that we'll decide if there is any further necessity for continuing this field organization to work with exhibitors on legislative and other matters."

Mr. Pettijohn said that in any event, "we will be able to continue to work with exhibitors in fighting discriminatory legislation, and we hope we will be able to continue the same splendid cooperation which we have had in legislative matters."

Fox-Hearst News Deal Reported Off

The newsreel arrangement by which Fox Movietone News and Hearst Metrotone Newsreel, distributed by MGM, were produced jointly, last week was reported to have been canceled by Hearst. Rumors indicated that William Randolph Hearst would continue on his own in that field, and, it was understood, a new company to be owned by the newspaper publisher and MGM, would be formed immediately.

On Wednesday, however, Fox Movietone officials declared they "could say nothing about the rumors at this time," and said the current contract whereby Fox produces the Hearst reel "still has the better part of this year to run."

Warner vs. Erpi Suit Postponed

One of the greatest litigations involving the motion picture industry, the anti-trust suit brought by Warners' Stanley Company, Duovac Radio and General Talking Pictures, against Electric Research Products, Inc., Western Electric and American Telephone and Telegraph, scheduled for trial on Wednesday in U. S. district court at Wilmington, was postponed, and may be settled out of court, it is understood.

Lawyers for both sides appeared and asked that the trial be continued until some time in the fall. It was learned that settlement is a possibility, although none of the counsel in Wilmington would discuss it.

PATHE EXCHANGE NET $570,966 FOR YEAR

Profit More Than Double Total for 1932; Funded Debt Reduced $184,000; Current and Working Assets $1,069,196

Pathe Exchange, Inc., of which Stuart W. Webb is president, this week announced a profit for the year of 1933 of $570,966 before interest charges, but after deducting all expenses, taxes, amortization and depreciation of properties. This compares with $275,756 for the year 1932.

Funded debt was further reduced by $184,000 during 1933, through the operation of the sinking fund and through purchases in the open market. Funded debt outstanding at the end of the year amounted to $2,065,500, a reduction of $3,934,500 from the original issue of $6,000,000 in 1927.

Current and working assets as of Dec. 30, 1933, amounted to $1,069,196, comparable with $608,436 as of Dec. 31, 1932. Current liabilities as of Dec. 30, 1933, totaled $147,364, compared with $105,101 Dec. 31, 1932.

Total Assets $7,052,409

Total assets at Dec. 30, 1933, amounted to $7,052,409, compared with $6,790,218 as of December 31, 1932.

The company's principal assets at the close of the first quarter of 1933 included cash and investments amounting to $686,706; the laboratory and equipment at Bound Brook, N. J., inactive and reduced in value on the books through a special reserve to the nominal value of $97,983; 4,900 shares, or 49 per cent, of the capital stock of Du Pont Film Manufacturing Corp., carried on the books at $4,000,000, and six per cent notes of Radio-Keith-Orpheum in equity receivership—at a face value of $1,696,550.

The Bound Brook laboratory, which develops and prints film, offered an opportunity to add to the value of the 49 per cent interest in Du Pont Film. This investment is considered of vital importance to Pathe stockholders of all classes, although actual control—51 per cent—of the company is vested in E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., of Wilmington.

Du Pont Film was organized in 1925 by Du Pont and Pathe interests jointly—Du Pont supplying money and management in return for the controlling interest, while Pathe provided processes and an assured market for the manufactured film during the critical development stage.

Part of Business Regained

The Film Company had made rapid progress in the motion picture field; within a few years it had attained a good earning capacity. However, in 1931, the Film Company received a temporary setback through the loss of the Pathe outlet, when the Pathe motion picture producing and distributing properties were sold to RKO.

"A part of this business has been regained for our Bound Brook laboratory and the Film Company under processing contracts with RKO subsidiaries which became effective October 1, 1933," the report stated.

The regular dividend on Pathe's holdings in Du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation has amounted to $196,000 annually, beginning with 1930. In addition, an extra dividend of $441,000 was received in 1933, as set forth in the profit and loss statement which follows. Total dividends paid by the film company in 1933 were in excess of net earnings for that year and a continuation of extra dividends will depend, the report says, not only upon the course of earnings, but also upon the desirability of retaining earnings for increased capacity and working capital, "which we hope will prove necessary."

Capital Stock in Three Classes

The capital stock of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is divided into three classes, namely, the 8 per cent cumulative preferred, Class A preference and common. The 8 per cent preferred have a par value of $100. Of these, 30,000 shares were authorized and 16,909 issued, with 8,866 shares acquired and held in treasury and 8,043 shares outstanding in the hands of the public.

Of the Class A preference shares, 251,853 of the 500,000 authorized were issued, with 9,030 shares acquired and held in treasury and 242,823 shares outstanding in the hands of the public.

One and one-half million shares of common were authorized and 950,926½ issued, with 2,345½ shares acquired and held in treasury, while 948,581 shares are outstanding.

The comparative statement of profit and loss for the 52 weeks ended Dec. 30, 1933 and Dec. 31, 1932, follows:

MONOGRAM MEETING LAYS 1934-1935 PLANS

All But Seven Features for Current Season Completed As 50 Franchise Holders Open Convention at Atlantic City

With all but seven feature pictures on its 1933-34 schedule completed to date, Monogram Pictures Corporation went into its fourth annual convention on Wednesday at the Ambassador Hotel in Atlantic City to decide upon the 1934-35 program. Approximately 50 franchise holders, headed by W. Ray Johnston, president, were present Wednesday morning when Daniel Brier, assistant general counsel of Atlantic City, opened the sessions with a speech of welcome.

Executives Address Session

Following the address of Mr. Brier, Mr. Johnston sounded the gavel officially calling the convention to order. Brief addresses by various executives followed Mr. Johnston's opening remarks, which described the company's activities during the past year. Among those who spoke at the first session were Trem Carr, who discussed production; Lou Ostrow, executive producer; Harry Thomas, First Division president and distributor for Monogram; Edward Golden, sales director who discussed selling policies for next season; Ed Finney, advertising and publicity director; and Al Blofson, Irving Mandel, Jack Berkowitz, Arthur Bromberg, Nat Lefton, Floyd St. John, Claude Ezell and Oscar Hanson, franchise holders and branch managers, who made brief reports.

Mr. Johnston said earnings from March, 1933, to February 28, 1934, showed a net profit more than double that of the previous year, and indicated he would recommend placing the stock on a dividend basis. Gross billings exceeded the previous fiscal year by $577,021, and combined film rentals of the 37 affiliated exchanges in fiscal 1933 slightly exceeded $4,000,000, he reported. Several foreign offices had been opened.

Officers elected Wednesday night were: Mr. Johnston, president; Mr. Carr, vice-president; J. B. Friedhoff, treasurer; Madeleine S. White, secretary. The new executive committee: Mr. Johnston, Mr. Carr, Herman Rifkin, Irving Mandel and Norton Ritchey.

To Ask $1,500,000 Budget

Mr. Carr was expected to outline his ideas for new season production, which he discussed last week in New York.

At that time Mr. Carr declared that the motion picture code had raised production costs more than 20 per cent, but that while producers cannot look for an increase in revenue to offset this condition until general business conditions are more generally stabilized, the production branch could not afford to stint in employment of the best talent available. Accordingly, Mr. Carr said, it was his intention to place under contract at least ten stars and feature players for appearance in six pictures on the 1934-35 program. Mr. Carr intends to ask a $1,500,000 1934-35 production budget of the franchise holders.

Discussions on executive, production, sales and advertising policies were scheduled for Thursday and Friday sessions. On Saturday the convention was to participate in an open forum on the code, with John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the Code Authority, presiding.

The convention officially comes to a close on Saturday night with the annual convention banquet and dance.

Individualism Necessary In Pictures: H. B. Franklin

Declaring the time is ripe for individualism in pictures, Harold B. Franklin was to sail Friday for London, where he will spend four weeks. Mr. Franklin said when he returns he will have "something definite to announce" as to his plans. Arch Selwyn and Jed Harris, Broadway producers, will accompany him.

Mr. Franklin plans to produce, in association with Mr. Selwyn, a number of plays, later filming those that prove successful. They will negotiate with C. B. Cochran in London to produce three of his London stage successes in New York with the same stars.

M. J. Moses, Writer on Stage, Dead in New York

He was noted as well as a translator and lecturer, his best known translation having been of the Passion Play of Oberammergau, in 1909.

GOLDBERG GOES CHATKIN ONE BETTER ON HOME OFFICE OPERATION FALLACY

Declares New York's Decisions Are 99 Per Cent Erroneous on Problems of Theatre Managers in the Field

Exhibitor Points to Obstacles Placed in Path of Community Goodwill by Accounting Department and Executives

By LEE L. GOLDBERG

Lee L. Goldberg, who agrees 115 per cent with David J. Chatkin's conviction that long distance operation of theatres from a circuit home office is detrimental to exhibition, began as a press agent in 1906 at the Hopkins theatre in Louisville, and for the Fontaine Ferry Park which played big-time Keith vaudeville. In 1913 he became manager of the National there, and when Keith merged the National with the Mary Anderson and the Strand he handled the three. In 1916 he resigned to become a First National franchise holder for Kentucky and Tennessee with Colonel Fred Levy. On sale of the chief theatre interests to Warner in March, 1931, he was named Kentucky zone manager and remained in that office until November, 1933. Mr. Goldberg now is reunited with Colonel Levy in operation of theatres and exchanges.

Dave Chatkin's article, recently published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, pointing out the failure of circuit theatre operation from New York, must have won the plaudits of every one familiar with the subject.

Reflecting upon my recent experience, while acting as zone manager for a certain theatre chain, I echo Dave's sentiments. In fact, I can supply further evidence of the damage wrought upon this industry by misguided theatre executives, swiveling before their desks in New York.

My base of operation was over 1,000 miles from New York. There were 14 theatres, located in towns of population ranging from 5,000 to 25,000. They were "store shows" by comparison with some of the "de luxe" houses operated by the circuit in metropolitan centers. These theatres, of which I had been an active part owner, were profitable for many years previous. With all due modesty, I had enjoyed a reputation as a capable picture executive—my experience starting in 1906 and embracing active service as managing head of large theatres in key points and smaller towns as well as exchange manager, exploitation man and what-not.

Obstacles from Home Office

The original general manager of the organization had confidence in me, and so did the men then in charge of the film buying. As a result, I was given carte blanche to operate my zone as though it were a separate unit apart from the entire body. Not because of my peculiar ability, but rather due to the wisdom of decentralized operation, our circuit in the first few months ranked close to the top. On the balance sheet, our houses stood out in bold relief in black, while "the de luxers" continued, consistently, to be reflected in glowing red.

One of the first constructive ideas we were successful in planting was to get the local papers in all our towns to publish a two-page series of announcements, welcoming our new organization, in which all the leading merchants and organizations joined. Included was a pledge, signed by all the theatre employes, to the patrons, assuring them of improved entertainment and physical service. I planned this with the thought of disabusing the local public of entertaining any thoughts about the usual changes in management brought about by chain operation. Our managers were permitted to continue as members of luncheon clubs and were otherwise encouraged to do everything possible to retain the good will of the local community.

Soon, though, I found the accounting department in the home office was placing all kinds of obstacles in the way of retaining the good will of the local people. For example, an insurance agent, who had been helpful in reducing our tax assessments, had his policies cancelled without any reasonable notice. In another town, the banker who had been most influential in getting our Sunday shows to go unmolested, lost our accounts in favor of another bank, which had been definitely lined up with the anti-Sunday element. If a manager bought 50 cents' worth of hardware from a local dealer, we were severely criticized for not getting it through a wholesale firm down East. The saving would be about seven cents, several times consumed by the necessary carrying charges.

Then Comes Icy General Manager

Even with all this interference from the accounting department, we were operating somewhat successfully until suddenly a man, never before connected with active theatre operation, was named general manager. Instead of trying to gain the confidence and friendship of his subordinates, he immediately set about to present the accepted picture of a hard-boiled executive—a frozen countenance, an austere manner and every word of speech displaying ego and an utter lack of understanding of the problems of the men in the field.

Gaining an audience with him to discuss an important matter of operation was just impossible. The only time the writer did speak directly with him was when I was called on the carpet because I had ignored the orders of a certain young relative of the company heads (one of the many relatives) who had bawled me out unmercifully because I had passed for payment a newspaper bill aggregating a few dollars when the compositor had spelled O'Brien as O'Bryan. (Just imagine, with our newspaper rate so ridiculously low—15 cents per inch.) I tried to show this inexperienced theatre official where the same paper had given us immeasurable space of reading notices, free of charge, and, therefore, it did not become us to penalize them for this slight typographical error. In vain, I related facts to prove that these small-town newspaper publishers were not a bunch of illiterates, as he intimated, and that even great papers, like The New York Times, with their splendid facilities, occasionally permitted errors to creep in. However, he remained so domineering and adamant and, while I risked losing my job rather than penalize the papers, I had to find some other means of appeasing his wrath. From that point on, though, I realized I was marked as a "no man."

$50 a Week Advertising Budget

Shortly after, this official issued orders forbidding the approval of payments for managers' memberships to luncheon clubs, amounting from $10 to $25; eliminating small pledges to local charities and setting up rules making it well nigh impossible to tie in with local organizations on benefit performances, which, heretofore, had proved profitable and helpful. An advertising budget of just $50 per week was arbitrarily set up for each house. Out of this allowance had to come expenditures for items contracted for through the home office. With four to five changes of program a week and in towns where out-of-town advertising was advisable the manager's lot was, indeed, most difficult. At the same time, he had to accept long and unnecessary telegrams—collect, of course—extolling the virtues of pictures he would not have booked for some time to come.

Any number of unsurmountable obstacles, placed in the paths of the local managers, could be

MANAGERS BACK CHATKIN THESIS

Kansas City circuit managers agree with David Chatkin's arguments on theatre operation, but they dissent from the opinion that "New York is wrong 70 per cent of the time," when making decisions affecting operation. That figure is termed as too high.

"It is a well known fact," said Ed Dubinsky, "that centralized control of a national circuit stifles independence in subordinates and restricts full play of local managers' talents and abilities. One possible reason is that the executives are afraid of their future, fearful that someone below them in the organization will display ability and take their jobs."

PERSONAL CONTACT VITAL: LIGHTMAN

M. A. Lightman, president of the Tri-States Association, commenting on David Chatkin's views on the decentralization of theatres, said:

"I have always advocated that the very best theatre management can be had only through personal contacts and that mechanical or robot operation can never be successful. The real operation of a theatre requires a sensitive touch. It thrives on temperament. . . . I would liken the operation of a theatre more or less to the work of an artist painting a picture. . . . RKO Radio Has Completed a Major Tieup on "Wild Cargo"

Numerous tieups have been arranged by the exploitation department of RKO Radio on the Frank Buck jungle expedition picture, "Wild Cargo." More than 1,400,000 dealers are included in a comprehensive campaign which will feature window displays, placards, games, toys and novelties.

Many national advertisers are cooperating in the tieups. These and the number of dealer outlets available to each are: Camel cigarettes, 900,000; Black Flag, 260,000; Collier's Weekly, 125,000; Western Union, 25,000; Railway Express Agency, 23,000; Eberhard Faber Pencil Company, 20,000; Dodge Motors, 4,000; Woolworth stores, 15,000; Diamond Match Company, 3,000; Simon & Schuster, 4,000; Ford, 5,000; Transo Products, 5,000; Bar-Zim Toy Manufacturing Company, 5,000; Winchester Toy Company, 4,000; Sterling Art Metal Works, 4,000.

Calls Centralized Operation Costly

cited. However, the most harmful handicap was the constant interference by a certain young man (a nephew of one of the company heads) who was suddenly given the lofty position of film buyer. Although he had never been in any of the towns in our group, this novice deemed it unnecessary for him to consult with the zone manager regarding the class of film or the manner of film purchases for our circuit. He also disregarded entirely the previous and proven policies of certain theatres. His initial move was to buy more service for one theatre than could be used by two theatres.

The fact that western pictures were especially desirable for Saturday bookings in our towns was entirely ignored by this wiseacre. In fact, he obligated certain theatres to play the most pronounced sort of sex pictures on the day that the theatre heretofore had been catering to children. In one important town we almost suffered from a picture famine because this smart, executive had agreed to give 42 days' protection to another chain-owned theatre in a town near by, which had previously enjoyed no protection. The film booker for our zone, not being apprised of the agreed protection until the eleventh hour, had a merry time keeping open two theatres using eight new features each week. In another instance, he agreed to give protection over another of our towns which was finally overcome when it was found the protection the other chain had in mind was for a town of the same name in a different state.

Booking Problem

During the early part of this season, most of our theatres could not be definitely booked within two weeks of play dates simply because this film buyer was so busy jumping about the country attending football games that he did not have time to complete film deals. To such a person was entrusted the rather large order of completing the film buying for about 200 widely scattered theatres in the Middle West. On one occasion, the general manager wired me to meet this film buyer in Chicago so that I could sit in on a deal with a district manager, whose confidence I enjoyed. After waiting anxiously from early in the morning until late that afternoon, I was casually informed by our man that the district manager was out of town. Aside from spending two nights on the Pullmans on this wild goose chase, I enjoyed (?) a similar experience at St. Louis also in this same season.

During this period when salary-cutting was in order, some of our theatre employes earning salaries of less than $10 per week were included in the cuts. Imagine the good time the opposition had of making capital of the fact and, especially, when they worked one week without pay. Just about this time I was successful in getting one of our landlords to give us a cut of about 15 per cent in rent after various home office representatives had been turned down. This saving was more than wiped out when the aforementioned film buyer succeeded in inducing the general manager, in spite of my fervent protests, to replace a competent booker with an inexperienced one and at an increase of double the other booker's salary.

In almost three years, no one of practical theatre experience or authority (not counting traveling auditors) ever visited our theatres. Naturally, then our home office executives could not be expected to begin to understand our particular or peculiar problems. In one case I shall never forget, we lost about $30,000 in extra revenue simply because the proposition got lost in the home office. Not infrequently, too, the payment of local taxes and licenses was overlooked and yet, if our contact man dared to send in an advance reminder, he was rebuked.

Dave Chatkin, in his article, stated:

"Decisions of major importance are made in New York, and, conservatively speaking, 70 per cent of these decisions are incorrect."

To which I would add:

"Dave, you are entirely too conservative—about 99 per cent would be a truer estimate."

It would really be a splendid and liberal education for these so-called "swivel-chair" New York theatre executives if they would be forced to be on the scene and actually operate the theatres whose policies they have been so unsuccessfully trying to dictate from their palatial offices in New York. The experience would probably be fraught with many casualties.

CANCELLATION PRIVILEGE ASSURED ALL EXHIBITORS 'IN GOOD STANDING'

Theatre Owners Who Did Not Sign Code Assent Blank Before March 10 May Still Do That Now As "Newcomers"

Motion picture theatre owners in good contractual standing will be accorded the 10 per cent cancellation privilege on all pictures contracted for before December 7, but released after that date. This was assured over the weekend when the Code Authority voted verification of an NRA decision making the clause so retroactive. Non-assentors will be accorded the same privilege, when in good standing.

At the same time, it appeared that those who did not execute the assent blank before the deadline March 10 and who have since decided to effect such execution, may do so as a "newcomer."

The Code Authority issued official instructions to Local Grievance Boards for the handling of complaints under the code, as boards in several territories finally started to function.

At Washington, the NRA was being converted from a code-writing to a code-enforcing agency and preparations were launched to add to the Code Authority in each industry additional governmental representatives for labor and consumers.

Cancellation Ruling in Effect

Opposition of the large distributors—which threatened a court test—to the retroactivity of the 10 per cent cancellation privilege was automatically nullified over the weekend when the Code Authority voted eight to two to accept a recent interpretation of the cancellation clause by Sol Rosenblatt, NRA division administrator, who had ruled that the privilege was applicable to all features released on or after the effective date of the code, which was December 7, 1933, even though such pictures were contracted for prior to that date.

However, in order to take advantage of the 10 per cent elimination privilege, an exhibitor's contractual relations with a distributor must be in good order. The privilege may not be made applicable where an exhibitor is in default on a contract, either for failure to make rental payments due or otherwise.

Voting for the acceptance were Code Authority members, or alternates: S. R. Kent, Fox; Charles L. O'Reilly, Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York; R. H. Cochrane, Universal; W. Ray Johnston, Monogram; Nathan Yamins, Allied; Leslie Thompson; J. Robert Rubin, MGM, and Walter Vincent, MPTOA.

Voting against acceptance were Harold S. Bareford, Warner, and George J. Schaefer, Paramount.

The Authority's decision is automatically binding on the industry, and in answer to hundreds of letters from exhibitors asking for a showdown on the question, all Local Grievance Boards immediately were ordered to act accordingly.

On the basis of a yearly output of approximately 600 features from all companies, and with seven months of the 1933-34 season already spent, the 10 per cent elimination privilege would be applicable to about 250 remaining releases, figured by arbitrarily establishing total monthly releases at 50.

In view of the NRA's recent decision that failure to sign a code assent blank before the deadline March 10 does not deprive any one of any rights under the code, except to file a complaint, it appears that non-assenting exhibitors will be accorded the privilege of the retroactivity of the 10 per cent cancellation clause.

NRA a Code-Enforcing Agency

General reorganization of the NRA, converting it to a code-enforcing agency, has been put under way by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

Appointment of labor and consumer advisors to Mr. Rosenblatt as Government members of the Code Authority, will be one step.

Another step will be the creation, by all codified industries not yet having them, of industrial relations committees or boards, to adjust labor controversies, making the industries more self-governing.

The labor and consumer advisors will have no vote and will attend meetings only upon invitation, although they are to have free access to the minutes and the privilege of appearing to make statements on specific questions.

The appointments are a concession by the administration to labor's demand for representation on the Code Authorities, which Government officials have been reluctant to grant in the face of industrial opposition. (New labor activities as they involve the code and the NRA appear in detail on page 27.)

Industry members probably will learn next week the amount of the yearly assessments to the Code Authority for code financing. Each town is being classified as to population and theatres, so that the Code Authority may establish a fair proportionate assessment. Each Local Board has submitted an estimated budget.

Preparing the financing arrangements is a

Local Grievance Boards Get Official Instructions on Complaints; NRA Being Made a Code-Enforcing Agency

Code Authority committee consisting of Sidney R. Kent, Fox; Harold S. Bareford, Warner; Nathan Yamins, Allied; Charles L. O'Reilly, TOCC.

The Code Authority, asked about the status of exhibitors who had not signed the code assent prior to the deadline of March 10 and now desire to file an executed form, replied:

"Pursuant to an order of the National Recovery Administration, March 10, 1934, was fixed as the last date upon which exhibitors and distributors then engaged in the motion picture industry could file unqualified assents to the code of fair competition for the motion picture industry.

"Any persons engaged in the motion picture industry after March 10, 1934, are privileged to file an assent to the code at any time within 45 days after the date such person enters the industry."

It appears, then, that non-assentors would be placed in the same category as newcomers to the industry. A legal interpretation indicated that such "newcomers" could not file any complaints to the Local Grievance Boards on matters occurring prior to the date when they execute the assent as "newcomers."

Procedure on Filing Complaints

The Code Authority this week sent to each Local Grievance Board copies of the forms which are to be used for complaints by exhibitors or distributors. These blanks are reproduced on page 42.

Attached to the forms was a letter from John C. Flinn, Code Authority secretary, which said, in part:

"Each complaint from your territory for determination will be sent to your local secretary as soon as he is appointed, which should be very soon.

"The local secretary will be instructed to list the complaints for determination by your board in the order, by dates, in which they were filed directly with the Code Authority.

Complaints Direct to Secretary

"When your board starts to function all complaints shall be filed directly with your secretary, and the practice of sending complaints to the Code Authority will be discouraged.

"The Code Authority is forwarding to your secretary, when appointed, a certified list of distributors and exhibitors situated in your territory who executed prior to March 10, 1934, unqualified assents to the code, and who are privileged to file complaints. Only the names on this certified list are so privileged. Therefore, reference to the list for verification of signature should be the first procedure when a complaint is received by the secretary of your board.

"The Code Authority cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of regular, legal procedure by the Local Grievance Boards. Every earnest effort should be made to reach unanimous agreements on determinations. Unanimous determinations are nearly always just determinations and will tend to discourage appeals to the Code Authority from determinations of Local Boards. While the code provides liberal machinery for appeals, nevertheless there is a loss of time and traveling expense to be incurred on the part of appellants whose appeals will be heard by the Code Authority sitting in New York."

Official Complaint Forms For Local Grievance Boards

Standardizing and simplifying the procedure to be followed by exhibitors and distributors in the field in filing complaints of unfair trade practices or unfair competition under the code, the motion picture Code Authority this week instructed each of the Local Grievance Boards to use the officially designated forms reproduced on this page for filing complaints.

Form number one (top right) should be used for any complaint filed for one of the four reasons contained in Article VI, Part 2, Section 1, Paragraphs (a) Overbuying; (b) Adoption of an unfairly competing policy of unnecessary and too frequent changes of motion pictures; (c) Exaction without just cause of an agreement from any distributor as a condition for entering into a contract for pictures that such distributor refrain from licensing its pictures to the complaining exhibitor; and (d) Commission of any other similar act with the intent of depriving without just cause the complaining exhibitor of a sufficient number of pictures.

Form number two (bottom left) should be used for any complaint filed under provisions of Article VI, Part 2, Section 4: All complaints and grievances of exhibitors or distributors concerning provisions of the code or otherwise and not specifically designated to be heard or passed upon in the first instance by the Code Authority or by arbitration or by the Local Clearance and Zoning Board.

Form number three (bottom right) should be used for any special complaint under provisions of the code outside of Article VI, Part 2, and referred to in the foregoing.

OPPRESSION OF "LITTLE MAN" UNDER CODE CHARGED AT DARROW HEARING

Suggestion by Review Board That Code Needs Revision to Bar Practices Adverse to the Independents Is Indicated

by FRANCIS L. BURT
Washington Correspondent

Exhibitors and others of the "little man" class went to Washington this week to tell the Government what they thought of the code and alleged oppression by large companies. The testimony as a whole was principally condemnatory—in the words of one witness, "we now find ourselves so much further down in the rate of our business that there are hundreds of millions of dollars and thousands of employees in jeopardy and a monopoly set up that you will never break through," as a result of the code.

Completing the taking of testimony on Wednesday, the National Recovery Review Board is now studying the case for presenting its report to the President by April 15. It is almost certain that code changes will be recommended. Meanwhile, labor will be heard, starting April 9.

It is indicated that the Review Board, headed by Clarence Darrow, will content itself with pointing out that the code apparently needs revision to ban practices which reflect adversely upon the independent exhibitors, leaving it to Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson to advise the President. There will be no radical indictment of the code, it is understood.

Only one side was presented in the oral testimony, the Code Authority, through Harold S. Bareford, of Warner Bros., who conferred with Board Counsel Lowell Mason, having expressed its intention of filing a statement.

The final hearings brought further attacks against block booking and developed complaints against the labor provisions and against the so-called "patent monopoly."

Governor Hits Block Booking

The block booking situation was assailed by Governor Floyd B. Olson, of Minnesota, appearing at the request of some independent (Allied), who also criticized protection methods.

"If the Code Authority, which is entirely dominated by the producing interests, carries on in the same manner in their public capacity as they have as representatives of private industry," he declared, "ultimately they will compel the outlying theatres to show a film after it is shown downtown at the same price as it was shown downtown. The obvious tendency has been to bring all the trade downtown. It is not a good thing to compel this by law."

Complaints had been filed by the governor with General Johnson, he revealed, but without effect.

Independent exhibitors and the public should both have adequate representation on the Code Authority, he said, and "I would prefer, if I were dealing with a tribunal, that he be some one other than a representative of the industry. It is not a matter of integrity, but a matter of viewpoint."

Inclusion of the date of August 23, 1933, as the starting point for the development of wage scales under the code was attacked by Murray Harston, of New York, representing an independent motion picture operators' union.

Declaring there is "no prevailing wage" in the New York area, Mr. Harston said that the fight centers on the "two men in a booth" proposition and that the affiliated unions have "perverted" the code provisions to attain their end, which was to nullify contracts made with exhibitors by his union last August 21.

Says Ruling Threw Out Contracts

On the ground that the code precluded changes in booths, he continued, the opposing union obtained a decision by the New York Regional Labor Board throwing out his contracts, and the exhibitors have avowed their willingness to fight it in court. Fifty cases are pending in New York, he said.

He recommended amendments eliminating the August 23 date and substituting therefor "the effective date of this revised code" and a new subsection (b) to Section 6, providing that the Regional Boards "shall determine solely the prevailing wage scale and compute the maximum number of working hours for such employes, per individual." The latter, he said, would settle the claim of some that the cost of booth operation be the basis.

Operation of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade was discussed by W. A. ("Al") Steffes, dwelling particularly upon a meeting in July, 1930, at which, he said, the exhibitors of the territory had forced upon them a schedule of zoning and protection, which, though withdrawn, was still effective.

The board, he said, turned out to be a form of "kangaroo court" where the producer representatives could agree on various trade practices which they then enforced.

Steffes' suit against the major companies is due to be tried this month, he told the board, but if the provisions of the code are held legal the suit will not mean a thing.

Mr. Steffes declared that in no other way than by overbuying can an exhibitor at present get all the pictures his audience wants to see. W. O. Thompson, a member of the Review Board, suggested production is a "greater gamble" than exhibition, which might be the answer for producer-owned houses.

"I do not think that the theatre owner has any right in the production end of the motion picture business, nor do I think the producer has any right in exhibition," Mr. Steffes declared.

The large companies are in receivership, he continued, because of overseating.

Says Independents Forced Out

The alleged patent monopoly of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has driven all but three or four independent producers out of business, it was complained by Alfred Weiss, who, prior to forming Hollywood Metropolitan Studios, said he was for six years first vice-president and general manager of the Goldwyn company, quite some time ago. He, himself, was driven out of business two years ago, he added.

He could make a good profit in silent pictures, Mr. Weiss testified, but the coming of sound was his undoing, as he produced with independent equipment and then could not sell to the majors, who demanded the use of licensed equipment. The same was true in the export field, he said.

Mr. Weiss said he had manufactured sound equipment to sell at $4,500 to $6,500 in competition with the Western Electric product selling for $22,000. Sales in six months amounted to $600,000, he said, and he just had accepted an offer of $750,000 for 49 per cent of his company when he was served with papers in an infringement suit. His customers then refused to complete their contracts, the $750,000 offer for his business was withdrawn and he went out of business. Then, he added, the suit was no longer pressed.

Governor Assails Block Booking; Forced Buying of 976 Shorts Cited; Brandt and Myers Sum Up Independents' Case

Says Telephone Company Dominates

Robert Robbins, sound device manufacturer, charged that "the telephone company today dominates and owns, directly or indirectly, at least six of the eight major producers." He proposed divorcing public utilities from private enterprise and placing motion pictures under the communications commission to be created under legislation now pending.

That the IATSE might have an opportunity to respond to the charges made by Mr. Harston, the board announced it would hear William C. Elliott, president, on April 9.

The usual charges of producer domination and unfair practices in the film code were iterated and reiterated at a previous session of the Review Board, held last Thursday, when a number of exhibitors from New York, the Middlewest and the Southwest were called by Mr. Mason, board counsel.

Owners of independent houses leased by producers and turned back when depression overtook the large companies found they no longer could buy pictures for the runs they previously enjoyed, according to Julius Charnow of New York, who said his Leonia, N. J., house was turned back by Fox.

Says He Had To Take 976 Shorts

Irvin P. Gerber, owner of three houses, said that to get features for one of his theatres he had to take 976 shorts, two and one-half years' supply, and when he went to Paramount to buy features he was told he would have to take more shorts, which he refused to do, so that he has been unable to get any Paramount product.

Several witnesses were asked about the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York. Leo Brecher testified that only a half dozen members were independents, including Charles O'Reilly, who was said to have some small theatre interests, but whose main business was that of candy vending, with the producer houses among his most important customers.

Overbuying by affiliated houses to prevent independents from obtaining product was scored by Edward Frieberger, owner of the Dover, N. J., Playhouse. Percentage selling was attacked by Bernard S. Barr, of Brooklyn.

Mr. Frieberger declared that in the last two or three years the business has become almost "unbearable" and is worse under the code than before.

"It seems that the code has given a certain amount of credibility to the buying of pictures under block booking," he declared.

"The code has a definite provision that I have to buy a certain percentage of shorts, based on the number of pictures I play during the year; the code tells me that when I buy Metro pictures I must also buy a certain percentage of their shorts."

CHARGE MONOPOLY UNDER CODE

Offering a chart which, he declared, showed the cost and income of pictures booked on the percentage plan, Mr. Barr declared 50 per cent was the average for programs carrying 38 features so booked in the past year and used in double-feature programs. In the case of one picture cited by Mr. Barr, calling for a 25 per cent guarantee, the house took in $240.70 and the cost of films was $145.

Prices Called Unfair

Producer and affiliated houses obtain pictures for superior runs at less than do independents for later runs, it was charged several times. Information was obtained from bills sent independents by mistake. Thus, Albert Cooper, of the Idle Hour, Long Island City, said he paid $40 for the last run of "The Bowery," while a producer competitor got it first run for $25.

Mr. Nicholas Palley, telling how he spent $470,000 in erection of his Scarsdale (N. Y.) theatre, only to find he could not get pictures, was asked by John F. Sinclair, a member of the Review Board, why he built a house when he knew such a situation existed. He answered that he guessed he "had too much money I didn't know what to do with."

Independent theatres on the whole represent a larger investment and are better houses than the producer structures, the board was told by Harry Brandt, of New York, president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association. There are, he said, some 13,000 independents and 4,000 affiliates, but the independents are unorganized and for this reason have never gone into production of their own films.

The average independent, Mr. Brandt declared, is neither a financier nor a promoter. "The only thing an independent exhibitor ever promotes is a mortgage for his theatre," he said, adding that "the mortgage and title companies should be at this hearing protecting the independents because they do not know how near they are to owning a lot of theatres."

"The independent theatre owners looked upon the code as a life saver. Instead, we find ourselves so much further down in the rate of our business that there are hundreds of millions of dollars and thousands of employees in jeopardy and a monopoly set up that you will never break through,' he said.

Censorship Not Board Matter

The one phase that will not be taken up by the review board is censorship, it was indicated by questions propounded by Chairman Darrow after Miss Alida C. Bowler, of the children's bureau of the Department of Labor, attacked the code for its failure to give the exhibitor a "fifty-fifty break" in the selection of films.

Louis F. Blumenthal, of Yonkers, characterized dating as the "most vicious" of all practices and declared that the code has "semi-legalized" the right of a distributor to name the playing days for exhibitors.

Asserting that he had sought to participate in the drafting of the code, but that his offer was rejected, Milton C. Wiseman of New York, attorney for the ITOA, declared he had warned Mr. Rosenblatt that the code perpetuated the monopoly of the "Big Eight" and that it "set up a dynasty" in the Code Authority, stacked eight to two against the exhibitor, through the provision outlining the method of selecting alternates.

"We independent exhibitors begged of Mr. Rosenblatt that in the so-called poor man's court—the local boards—we should have some word in the designation of those people to whom we look to protect our interests," he said. "Up to the present time every recommendation of ours has been wholly disregarded."

Other witnesses included Col. H. A. Cole of Dallas, R. C. Glass of Beaumont, Texas, H. M. Richey of Detroit, and Fred J. Herrington of Pittsburgh.

Brandt and Myers Sum Up

The "little man's" case was summed up Wednesday when Harry Brandt and Abram F. Myers, chairman of Allied, took the stand, Mr. Brandt declaring that, "if Will Hays had drafted the document, he would at least have soft-pedaled some of the clauses so as not to have aroused this great wave of protest."

None of the things agreed upon by the "Big Eight" and the independents was carried into the code, Mr. Brandt asserted, and the independent exhibitors are entirely without representation. No minutes, however, were kept, so that no evidence is available about the breaking of the agreements.

Figures on the value of the independents' investment, he said, indicate that the 350 houses in his organization represent over $150,000,000.

Mr. Brandt attacked Mr. Rosenblatt's connections prior to joining the NRA and also those of Charles O'Reilly, who he said is closely tied up with the "Big Eight" and whose associate is a member of the New York Grievance Board.

Following Mr. Rosenblatt's refusal to testify before the Review Board, Mr. Brandt charged, he conferred, not with the Code Authority or Administration lawyers, but with counsel for the producers.

Mr. John Flinn's appointment as secretary of the Code Authority also was attacked, on the ground that he had been connected with the producers.

"Paying for Own Guillotine"

"We are being asked to pay for the lumber for our own guillotine," Mr. Brandt declared. "We ask that the code be reopened, and that an impartial administrator be put in charge of it. We contend that the present code is unconstitutional in a great many ways."

Declaring that the independents have always stood soundly for arbitration, Mr. Myers pointed out that most of the controversies are between sellers and buyers and declared there are seven sellers and only three buyers on the Code Authority. Further, he said, the major producers have the bulk of the power on the local boards, with the majority of socalled unaffiliated members comprising Columbia, United Artists and Universal representatives.

The boards can put any theatre out of business, he declared, charging that the set-up in the code is a "Chinese copy" of the arrangement denounced in the Youngclaus case. The Grievance Boards, he added, are impotent to grant relief to exhibitors but are a powerful weapon of punishment for price cutting or other offenses.

The independents have no objection to the producers selling to whom they please, he told the board, but do oppose the agreements between producers which have made present conditions possible.

Bareford Statement in Record

A written statement from Harold S. Bareford, of the Code Authority, submitted in compliance with an agreement reached at a conference with Mr. Mason, was put into the record. The statement was as follows:

"It is the business of the distributors of motion picture film, whether large or small, to find the best customers possible for their product and to receive or contract for the best film rentals, and in the accomplishment of that purpose it is immaterial whether that customer is a customer operating one theatre or 500 theatres. It is, of course, obvious that a company distributing motion pictures and also operating theatres, will prefer its own theatres to those of competing exhibitors, but beyond that point and in dealing with theatres operated independently of the distributing company, the distributor will invariably, for its own selfish interests, license its product to the exhibitor who can pay the best film rental. The credit risk and integrity of the individual exhibitor is always a factor as well as the representation that pictures are given in first run theatres, which representation affects the manner in which the public receives the picture not only for the first run but all subsequent runs in the territory. That is to say, a theatre that will properly publicize and present a picture, definitely adds to the public good will of the picture.

"Producers spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in the production of individual pictures which are leased to exhibitors for minute fractions of their cost. It must be obvious that this tremendous investment can be prejudiced, injured or destroyed by the manner in which it is handled.

Cites Circuits' High Film Rentals

"It would be foolish to suppose that a distributor would give a better price and better terms for its product to a competing distributor who was interested in the operation of theatres than to an exhibitor who was not a distributor.

"Competition in no industry is keener than the competition between producers and distributors of motion pictures. Distributors sell their product to circuits of theatres as well as to individual theatres regardless of whether or not circuits are connected with producers of motion pictures. The same general form of contract is used with all customers. In dealing with large circuits, however, the regular form of contract used by distributors necessarily requires some elaboration to apply the terms thereof to a large number of theatres differently situated, each theatre having a definite problem and usually a definite film rental.

"A large circuit of theatres will pay as high if not a higher film rental for pictures than individual theatres. Were it not for the high film rentals paid by circuits, the money would not be forthcoming to the producer, and the producer could not assume the risk of investing large sums in production."

IATSE FEEDS STAGEHANDS FREE

A new charity in the amusement business has been instituted in Chicago by George Brown, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' local. Mr. Brown has opened the "IATSE" restaurant, where unemployed stagehands may eat three meals daily without charge and "without embarrassment."

At the end of the first six months of operations the "IATSE" has supplied over 36,000 free meals. For each meal paid for by employed stagehands, one and one-half free meals are served to unemployed men. Employed stagehands get a full meal for 35 cents.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

COUNT PAUL GREGORY HERSCHEL VON LIEBNITZ dropped out of nowhere into the little Kansas college town of Lawrence, immediately bringing forth a considerable fluttering of social excitement among the fraternity brothers and sorority sisters, 100 per cent Americans all. They listened attentively to his fantastic tale of Nazi assassination of his parents, his hair-raising escape from Germany. He told them he was the only German Jewish count in captivity, a direct descendant of Emperor Franz Josef, of Austria.

The campus social elect gushed over him, took him to their collective bosom. But the smiles of fawning approbation turned wry when the count, speaking as a special headliner from the stage of Glen Dickinson's Varsity theatre, regaled the townsfolk with a description of how he had fooled democratic Kansans who work themselves into a frothy lather when in the proximity of bogus nobility.

Count von Liebnitz explained that he was none other than Henry Leiby, 22 years old, itinerant son of a Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, railroad clerk, who had made a bet and won it. He had wagered a friend that he could be the talk of the town within a week.

Mr. "Bud" Pollard, at times variously connected with picture production, is addressing personages of prominence in the industry concerning a project "for the establishing of The Motion Picture Academy," for the purpose of affording "opportunity for the ambitious and talented aspirant." In view of Mr. Pollard's motion picture contacts and experience it is curious that he should select for his project this name, so readily to be confused with The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, in Hollywood.

Fox publicity informs us that Hollywood chorus girls average a salary of $18 per week—and can live handsomely on only $5 of that sum. And what else?

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY, we are told, a motion picture has been made of the Holy Sepulchre of Christ at Jerusalem. Neither kodak nor sketch book, camera or easel, has ever been set up to record for public consumption the interior of the world famous shrine. The distinction is now claimed by Mr. Fred Herrick-Herrick, director of the old silent days and now staging a comeback.

After expending considerable sales effort on the Greek High Priest, Archimandrite Kyriakos, Head Guardian of the Sepulchre, Mr. Herrick was finally permitted through the sacred portals with sound equipment and seven dragomen (porters). He had no sooner finished shooting than leaders of five different sects, all having religious headquarters thereabouts, started a young Holy War, charging desecration.

Peace came only when the benevolent Mr. Herrick produced from somewhere a roll of film, and with proper sacrificial gestures handed it to the complaining churchmen. It was an unexposed film leader and its delivery prompted the director to gather together his equipment and beat a hasty retreat.

The real Sepulchre shots are now part of some travel shorts which are on the current Radio Pictures release schedule.

A letter that will never be mailed is Ed Sullivan's version of a piece of correspondence between General Hugh Johnson, NRA cracker-downer, and Mr. Al Jolson, wiry Warner warbler, as follows:

MR. AL JOLSON,
RITZ TOWERS,
NEW YORK CITY.

My dear Mr. Jolson:

My Secretary in Charge of Cracking Down advises me that during my cracking-down sessions with Messrs. Ford, Chrysler, and those men from General Motors last week, you were stirring up trouble on Broadway by singing "I'm Riding to Heaven on a Mule." The inference to be drawn is plain enough: You are deliberately encouraging opposition to the automobile industry. I have a letter here of the 15th instant from H. Ford referring me to his telegram of the 13th instant, in which he charges that you intend to sing the song in Detroit, when "Wonder Bar" plays there. If you attempt to do so, I will crack down so hard that I'll crack up Busby Berkeley's dance routines. Please wire me immediately at the White House Annex.

The young manager of a Fox suburban theatre in Kansas City one afternoon recently, dropped in, uninvited, at a screening at the Paramount film exchange. He took one look—a good one—and hardly believed his eyes. Not a person in the picture being screened had on a stitch of clothes. Concluding that it was one of those nudist things, he determined to sit where he was and see it through. When the lights flashed, he found to his embarrassment that he was the only man in a room crowded with very elderly ladies, a committee of local club women who were to pass on the picture. "Young man," they stormed in concert, "you certainly have your nerve."

THE TOO EFFICIENT British Broadcasting System in England adopted a 24-hour clock system, last Sunday midnight, in connection with its program tidings and timings and other ethereal activities. One p. m. is now 13 o'clock on the BBC, 2:00 p. m. is 14:00 o'clock, half-past ten is 22:30, and so on up to 24:24 o'clock at 24 minutes after the eerie hour of midnight. The only excuse they offered—and it's just too feeble—is to avoid confusion between a. m. and p. m. But, then, paunchy ol' John Bull has always had a knack for doing things differently, dontcha know.

Being so closely related to BBC, figuratively, at least, we expect to hear almost any hour now, the melodious gong of Mr. Aylesworth's NBC strike out loudly: "The time is now 19:47 o'clock—courtesy of Blurbets, the home of red, white and blue diamonds."

Meanwhile, the less dignified along New York's geographically complexed film row are no longer asking the ultra conservative Telephone Company for the correct time by dialing "ME-ridian 7 1212." They now dial "NERTS 2 U," accomplishing the same results, even though only three of the seven alphabetical and numerical combinations are identical.

Maybe they never heard of William Penn Adair Rogers, Rudy Vallee, Leslie Howard, Elissa Landi, Warner Baxter, or Edmund Lowe.

The women of Olcott Beach, small upstate New York community, are trying to pawn off a home-wrecking siren on Hollywood. Quite frankly, the letter declares, "we would all like to have her out of the county."

Mr. DeMille has decided to let things remain as they are, figuring the girl would be much happier as a big frog in a little puddle than lost in the Hollywood swim.

The chart, based on Motion Picture Herald's tabulation of box office receipts, indicates the trend of business in three eastern key cities during the eight-weeks period from February 8 to March 24, 1934. The gross in each city for the first week of the period is taken as 100 per cent.

Tax Unit Busy But Collects No Taxes

A sensation in the Canadian industry has developed with the discovery that the Canadian Government has maintained a special office in Ottawa, with a staff of employees, to collect a royalty tax on rentals of motion pictures imported from the United States, Great Britain and other foreign countries, although the Department of National Revenue decided one year ago not to impose the levy.

The office personnel has done nothing the past year but send out periodical notices to the Canadian film distributors to file returns on bookings of foreign films, but these notifications have been ignored by the exchanges because of the department's decision to forego the tax in spite of the urgent need for more revenue. It had been the intention to collect 12½ per cent on gross revenue derived from Canadian bookings of foreign films.

The proposed move by the Canadian Government early in 1933 caused a hurried conference in New York by U. S. producers with the result that Col. John A. Cooper of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada and Henry Nathanson of Regal Films, Toronto, waited on the Department and succeeded in halting the plan. Yet the machinery is still operating—without returns.

In Kansas City the local Variety Club officially opened its quarters with a banquet at the Muehlebach Hotel, where the club is housed.

Elstree Challenge Cited by Giannini

Hollywood should begin to look to its laurels, and an incentive in that direction should be found easily in the success of Great Britain's "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great," declared Dr. A. H. Giannini, financier, in a series of articles in the Los Angeles Herald and Examiner.

Dr. Giannini discussed the differing reactions in England to its new-found success in appealing to world markets, and added:

"I believe that after nearly a quarter of a century of practically absolute domination of the world motion picture industry it will be a good thing for Hollywood to look to its laurels.

"I believe the discovery that new artistic interpretations and improvements are possible in film making, and that new types of dramatic appeal will register with the public, may stimulate in Hollywood a new and well considered flow of creative spirit. Such discoveries seem to me to be in the nature of a liberal education. Such education, I feel certain, can be made use of not only in Hollywood but by a great many other typically high-speed and self-concentrated American institutions."

Dr. Giannini, however, predicted failure for any circuit of theatres in Canada for exclusive showings of British product. He also declared the threat of English actors and authors to work only in England will be useless.

Theatres Reopening In Ohio, Pennsylvania

Additional houses are reopening in the territory of Canton, Ohio. The Lyceum, reconditioned at a cost of $20,000, opened late last week, with Young and Rinehart in control.

Shannonhas has opened the New Princess at Donora, following installation of new sound and redecoration. W. J. Cuthbert has reopened the Rex at Alliance after reconditioning.

BRITAIN'S EXHIBITORS HIT "QUOTA QUICKIES"

CEA Declares Renters Asking 40% for Pictures Recently Costing 50%; 23 Inimical Bills Withdrawn Following Efforts

By BERNARD CHARMAN
London Correspondent

A general survey of problems besetting the film trade in Great Britain (more particularly the theatre side) is contained in the annual report of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association. Frankly, it strikes a pessimistic note. It hints at a drastic reconstruction of the industry, by which many of those now scratching a living from it may find themselves pushed into the outer darkness, and cited are the advance of monopoly, centralization of the business in the hands of powerful groups, and of retreat of the independent.

Cites Decline of Patronage

Look at the opening remarks of the C. E. A. report:

"Outstanding features of the past year have been the falling off in patronage due to the industrial depression, which has been accompanied by a considerable amount of building of new cinemas. The decline in patronage has been accentuated in its effects by the very heavy turnover tax for which the entertainment industry is selected. When times are good, overtaxation may still leave an industry with some profits, but in these depressed times it is crushing in its incidence."

About the Tax, HERALD readers have heard plenty. It is the equivalent to a turnover tax of 16 2/3 per cent, over and above the heavy income tax assessment and local charges which every theatre is obliged to discharge.

"Overbuilding in many areas," said the CEA, "seems to result from the crazy impression prevalent in so many quarters that the cinema is an assured 20 per cent investment. Your General Council only wishes it were so.

"Today it is difficult to make a small profit in face of the very keen competition, and if all the schemes for the erection of cinemas materialize there will be a number built which it is safe to prophesy will never be of any value at any price at any time."

Warning to Producers

A clear warning to the film producer—and to Hollywood especially—follows:

"The public has become so acquainted with the respective merits of the various films offered that it increasingly declines to patronize the program picture and selects only those of merit. The habit of dropping into the cinema to pass the time, which was so marked a feature of silent days, has definitely become a matter of history.

"Today the public is shopping for its entertainment and is showing the keenest discrimination in its selection. Unfortunately there are too many program pictures which cannot withstand such a critical examination."

Elsewhere the report suggested lines of action by which this menace may be challenged. Overbuilding, it stated, "from sheer necessity to both renting and exhibiting sections may force its own solution on similar lines which other industries have found necessary to adopt. In a number of industries wholesalers and retailers have found it necessary to put their heads together when the retail side was cut to nothing through an excessive number of retailers. In that process no one, wholesaler or retailer, ever gets paid."

As to "quota quickies," Elstree and Shepherds Bush are advised:

"Until recently the production of good British films has kept pace in numbers sufficiently to supply exhibitors with their quota. Some of the foreign firms consistently purchase inferior British quota films, such policy appearing to be indicated by a desire to rid themselves of their quota obligations as cheaply as possible.

"If the matter ended there exhibitors would not be troubled to any extent, but in consequence of this policy the number of British films produced acts as no guide to the number that can be used. Certain British firms are producing excellent pictures consistently, but unless the total numbers improve, in effect, exhibitors will be forced to acquire their increased quota from an insufficient number of useable films."

But what successes for exhibitors did 1933 bring? As to rentals the report said:

"The year ends with renters asking 40 per cent for pictures which a few months ago they would have insisted could not be obtained for less than 50 per cent."

23 Bills Killed

Twenty-three bills deposited with Parliament by local bodies, all framed to interfere with the business of the theatre operator, were opposed through the Association's legal department, and in every case they were withdrawn.

Representations made to Western Electric obtained a reduction equivalent to one dollar a week in service charges.

In respect of Sunday opening campaigns, the association records showed that in 41 cases this privilege was obtained for the trade, lost on 10 occasions only.

One other achievement was the scotching of a movement for a ring of equipment manufacturers, framed, it was declared, to force up prices.

The tendency towards ridiculous cut prices, as well as the over-long program, has been checked in most areas.

An increase of 31 members in the year showed the CEA membership to have reached a new record of 3,652. The figure of 3,600 is usually accepted as representing the number of theatres in regular operation six nights a week.

Cohan-Harris Testimonial Sunday

Speakers invited to the testimonial dinner, entertainment and dance to honor George M. Cohan and Sam H. Harris, Sunday night at the Hotel Astor, New York, under the auspices of the Jewish Theatrical Guild of America, include George Jessel, toastmaster; Eddie Cantor, president of the Guild, Postmaster General James Farley, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Bernard S. Deutsch, president of the board of aldermen, Otis Skinner, J. B. Kennedy and Victor Moore.

Amity Expands Personnel

Amity Pictures' Chicago distribution will be managed by James Murtaugh and his associates, Jovoney, Barry and Charness, under the name Superior Pictures, at 806 South Wabash avenue. J. E. O'Toole, formerly Chicago manager, now has the Milwaukee and Minneapolis exchanges. Amity has acquired New Orleans territory rights to Father Charles E. Coughlin's "The Fighting Priest."

WHEN THE CENSORS GO INTO ACTION

Britain's Board of Film Censors objected to the title of Samuel Goldwyn's "Nana." They were afraid the opprobrium associated with Zola's book of the same name about forty years ago might reflect on the picture.

They decided, therefore, to give it a more moral title.

So "Nana" is now—"Lady of the Boulevards."

Otto Kahn Was Important Figure With Paramount

Otto H. Kahn, one of the world's most prominent banking figures, patron of the arts, philanthropist, who died last Thursday at his New York office, aged 67, was importantly identified with the financing of Paramount-Publix during that company's greatest period of major expansion.

Reports are current this week that Kuhn, Loeb & Company, Wall Street house which handled Paramount financing, will be headed by Sir William Wiseman as successor to Mr. Kahn. Sir William is concerned with the protective committee chiefly instrumental in bringing about reorganization of the company, and which received the advice of Mr. Kahn to the time of his sudden death.

Paramount's first step in the acquisition of an exhibition domain was by way of its initial public financing, when, in 1919, Kuhn, Loeb & Company handled a $2,000,000 stock issue. The financial house continued as the Paramount bankers until 1932. An acquaintance between Adolph Zukor, Paramount president, and Mr. Kahn, Kuhn, Loeb head, resulted in the selection of that house as the financing agent. Mr. Zukor, at a recent bankruptcy hearing, indicated the reason for that original selection by the simple statement that Mr. Kahn "was the only banker I knew."

The Kuhn, Loeb Company had become interested in motion picture financing as early as 1915, when it sponsored John R. Freuler for the presidency of the Mutual Film Company, in which Felix E. Kahn a brother of Otto, had been interested. With Kuhn, Loeb financial assistance, Mutual built the Rialto theatre on Broadway, with one S. L. Rothafel, taken from the Strand, up the street, as director. In the subsequent transaction by which Paramount acquired the Rialto, Mr. Zukor made the acquaintance of Mr. Kahn. Since the bankruptcy of Paramount in 1932, Mr. Kahn had been active in the rehabilitation of the company, in which, it is understood, he and other Kuhn, Loeb partners had invested heavily.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

NO "RAVES"

Motion Picture Herald is the most quoted journal of the industry. The authority of The Herald and its annual, Motion Picture Almanac, has been building status by consistent endeavour on a consistent and constant policy of calm reliability these many years.

It is interesting, therefore, to observe, and significant to record here on this page, that the oft quoted Herald is also the least frequently quoted when the purveyors of pictures are setting up symposiums of what they call "rave reviews."

Showmen never rave except for purposes of showmanship, for the purpose of "selling" somebody. Motion Picture Herald, neither in its review columns nor elsewhere, engages in staging editorial acts of either enthusiasm or despair.

It is the opinion, and policy, of Motion Picture Herald that the proper function of reviews in the trade press is to inform the showman of what he has to sell to his patrons, not to make up his mind for him, or to attempt to do so, but rather to give him briefly and accurately the information upon which he can base his own judgment.

The Herald looks at pictures for the exhibitor. Both the Herald and the exhibitor are glad when the picture is good, happy if it is great. The contributors to this page of showmen's reviews have seen a great many pictures. They also are persons who like motion pictures. But they do not "rave." Ballyhoo's place is in front of the box office, not on the exhibitor's desk.

Viva Villa

(MGM-Selznick)

Drama

In "Viva Villa" MGM brings a graphically vivid and different form of entertainment to the screen. Portraying the career of Pancho Villa from boyhood to assassination, it mixes dramatic legend and fiction with historical fact. At the same time, using similar colorful production and entertainment license, it depicts with realism actual events and incidents out of which grew Mexico of today.

The extended running time in itself reflects that "Viva Villa" is a big effort, and it's big in showmanship; it tackles a daring subject; the finished product demonstrates the spirit in which it was conceived; the convincing treatment in acting, action, dialogue and spectacle incorporates thrilling entertainment for every kind of patron.

The picture tells the story of the man, whose exploits of a generation ago headlined the world press and even today is exciting feature story material. Life drama motivates the production, and about it rotate the drama, pathos, theatric comedy of a nation that went through Hell of bloody revolution to achieve triumph. Villa, a simple, ignorant peon, is the flaming symbol of a race that met cruelty with ruthlessness, of a people that fought, killed, burned, looted and destroyed in its struggle for freedom, for a piece of the land. There's the Villa who heeded the word of Madero when victory seemed assured, who crawled on his knees begging for his life, later avenging his humiliation with fiendish brutality. There's the Villa who, when his idol Madero was murdered, sounded a fanatic "Villa Wants You"—to engender a war that placed him in the presidential palace to force the promulgation of Madero's law giving the poor their land. There's the Villa who, when he realized he was a misfit, retired to his many loves, and dying in a butcher shop, hoping that the reporter Johnny, who holds him in his arms, will say something nice about him in the world's newspapers.

The picture places in the hands of exhibitors the showmanship necessities. The Wallace Beery box-office draw is established. With Carrillo, Fay Wray, Stuart Erwin, Cook, Stone, Schildkraut and Henry Walthall there is plenty of name support. That the yarn is a liberal mixture of fact and fiction makes it possible to exploit in dynamic fashion all the legend accrued to Villa. While essentially a man's picture, the advance should stress to the limit all the vivid realism of the show, driving home the hint that no one should miss this picture.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Glamour

(Universal-Zeidman)

Drama

Here is a picture with a love story based on the tried and true triangle premise, but it is vividly human, packs a fine sentimental wallop and takes fine advantage of many theatre elements for well-rounded adult entertainment. It is both dramatic and romantic, yet not lacking in comedy contrasts. Giving life to the easily understood story is an exceptional cast.

One of the outstanding audience points is the picture's realism, dealing with a situation which almost every man and woman has either experienced or dreamed about, and directing its punch at playing on the emotions. While not being melodramatically heavy, it nevertheless is serious, but in being serious it skips the pitfall of somberness.

Timed to the present, located in New York and London and given a not-too-common backstage atmosphere, the story primarily concerns itself with a girl who wants both a career and love. Linda, small-time chorus girl, manages to achieve a friendship with Victor, successful and glamorous composer. To rid himself of her, Victor writes a song for her, and falling for her ambitious line gets her a starring spot in the Ibsen produced show. Clicking, fame, romance, marriage to Victor and a baby come to Linda.

A big timer, she is attracted to Valenti, whom she discovered in a Bohemian cafe and induced Ibsen to give a job in her show. Victor sacrifices his hopes for happiness after his wife and Valenti confess their love, and consents to divorce. The locale shifts to London, where Valenti's success and mode of life parallel Linda's rise to fame. Disillusioned, the girl returns to America, where tragedy awaits. The child dies, Victor has lost his grip, yet out of the whirlwind of disaster comes a realization that prompts Linda to spurn Valenti's cable asking her to come back to him. She returns to Victor and they plan a new life.

In addition to offering a good market value title, "Glamour" has a cast easily appealing to both men and women. Lukas' popularity with the women should not be overlooked; nor should Constance Cummings' rising prestige with the men be ignored. The newcoming Phillip Reed, in addition to having a pleasing voice, which effectively puts across the theme song, seems to have personality.

A little too mature for children, the selling campaign should be devoted to arousing adult interest.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Photographed by George Robinson. Film editor, Ted Kent. Art director, Charles D. Hall. Editorial supervision, Maurice Pivar. Sound supervision, Gilbert Kurland. Running time, 74 minutes. Idyllic Romance

Arousing patron interest for this picture probably will not prove an easy job. Designed as a sentimental emotion socker, aiming to attain unusual feminine sympathy appeal, it reaches the screen a long drawn out, heavily dialogued exposition of idyllic romance. It narrates a story of love found in the beauties of Capri; tragically lost in the bitter whirlwind of war; strangled but never subdued by the jealous intrigues of a double-crossing wife; a love that endures the heart-breaking pathos of years of separation to be found again in the charming locale of its inception.

Showmanship story value is there. But the picture is practically void of that spontaneous interest-quickening spark, an essential demanded by modern American audiences. Added to this handicap is the preponderant and heavily British accented dialogue, difficult to understand in many cases. This condition erects an obstacle seriously interfering with the successful Hollywood debut of Hugh Williams. Tending to create uneasiness on the part of patrons, this hindering interpretive medium detracts much from story charm.

Two other conditions serve further towards making the selling of this picture a real test of constructive showmanship. Although Williams is introduced as a new screen personality, the picture fails to present him in a manner that logically justifies any new star discovery furore. Thus it becomes necessary to rely heavily on the more familiar identities and play up strongly the values of Helen Twelvetrees, Herbert Mundin, Mona Barrie, Henry Stephenson and Halliwell Hobbes where names are the primary ticket selling stimulator. Second is the title tone, which in no way reflects the theme. Not indicative of what to expect, it suggests conflict between men, whereas the actual emotion and dramatic collision, the outstanding entertainment asset, is between two women.

As the negative qualities have been emphasized, it should not be construed that this picture is bare of several potent business-creating assets. Basically, it's a women's attraction, and should be sold with proper understanding of what most effectively piques their curiosity.

More than usual dependence should be placed on story values in which the emotional punch is preserved and a sincere attempt is made to stir interest by straight heart appeal. Thus an advance campaign built along the "you belong to me—I'll keep you always" idea, embellished by lines conveying the impression that this picture is an always tender, sometimes heart-disturbing story of a love hungry boy and girl whom neither human nor earthly material forces could sever, should prove adaptable.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Trumpet Blows

(Paramount)

Drama

This is a drama of brotherly love and conflict. With Mexico the locale, the color of bull-fighting creating a thrilling atmosphere, that dramatic entertainment quality is accentuated by an odd triangle romance. Subordinate to all are three vivid character studies and a line of contrasting comedy. These elements should be presented in the same glamorous fashion as they are incorporated in the picture.

Probably the outstanding feature of the picture is the different story telling technique adapted. As there is an air of semi-mystery surrounding Señor Montes, guesses at to what's going to happen create and hold interest. It seems that one of the brothers must be eliminated if what most persons are likely to anticipate is to eventuate, so the unusual finale seems to be the only logical conclusion.

The picture, opening in a cemetery, in a fashion that gives no clue as to what is to follow, Montes is established as a somewhat mysterious character. Moving to his hacienda, he welcomes home brother Manuel, who has dissipated his Yankee college years but is a pastmaster at getting familiar with the girls, a technique vividly demonstrated with Lupe.

One look at Carmela, the girl Montes has selected for his betrothed, solidifies Manuel's determination to be a bull-fighter. When he becomes involved in a compromising situation with alluring Chulita, whom his older brother hopes to wed, the turmoil is on and Manuel goes on his own.

Under old Chato's tutelage, he meets fair success as a minor league toreador and is invited to participate in a championship corridor in Mexico City. Montes, who always has considered his junior as yellow, decides to be in on the party, hoping to see the cocky youth get a thorough going over. However, again finding the boy and Chulita in intimate association, he discloses his real identity as a first-class bandit and dares Manuel to get in the ring with a fire-eating bull. The challenge accepted, Manuel dares his elder to make known his identity if he's not too yellow. The bull is about to kill the toreador, when Montes, although in the custody of the police, leaps into the arena to distract the bull's attention long enough for Manual to get to his feet and skillfully apply the sword. Then comes the hectic climax in which Pepi makes a boner in identifying his boss, Montes, that wins him freedom, and the fade-out has the reunited brothers marching off with Chulita between them.

The picture brings to the screen values that ordinary folk like to see. Primarily adult entertainment, it offers plenty of novel excitement and color. The unique bull-fighting atmosphere, similarly, affords a unique showmanship angle that can be given endless publicity adaptations. —McCarthy, Hollywood.

Finishing School

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Drama

Promising at the start to be modern light comedy, this picture gradually adapts a dramatic problem premise similar in intent to several recent pictures such as "Eight Girls in a Boat" and "Coming Out Party." Primarily it is a woman's picture. It devotes itself almost completely to creating sympathy for the poor little rich girl, central figure of the story, and thus has the element of a matinee attraction.

A unique idea is established to motivate the story. Crockett Hall, an ultra-exclusive girl's school, is introduced as "The Snob"—the menacing heavy. Its creed is dignified respectability. Yet the wealthy pupils know that they can get away with anything as long as the institution is not put in the nine hole. To it, wishing more time for her social activities, Mrs. Radcliff brings her daughter Virginia. A lonely girl, wanting maternal love more than anything else, Virginia would obey all the high sounding rules until, striking up with her roommate, Pony, gay high-flier who knows all the angles, she goes on a weekend trip to New York. Rescued from the unwelcome attention of an all-American football player by MacFarland, hoping-to-be doctor working as a waiter, their friendship quickly blossoms into love. Barred from visiting the school because he has no Blue Book social standing, the pair must meet clandestinely.

Comes Christmas vacation. Mother is off to Florida for the holidays; father in Washington for code hearings. Miss Van Alstyn, school head, informs Virginia that she will have to remain at the Hall. Informed of the situation by Pony, MacFarland sneaks in secretly and he and the girl meet in the boat house. Falling snow, covering up their footprints, denotes the passing of time. Weeks later, Miss Van Aylstyn becomes suspicious that something is wrong. Demanding that Virginia submit to medical examination, there is a tensely dramatic tear-filled sequence as the girl gives vent to her feelings, shocking and stunning the prim principal. As Mr. and Mrs. Radcliff are summoned, Virginia is on the verge of jumping off the balcony when she hears the familiar chug of Mac's flivver. Then comes the big scene in which the hero berates the school, Mrs. Radcliff and Miss Van Alstyn, topped off by the advent of Radcliff, who gives the boy a cigar when he announces he's going to marry the girl.

A straight-from-the-shoulder announcement that emphasizes the moral of the story, directed at the women—mothers and the older adolescents particularly—should prove effective.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Upperworld

(Warner)

Melodrama

Here is an audience picture that packs plenty entertainment and showmanship essentials. Primarily a human interest melodrama, it is also a group character study that majors in entertainment factors readily understood and appreciated by theatre-goers. Built on the "rich man can get away with murder" premise, strongly accenting natural realism, the plot excites attention at the beginning and by clever mixture of proved theatre values maintains interest all the way through.

Convincingly portrayed, with action and dialogue effectively counterbalanced, the show moves with pleasing speed. As the various situations are precipitated, audiences are fully aware of what is happening. Consequently there is hardly any mystery. Paradoxically, however, plot develops conflicting situations that defy logical anticipation of the finale. What does happen is decidedly different from advance conclusions.

Opening as a semi-sophisticated domestic drama, the yarn quickly plunges into its true character. A "society widower," Stream, powerful and wealthy railroad magnate, finds his wife's social duties erecting a barrier between them and his son, Tommy. A lonely man, he rescues Lily, burlesque show actress, from drowning. Spurred on by his chauffeur's queer how-to-be-happy philosophy, Stream finds much happiness in Lily's company. The domestic breach widening, menace enters as Producer Colima tries to make Lily blackmail her rich admirer. As he is forcing her to give up Stream's letters, the magnate appears at the crucial moment. A fight ensues, and two killings. Lily, trying to shield Stream, is a victim of Colima's bullet and Stream, grabbing a gun, shoots Colima. Then switching shells to make it appear murder and suicide, he leaves the apartment. He is seen by a vengeful cop, Moran, whom he previously had demoted. Stream returns home to find that his wife is beginning to realize that she has been lax in her domestic duties.

The murder investigation getting nowhere, Moran steps in and by getting finger prints that show Stream guilty, builds a dramatic anticlimax, growing to a finale that sees a jury acquitting Stream on the grounds of self-defense, and the reunited little family embarks on a second honeymoon.

This picture, in a sensible fashion, puts up on the screen practically all the elements that audiences like to see in a picture—drama, romance, thrill, hints of sex lure, comedy, menace, suspense, action and dialogue. Running through it all is a vein of sympathy stimulation. Though William takes advantage of the rich man's commonly accepted prerogative, nevertheless the audience is kept on his side. There are characters to pull for in this picture; there are others to hate, and everything moves realistically.

Sell it as a unique interpretation of a familiar plot, stressing all the varying values of the picture.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Original story by Ben Hecht. Screen play by Ben Markson. Photographed by Tony Gaudio. Running time, 70 minutes. Release date, April 28.

Speed Wings

(Columbia)

Action Melodrama

There is ample action of high speed variety in this film. With Tim McCoy on an airplane instead of a horse, this is the kind of action melodrama which numerous exhibitors often have indicated as their preference for that important weekend billing.

It is to be sold as action material of the skies, with a thrill in a parachute jump, and a sequence of suspense and speed in a race of fast planes, out to set a new air record. Couple that idea with the theme of the racing pilot who lost his nerve and was forced to regain it or crash, and won both his race and the girl. The Tim McCoy name of course belongs on the marquee. In support are Evalyn Knapp and William Bakewell, both familiar to the patrons. The others, quite unknown, serve as the expected menace.

It should be comparatively simple to arrange some sort of effective tieup with any airport or similar flying center in or near the community. It is the kind of picture with which the exhibitor can go after the children, feeling reasonably certain they will get the action type of thrill from the picture.

McCoy and Bakewell are all that is left of an aviation company, six men who made and flew racing planes. Bakewell, after the crash of number four, loses his racing nerve, can no longer take the sharp dips, achieve the high speed necessary for successful racing and motor testing. He threatens to resign, then accidentally meets Miss Knapp and hires her as an office stenographer, to McCoy's annoyance. But Bakewell is still beaten as a racing pilot, despite the efforts of McCoy and Miss Knapp to bring him back.

They discover that Hooper Atchley, rival manufacturer, somehow has learned of their motor plans, and has built a plane the equal of their best. When McCoy finds Miss Knapp's picture in Atchley's office, she falls under suspicion, though Bakewell refuses to believe it. Then McCoy finds his mechanic in the act of phoning information to Atchley, and promising the new McCoy plane will not fly in the big national race. McCoy throws him out. Miss Knapp discovers that McCoy has taken off to test a plane which has been damaged. When Bakewell refuses to go up, she does, warns McCoy, is forced to jump from her plane, and is hurt, landing in the hospital.

In order to force McCoy and Bakewell, who is pushed into the plane, to abandon the race just as it starts, Miss Knapp is kidnaped and word flashed to the racing plane. McCoy compels Bakewell to take the stick, parachutes down, and goes after the train in another plane. Bakewell flies on to win the race, which is action-packed, then goes after McCoy. Reconciliation all around, and termination of the Bakewell-Knapp romance, concludes the picture.

The weekend is the playing position, with the selling on the action angle and concentration on bringing in the youngsters.—Aaronson, New York.

Drama

Elizabeth Bergner, young and talented German actress, who was hailed for her recent performance in "Catherine the Great," is in this foreign-made production the chief selling factor for the exhibitor. Her performance, actually, is the mainstay of the production. Without her wholly appealing and engaging portrayal the film would have but little substance.

The film was adapted from the novel by Claude Anet, a fact which in all probability will mean little to the regular run of American motion picture patronage. Entirely in English, the settings are of course wholly in keeping with the European locale of the story, for the most part in Vienna. Paul Czinner, who directed "Catherine the Great," also made this, and Percy Marmont, once a popular star of the silent screen, plays the masculine lead opposite Miss Bergner. It is virtually Miss Bergner's picture, she and Marmont being the constant center of the story's development. Miss Bergner once again demonstrates her marked ability as a dramatic actress, with continual shifting of moods. She is the selling point, and about her may be woven copy indicating the story, that of a young girl meeting a cosmopolite and feigning past love affairs in order to hold his interest and affection.

Miss Bergner, a county school girl of brilliance, determines, despite the opposition of the aunt and uncle with whom she lives, to go on to Vienna to further her studies. At the opera she meets Marmont, world-wandering Englishman, who is fascinated by the charm and ingenuousness of the young student. They walk and talk, and she becomes virtually his mistress, the understanding being that if and when he tires of her company, they should immediately part, with no regrets and nothing owing on either side. Understanding from his conversation that he is a man of the world, she builds an elaborate fiction of numerous previous love affairs.

Eventually he leaves, with little ceremony, and the girl comes to the realization that she is in love with the man. Hearing nothing from him, she is completely unhappy until he returns, as suddenly as he went, and they go to Italy for a vacation. He is called to the United States, and she continues her student activities, until he returns again. At dinner, conversation turns to her past affairs, he plies her with questions, she fictionalizes as she recounts her adventures. They quarrel, he begins to pack, and only as his train is pulling out of the station, does he reach to the platform, draw her to his side, for what is understood to be a "live happily ever after" conclusion.

The film lacks action, the story lacks depths and real value, and the exhibitor playing the picture will have to make the most of Miss Bergner, as a capable performer, and with reference to her highly successful interpretation of "Catherine the Great."

It is obviously adult material.—Aaronson, New York.

The Crosby Case

(Universal)

Mystery

A mystery film of more or less routine character, "The Crosby Case" offers little in the way of unusual material for selling with respect to cast names, treatment or title, making it necessary for the exhibitor to concentrate on complications in a murder mystery, with ample suspicion falling almost equally upon a number of involved persons. From the standpoint of eventual reaction on the part of the audience, it is quite sufficient to note that the guilty party is perhaps the least suspect of all, yet a cleverly simple deduction on the part of the inspector indicates that he should have been the most ready suspect.

There is, then, ample excuse for the exhibitor to make use of the time-honored but quite effective device of challenging the audience to use their wits in solving the mystery of the murder of the quack doctor. He may feel reasonably certain that no one, or very few, will succeed.

The only names which will have any amount of selling significance are Wynne Gibson, Onslow Stevens, J. Farrell MacDonald, and perhaps Alan Dinehart, William Collier, Sr., Warren Hymer and John Wray. Richard "Skeets" Gallagher is cast in a minor role, hardly warranting important billing.

When Dr. Crosby staggers out of an apartment house entrance one night, to fall in front of a passing taxi, the ambulance surgeon discovers he was shot, and the police take charge. Dinehart is the inspector, Collier his pseudo-intelligent detective, who serves to supply a bit of comedy, as does Hymer as the stupid, hulking cab driver. The comedy relief is well handled.

Suspects include Miss Gibson, apprehended as she leaves the same apartment house; Stevens, who is discovered to have owned the killer's gun some time before; Edward Van Sloan, a half-blind research engineer, who was the last to see the doctor alive; Wray, police stool pigeon, who is picked up by detectives with $2,000 in currency in his pocket, the reason for which he refuses to explain; MacDonald, doorman at the apartment house where the doctor lived. Gallagher is merely the reporter who spends his time in the inspector's office, making remarks concerning the intelligence of Collier.

A case is pinned on Stevens, but there is a definite absence of motive. It is indicated that Stevens and Miss Gibson once were engaged, but that he suddenly disappeared. The angle of the couple, she doing her best to aid in establishing his innocence, after they are reconciled at police headquarters, provides the exhibitor with a copy idea. Miss Gibson breaks the police case against Stevens, who was identified by Van Sloan, when she proves the scientist to be practically blind. Eventually Dinehart, after the discovery of iron filings, indicating where the number on the gun was tampered with, and the deduction that MacDonald followed Crosby into the street when he staggered forth, instead of assisting him in the lobby of the apartment house, proves his case against MacDonald, the motive having been blackmail with regard to

Ever Since Eve

(Fox)

Comedy-Drama

By reason of the presence in the cast of George O'Brien, one might be led to believe this is another western. Though part of it is set in western country, it is not of that variety of hardy perennial, and should not be sold as such. It lacks the western's action and excitement, but rather definitely makes up for that lack with respect to comedy and novelty situation and idea.

There might be considerable advantage in the wholly accurate device of selling the film as one in which George O'Brien is not a cow puncher or guardian of the law, but a western gold miner, who runs into the oldest difficulty on earth, the complications which result from misunderstanding of a member of the opposite sex. Also, O'Brien steps out of his customary cowman's garb and dons the dress of the man of the city. He is a man about town for a short while, an angle which should be worth considerable attention in the selling of the picture. The O'Brien fans, and they are many, should be challenged with the idea of seeing their star out of his usual casting. Much should be made of the comedy, in which Herbert Mundin takes a leading part.

With O'Brien's name may be sold that of Mary Brian, who makes an attractive heroine, and Mundin. Betty Blythe, in a minor role, offers a performance which is definitely reminiscent of the screen of another, and earlier day, but she may be remembered by some of the audience. The title offers an opportunity for selling to the feminine contingent of the patronage.

O'Brien is the youngest of four partners, western owners of a profitable gold mine, and treated as a son by the three elders, Mundin, Roger Imhof and Russell Simpson. With their Chinese cook, they live alone, and dread the sight of women. It becomes necessary for one of them to go to the city to buy mining machinery, and the three elders are thrown into a fright. O'Brien arranges to win the card draw which is taken to decide, and Simpson and Imhof force Mundin to accompany him as guardian, despite his objections.

In town, O'Brien meets Miss Brian, who appears to be playing him for a good thing. Mundin's protests are useless. In fact, he himself indulges in a tete-a-tete with Miss Blythe, Miss Brian's mother. En route to the western home after the marriage of the young couple, O'Brien becomes suspicious of her motives in marrying him, and treats her distantly, though warning her to "act as though she loved him" before the others. The two quarrel and she returns home. O'Brien goes after her; she attempts to teach him a lesson, and he leaves without her, she going back to the mine alone. O'Brien leaves the country, traveling abroad, while a son is born to his wife. The sequence in which the three elderly men all act the prospective father is highly amusing. O'Brien eventually returns, still not knowing of the heir, and treats his wife in the same chilly manner. To bring them together, Simpson frames a kidnap scare, which works perfectly, bringing about a reconciliation.

The manner in which the dramatic theme of a marital complication is thrown against the amusing background of Mundin and the old men, makes for good entertainment, for the weekend or midweek.—AARONSON, New York.

Channel Crossing

(Gaumont-British)

Melodrama

There are three ways of crossing the 21 miles of sea that flow between England and the shores of France; the majority of travelers go by boat, an appreciable minority goes by air, and a few hardy souls try to swim it! The producers of this piece of frank melodrama chose the first method as the background for their story, and thereby built up an effective atmosphere for a lightly entertaining story.

All the action takes place aboard the channel steamer Canterbury, and a number of passengers become involved in the workings of circumstances, all in the "Grand Hotel" manner. There is a powerful financier, who carries thousands of lesser folk in his train and has built up a reputation for being infallible. Unfortunately he is not invulnerable, and his pretty secretary finds he has been issuing worthless script to further his schemes. So it all goes wrong, and the secretary's headstrong young lover throws a spanner in the works. The result is that the financier takes advantage of a sea mist to heave him overboard, and then, to satisfy the secretary, is instrumental in saving the young man's life. Of course, there can be only one way out. The financier takes an overdose of sleeping medicine and the curtains close on the boat disappearing in the direction of England, the sweethearts in a clinch.

It's just as simple as that, and needs a strong bit of acting by Matheson Lang, well-known English heavy, to hold it together. Lang puts sincerity into the part of the financier and creates a definite interest for the character. As far as American audiences are concerned, there is only Constance Cummings, as the secretary, to mean much, and she certainly portrays beauty in distress with telling effect. Anthony Bushell is the lover, a somewhat anemic youth, and popular British players (including Edmund Gwenn, hero of "The Good Companions") have incidental roles.

Life is given to the picture by a series of wise-cracking interpolations by a vaudeville star named Max Miller, which any audience should find to its liking.

How this subject may be sold to American customers is not easy to judge. It has certain material for dramatic suggestion. Its marine atmosphere may assist in this, many of the settings being of an exceptionally pleasing nature.—CHARMAN, London.

Bedlam of Beards

(RKO Radio)

Fair Comedy

Clark and McCullough, RKO's lively comedians, go through most of their usual antics in this subject, which is most aptly described by its title. The pair, barbers, decide to go after the reward offered for the return of the kidnapped Whipple, a bearded and deaf elderly gentleman. McCullough is sent into the street as a decoy, bearded like the real Whipple, but unfortunately Whipple's wife finds him and takes him home. Eventually Clark, McCullough, the kidnapping leader, and the real Whipple are tearing about the house, all wearing the same kind of beard. It is fair comedy, at best.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Goofytone News Reel

(Universal)

Questionable

This, number six of the series, will appear too silly to be amusing to some patrons, in all probability, and just silly enough to be enjoyable to others. A burlesque on the normal newsreel, this number has the annoyed husband explaining the reasons for his contemplated divorce, a nudist colony interview, two large feminine cross-country hikers, a "biologist" explaining his passion for ants, firemen at work and the manhole endurance champion coming up for air. If your patrons like this sort of thing—Running time, 9 minutes.

The Brave Tin Soldier

(Celebrity)

Good Cartoon

Brightened by the use of color, this latest subject in the P. A. Powers ComiColor cartoon series is of the sort to be found entertaining by adults and highly enjoyable for youngsters. When the old toymaker finds one soldier with a leg missing, he throws it away. When the master has retired, the one-legged soldier meets the toe dancer, arouses the anger of the king, and they are both shot, landing at the gates of heaven where his leg is restored. It is well drawn and the color is good.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Dirty Work

(MGM)

Good Comedy

Though more or less of the slapstick variety of comedy, this Laurel and Hardy subject is amusing, has a few real laughs, and where the audience is especially appreciative of this ace comedy team of MGM, it should be thoroughly enjoyed. In this case they are a pair of chimney sweeps, going to work in the home of a scientist, who has developed a fluid which makes the victim many years younger. The two have their usual battle, this time to the accompaniment of clouds of dust. Eventually, as expected, Hardy falls into the liquid, emerging as an infant, with the Hardy derby and mannerisms.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Headliners

Some Entertainment

Ed Sullivan, New York columnist, who is a far better columnist than a motion picture player, is the focal point of this Mentone subject, which with its several vaudeville turns, is fair entertainment. With Sullivan, who meets the comedy team of Block and Sully in a restaurant, as leader of the expedition, the camera moves to shots of Barbara Blanc, eccentric dancer, and Ben Pollack's orchestra at the Casino de Paree in New York. George Givot, of the often amusing comic accent, does his bit as the restaurant proprietor. It is fair entertainment, but the names may mean but little in the field.—Running time, 20 minutes.

THE CUTTING ROOM

STINGAREE

RKO-Radio

This is a dramatic love story, in which music plays an effective but not dominant part. Written by E. W. Horning, it was adapted to the screen by Becky Gardiner. William Wellman, whose work with "Lilly Turner," "Heroes for Sale," "Wild Boys of the Road" and "College Coach" is demonstrative of his versatility, is the director. Music and lyrics are by Frank Harling and Gus Kahn.

The cast is composed almost exclusively of well-known screen names. Irene Dunne, most recently seen in "Ann Vickers" and "If I Were Free," and Richard Dix are starred. Listed among the supporting players are Mary Boland, Conway Tearle, Andy Devine, Henry Stephenson, Una O'Connor, George Barraud and "Snub" Pollard.

The story, which promises high dramatic value, is timed to half a century ago. The locales are Australia, London, other European capitals and finally Auustralia for the climax. Equally dividing its theme between idyllic romance and exciting drama, it is marked by punchy dialogue, calls for fast and thrilling action and utilizes incidental and specialized music in an effective manner. It concerns itself with the undying love which a girl has for a picturesque good-bad bandit. Rescued from misery by the bandit, who is charmed by her voice, he uses true desperado tactics to gain her an audience with a noted operatic producer. Captured and jailed, he waits while the girl goes on to musical success that brings the day's notables to her feet. Love for the man who made her fame possible prompts her return to Australia, where the bandit escapes, kidnaps the girl and takes her to a hideaway where they never will be separated.

The story looks to be natural material for both Irene Dunne and Richard Dix. It likewise appears to have the entertainment values for the more discerning patrons as well as the regular run-of-the-mill customers.

"20th CENTURY"

Columbia

In adapting this stage show, which was remarkably popular in New York and many metropolitan centers, Columbia is majoring on comedy. The original and screen play are by Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht, who previously worked together on "Front Page." MacArthur did "Rasputin and the Empress" and the screen play of "Viva Villa" is Hecht's latest contribution. An action director, Howard Hawks, who made "Scarface," "The Crowd Roars," "Tiger Shark" and "Today We Live," is directing the MacArthur-Hecht material.

Following up its "It Happened One Night" experience, Columbia has better than usual name values in the cast. John Barrymore and Carole Lombard are in the leads. Supporting this pair is a roster of players that includes many familiar and several new names. Of the better known players, Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Dale Fuller, Ralph Forbes, Edgar Kennedy, Herman Bing and Lee Kohlmar have important parts. Less familiar personalities are Etienne Girardot, who appeared in "The Kennel Murder Case," Clifford Thompson, Gigi Parrish, Snowflake and Pat Flaherty.

As comedy predominates in dialogue, action and sequences, the story narrates the hectic, flamboyant experiences of a busted theatrical producer who resorts to every wile and strategem to lure an ex-flame and now sensational stage star to sign a contract to act for him and thus rehabilitate his threadbare fortunes.

Speedy action, which in many cases jumps back to the silent day technique for pantomime effect, is relied upon to heighten the brisk and brusque dialogue. As the show is really a story of high-powered showmanship, it should contain plenty of easily adaptable showmanship ideas.

AFFAIRS OF A GENTLEMAN

Universal

Adapted from the stage play, "Women in His Life," this story, essentially a murder mystery, includes also some tricky romance, quite a bit of situation and dialogue comedy and more than the usual amount of thrill. The screen play is by Cyril Hume and Peter Ruric and direction is by Edward Marin, who during the past year handled "The Death Kiss," "Bombay Mail" and "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

The cast is composed entirely of familiar screen names. Paul Lukas, now riding the crest of high popularity with women because of "Little Women," "Candlelight," "Glamour" and "The Countess of Monte Cristo," has the leading role. Leila Hyams tops the list of half a dozen women in Lukas' life, including Patricia Ellis, Dorothy Burgess, Lillian Bond, Joyce Compton and Dorothy LeBaire. Of the men beside Lukas in the cast, Onslow Stevens, who played in "Counsellor at Law," "Only Yesterday" and currently is in "I'll Tell the World," and Phillip Read, who appeared in "Gambling Lady," "Fashions of 1934" and clicked in "Glamour," have the most important parts.

The story seems to have an unusually tricky showmanship value. A man (Lukas), author of sexy best sellers, is found dead. Reconstructing the crime, the events of the immediate past, as well as the corpse, are brought to life again. As the amazing situation in which Lukas has involved himself with the six women in his life, their husbands and lovers is reacted, mystery builds along with romance, drama and comedy. So complex and baffling is story narration that even to the climax it is unhinted as to whether the man was murdered or committed suicide.

Shubert Defends Right to "Ziegfeld" Name on "Follies"

Lee Shubert, theatrical producer, declared in White Plains, N. Y., last week that he and his brother J. J. Shubert, were entitled to the use of the name Ziegfeld in connection with the production of the current stage "Follies," under a contract with Mrs. Billie Burke Ziegfeld, widow of Florenz Ziegfeld, and the estate of Abraham Erlanger, another producer.

Mr. Shubert was summoned by Surrogate George A. Slater in a proceeding instituted by William S. Coffey, as administrator of the Ziegfeld estate. Mr. Coffey sought to examine Mr. Shubert on the ground he was withholding property belonging to the estate by using the late producer's name without authorization.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 218.—(A) In measuring the focal length of a simple lens in what way must the light rays reach the lens? (B) How would you proceed to measure the focal length of a bi-convex lens? (C) What two focal lengths are of importance to projectionists and why are they important? (D) What do you understand "working distance" to mean as applied to a projection lens?

Answer to Question No. 212

Bluebook School Question No. 212 was: (A) Just what optical elements has a projection lens? (B) Why are the two front lenses cemented together and what is used to cement them? (C) Is it possible the cement used between the two front lenses may melt and run out? (D) What would you do if it did? (E) Is it possible to correct screen image distortion due to angular projection by specially ground lenses? Explain.

(A) There were so many correct answers to this one that no fair selection could be made exeept in one point, namely, the use of the term "factor." This our good friends, the Bausch and Lomb engineers, have advised me is at variance with long established practice, which is to designate the front and rear factors (as we have termed them) of a projection the "elements," which practice we have agreed to conform to. Our good friend G. E. Doe is the only one who made note of this, so we select his answer for publication. He says:

"Four lenses constitute the assemblage from which a projection lens is made. Of these two, separated by a spacing ring (except in one make of lens in which they are cemented together), are termed in our Bluebook the 'back factor,' though lensmakers term them the back or rear 'element.'

"The other two are so cemented that the entire surfaces are joined solidly with a cement having almost the same refractive index as Crown glass, all of which results in little or no surface reflection losses and negligible refraction of light. This in effect double lens is the front element, or should I say factor since we are Bluebook students."

The term elements will be adopted in the new Bluebook.—F. H. R.

(B) William Lemke says: "The two front lenses are cemented together with Canadian balsam to prevent the lens correction from being disturbed when cleaning also to reduce light loss and prevent undesirable refraction."

H. Edwards says: "The two front lenses are cemented for the reason that to insure undisturbed lens correction these two lenses must be and remain in precisely the same position with relation to each other. The cement is Canadian balsam."

T. VanVaulkenburg answers thus: "These two lenses are cemented into physical contact all over their inner surfaces by Canadian balsam, for the reason that it is essential that they remain in precise relation to each other and to accomplish this without any or as little as possible light refraction in passing from one lens to the other."

(C) Every one answered this correctly except one man, which means that by huge majority "yes" is the correct answer.

(D) G. E. Doe says: "In event the cement melted I would secure the loan of a lens from the supply house and have them send my lens to the factory for recementing. It is a job the projectionist could not possibly do. It would be possible for him to separate the lenses by slowly heating them in water, but there his ability would end and even in doing that he might work injury to the lens surfaces."

(E) D. Goldberg and L. Hutch answer thus: "Screen image distortion due to projection angle is due to the fact that the light beam expands with every added foot of distance from the lens, therefore since the top of the screen located perpendicular will be nearer to the lens than its bottom, it follows that that portion of the beam incident upon sections below the top must travel further, and therefore will be expanded more at the screen plane.

"Theoretically this might be overcome by lens grinding. Practically it cannot, for the reason that if such a lens could be made, which is very doubtful except possibly in cases of very slight distortion, it would be enormously costly by comparison with ordinary lenses. The condition can only be remedied by (1) locating lens and screen center opposite each other—so locating the lens that its optical axis will be perpendicular to the screen surface, or (2) accomplishing this purpose by tilting the top of the screen back until that condition exists."

Excellent, gentlemen. I am not myself entirely certain, but believe a lens to remedy such a condition could not be ground in the usual way. I think it would have to be ground by hand, in which case it certainly would cost plenty. I shall ask about that and advise you as to the answer. Anyhow, it would be an entirely impracticable thing to apply in practical work.

Interior Department Plans Park and CCC Pictures

With H. T. Cowling, treasurer of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, producing, the Interior Department at Washington is preparing to undertake the production of motion pictures for the National Park Service and for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Pictures outlining the activities of the two organizations are to be produced by the department, which in the past has undertaken similar picturization of other activities. In addition to preparing a film record of its operations, the new unit is expected to undertake to furnish educational programs to the Civilian Conservation Camps.

GERMAN ADVERTISING COUNCIL AIM TO AID HOME FILMS IN OWN CITIES

Seeks to Facilitate Exploitation and Bring New Customers; Theatre's Own Advertising Is Exempt From 2 Per Cent Tax

by J. K. RUTENBERG
Berlin Correspondent

During the past few weeks there have been in the foreign press partly contradictory reports regarding the intentions and duties of the German Advertising Council. These reports make it necessary to outline concisely and clearly the immediate intentions and duties of that organization. The rules for the carrying out of the law of September 12, 1933, give the Council certain social economic duties and also the power to carry them through. In order, however, to be able to work effectively for German social economics, it is absolutely necessary first of all to reorganize the handling of advertising and its administration.

The Council for Advertising of German Economics does not aim to put a check on all those who are handling economic advertising according to good commercial principles. On the contrary, it is the sole duty of the Council to further effective advertising in any possible way and to demonstrate to the German people as a whole the value and the necessity of economic propaganda. The Advertising Council will oppose only departures from sound advertising principles.

The Council has in mind only protection of German pictures in the German towns and country-side; this, however, does not mean that the Council will forbid all outside advertising. The outside advertising, which by many firms is not always carried through in the best manner, in certain instances has induced many people to demand the elimination of any and all outside advertising. But to the duties of the Advertising Council belong the maintenance and the furtherance of every possibility for labor. It wants to place the necessary outside advertising into clearly indicated channels and in this way do justice to good taste as well as to the requirements of economics. The Advertising Council therefore will now issue rules for the future handling of all outside advertising. It will not examine every advertisement, every poster, every advertising letter, and every prospectus before its appearance. Such a task could practically never be fulfilled.

Reserves Right to Withdraw Permits

The main point of the rule lies in this, that the Advertising Council reserves the right in certain special cases to withdraw even a generally issued permit. The permit to do economic advertising of course will be taken only from those who believe that they can continue to injure German advertising by edition swindle, tariff unfaithfulness or any other questionable practice. For 25 years there has been in Germany an Advertising Protection Union and the various unions have negotiated among themselves for the last ten years in order to come to a better understanding. Practice has shown that the way followed until now has not led to the goal and therefore the Advertising Council of German Economics is obliged to interfere with the most drastic means in its power, that is, the taking away of the permit.

Not only in this negative sense will the Advertising Council reestablish confidence in the value of advertising, but also will very much facilitate by positive measures the exploitation of advertising means and thereby bring many new customers to all those who place means of advertising at the disposal of economics. From a second announcement of the Advertising Council is to be noticed that the 2 per cent tax will neither be taken from the advertising adviser nor from the advertising agent, but solely and entirely from the advertiser, that is, the person who is carrying out the advertising.

Protecting the Theatre Owner

In order to protect the motion picture theatre owner against annoyance and at the same time give him some data about the new regulations regarding advertising—as far as they are of importance to him—the following is pointed out:—

The law differentiates between self-advertising and foreign advertising. Self-advertising is exempted from taxation. Foreign advertising, however, is subject to taxation.

Self-advertising is all kinds of advertising which the owner of a theatre is using for his own enterprise. Hereunder fall for instance the following:

1. Transparencies, luminous strips or other luminous advertising apparatus at the front part of the house or in the lobby or the theatre, or in the theatre itself. In this case it does not matter whether the advertising devices contain the name of the theatre or whether they refer to the film which is being produced at that time.
2. The theatre has carriages or motor cars passing through the town on which posters or loud-speakers, respectively, are announcing the theatre or the pictures shown in the theatre.
3. The advertising is being done by posters on wooden walls in front or inside the theatre.
4. Advertising the theatre in newspapers, magazines, or the like.
5. Advertising in the lobby of the theatre or at a similar place by pictures, writings or sound, for other theatres owned by the same company or the same person.

If there is, for instance, a selling counter—sweets, cigarettes, or the like—established by a foreign firm, in the lobby, the receipts through lease or rent, obtained by the owner of the theatre, are exempt from taxation.

Taxable Foreign Advertising

The taxable foreign advertising classification takes in the following cases:

1. In the lobby of the theatre are show-windows of one or more firms.
2. In the lobby of the theatre is some kind of exhibition by one or more firms.
3. The placard of the theatre is for instance surrounded by the notice: "Read the paper," advertising a third firm.
4. In the program distributed by the theatre foreign firms are advertised.
5. On the theatre ticket, on its back or on the margin, advertising for foreign firms appears.
6. The program of the theatre has a special space for advertisements in which third firms are advertised by picture, sound or writing.

All these systems of advertising are dutiable. There is, however, an important case of exception, if the theatre has transferred by way of contract the exploitation of advertising to an advertising company. That is to say, if not he himself but only the advertising company closes the advertising contracts.

Foreign Advertising Dutiable; Theatre Cannot Place Bulletins in Outside Shops Unless on Special Poster Walls

A special regulation of the new law must be pointed out. It is fundamentally prohibited to announce the theatre or the program of the theatre by hanging up placards, printed matter or the like in shops of third persons—for instance, hairdresser, cigaret shops, or the like—or at any other places.

Exception will not be granted. It does not make any difference if the display of this poster is being paid for or free of charge. An exception is made only in case this advertising is being done at places especially destined to this purpose, for instance on walls for posters, or the like, and, of course, in case it is effected at the place of operation.

This regulation in the advertising law is new for the film business, all the more because advertising through display of placards has expressly been settled by the regulations of the Reichsfilm chamber. It is to be hoped, in order to avoid a dispute among the authorities, that these regulations will be altered.

A special permit for advertising need not be applied for by the theatre owner. It has generally been granted both for self-advertising and foreign advertising through the law.

The amount of the tax is 2 per cent of the real proceeds; that means of the amount which the theatre owner finally receives, for instance after deducting the commission for an intermediary.

Columbia Adds Exploiteers

Eric Knight Writes Novel

Eric M. Knight, film critic of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, has had published a novel, "Invitation to Life." Several film companies are reported interested in the story.

"Viva Villa" at Criterion

MGM plans to open "Viva Villa" at the Criterion, New York, as a two-a-day road-show, on April 6. It will be the first MGM release to play the Criterion for eight years.

DEAR HERALD:

Every once in a while there comes to one an agreeable and pleasant surprise that nearly knocks him off the chair. Such an experience was ours yesterday when we received a three page closely typewritten letter from our good friend, Bernard Charman, of Hampstead Garden, London, England.

Mr. Charman is the London representative of this household necessity and he ranks well up to the top of the journalistic profession of England, and we wish we had the space to give you his letter in full, but you know how Ernie is (being a Scotchman born and raised in Sweden), he is pretty tight with his space, so all we can do is to comment on it.

Mr. Charman seems to be laboring under some kind of a delusion, for he seems to think that we have some special knowledge of this business that is not common to other members of the industry, all of which is a mistake, since we are nothing but a ham writer from the sagebrush and therefore not supposed to know much, if anything, about the business. However, there are certain phases of the business that have become so deeply imbedded in our hide we sometimes fear that it will break out in some kind of a rash that might be dangerous.

As to British Product

In his letter Mr. Charman asks us some rather pointed questions relative to the reaction of the American audience to the English product. Since the questions are honest and fair we will attempt to be equally fair and honest with our answers, as we have experienced this reaction in our wanderings.

As we have observed it throughout the country, the principal objection of the American audience to the English product is in the dialogue. Not but what the English pronunciation is correct, but in many cases it is very much different from that used on this side of the water. For instance, the American would say, "I'm going out to see the horses," while some Englishmen would say, "I'm going hout to see the 'osses." Not much different but confusing through a loud speaker when you are watching the performers.

Mr. Charman cites several English made pictures and wishes us to state the American reaction to them. The only picture we recall at this time is "Sorrel and Son," and we are free to say that we have heard more favorable comment on that picture (and are still hearing it, although it was played here over a year ago) than any picture we can call to mind at this time.

And There's "Be Mine Tonight"

There is another foreign made picture that has met with a peculiar experience in this country, and that was "Be Mine Tonight." It ran continuously in one of the Minneapolis theatres for eighteen weeks before it was taken off, but in most of the smaller towns it is said to have been a flop, not because the picture was poorly done, but because the people were leary of English actors and English dialogue. Everyone who saw the picture praised it, except possibly those who desire their entertainment to run to "hot stuff." Personally we rate "Be Mine Tonight" as the most satisfying entertainment we have experienced in many a day. There is this about English-made pictures that the American audience can always bank on. They will be clean and free from sex situations and suggestive matter that are, and have been, so common with the American product.

The average American producer has a perverted notion that what the American public wants is hot stuff, bedroom scenes, long clinches on the sofa, suggestive remarks and situations, when as a matter of fact they want nothing of the kind, except a small portion of the audience whose minds run to that kind of entertainment, and thank God, they are of a mighty small minority. If we could only make Hollywood understand that!

We are sorry not to be able to answer Mr. Charman's most excellent letter direct, but we have to conserve our strength to be able to pound out a little stuff for this colyum, otherwise we couldn't furnish the family with beans and sowbelly. But we trust that Mr. Charman will accept this as answer and remember that he has some mighty warm friends in the HERALD office on this side of the ocean.

"And 100 Other Artists"

We saw a poster recently advertising a picture which gave the names of the two stars and then added, "and 100 other artists," and it made us wonder if the writer of that poster thought that the public was a lot of suckers and hadn't any sense and that the exhibitors were a bunch of dupes who would swallow anything.

The fact is that they have never put "100 artists" in any picture, no matter how big, and when they are trying to fool the public and the exhibitors they are only fooling themselves, and when Hollywood will start putting a little honesty and common sense in their advertising this business will show marked improvement.

According to the radio there are at least two hundred different brands of gasoline, each one a little better than the other one, notwithstanding that they all most likely come out of the same well, and out of the same refinery and out of the same tank, and nobody can tell the difference. To hear these announcers tell of the merits of their particular brand would lead one to expect to hear some spieler tell you that his tooth paste was strong enough to remove the enamel from a bath tub or hear some fellow singing "Pull for the shore, sailor, pull for the shore" when he was about to croak with the bellyache. There's a lot of difference between what some people think the public thinks and what the public really thinks. W. H. Public is one guy you can't fool.

An editorial in the Omaha World-Herald today says: "Ten thousand women became ten thousand fighting, screeching wildcats at the funeral of Lilyan Tashman in New York recently. This was no doubt prompted by curiosity rather than by reason, since the deceased had a world reputation as a screen actress and a Hollywood reputation as 'the best dressed woman in America'."

The exhibition by those women of their disgraceful conduct at Miss Tashman's funeral is another evidence of the predominance of mob spirit over reason and reminds us again that it is one of the dangerous things we have to contend with. A women's mob is much more dangerous than a men's mob, for the reason that men will temper their rash actions with some reason, while a women's mob runs hog wild.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is reported in the HERALD as saying," if the present federal criminal law was enforced against a few bad boys making a few pictures which have smart-aleck sophisticated smut, there would be greater results than from all the censorship bills in the world." Fine! We agree with him, but he should remember that his organization is the one that promulgated the famous "Code of Ethics," so why pass the buck to the law enforcement bureau?

We will leave this parting thought with you, that while mobs may come and mobs may go, you never need fear that there will be any mob demonstration over the bier of a radio crooner.

Joyce Sees American Talent Important to Foreign Films

The industry in Europe, England particularly, will derive great benefit from the creation of a wider field for American talent abroad, Frank Joyce, of Joyce-Selznick agency, declared last week on his return from Europe. The Coast agent said an interchange of talent would be an aid to the industry on both sides of the Atlantic.

Mr. Joyce said he found comedy talent especially in demand abroad, and had signed considerable talent, including Elizabeth Bergner and Flora Robson, of "Catherine the Great," and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who will be presented in a play as yet uncompleted, which is expected to run 12 weeks in New York following a similar engagement in London.

Poster Association To Meet

Members of the National Poster Service Association from all parts of the country will meet in St. Louis early in April. Simon Libros of Philadelphia is president. The organization plans to print its own posters on pictures from all companies.

Daly With United Artists

Len Daly, formerly with Paramount, has joined the foreign publicity department at United Artists.

ABOVE THE CLOUDS: Richard Cromwell—A very good action picture with plenty of wisecracks which were rather different though most of them were imitations of the line which Mae West possesses. An excellent picture for Saturday or midweek, as it has plenty of action. Played March 16-17.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

ABOVE THE CLOUDS: Richard Cromwell, Robert Armstrong—This is a good program picture played on a double bill. They all liked it and said so.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

ABOVE THE CLOUDS: Richard Cromwell, Robert Armstrong—Here is a picture without stars that is very good. A good story and fast action. My people liked it. Running time, 68 minutes.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

BEFORE MIDNIGHT: Ralph Bellamy—Just another one of those Who Killed Cock Robin things. Customers wasted an evening. I wasted a play date. Running time, 63 minutes. Played Mar. 13.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family patronage.

BEFORE MIDNIGHT: Ralph Bellamy, June Collyer—Why they still make mystery pictures is still one big mystery to me. Someone is killed and presto, Sherlock Holmes slides in, and after six reels of audience snores, BOO-OO-OO, the murderer is found. Played Mar. 16-17.—Alvin P. Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

KING OF THE WILD HORSES: Rex, William Janney, Dorothy Appleby—A good western for Friday-Saturday. Pleased my weekend patrons. Played Mar. 2-3.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE WILD HORSES: William Janney—An excellent western. Compares with "Strawberry Roan." Lots of good scenery and action. Will do business on your action nites. Business better than average.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

MASTER OF MEN: Jack Holt, Fay Wray—A very good program picture. All liked it. The star, as usual, extra good, and story entertaining.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MY WOMAN: Wallace Ford, Helen Twelvetrees—Just a picture. The acting fine but the story was not there. The cast tried to make it good but my patrons said it was not, and the customers are always right.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

NIGHT OF TERROR: Bella Lugosi—Doubled this one with "Dangerous Crossroads," also a Columbia picture. Both are nice pictures and will please. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Feb. 22.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

NINTH GUEST, THE: Donald Cook, Genevieve Tobin—Usual murder mystery. We did a fair business but nothing unusual. Too much of these plays are being displayed. The public wants something different. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Mar. 6-7.—Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

SHADOWS OF SING SING: Bruce Cabot, Grant Mitchell—Played this on Bargain Night and it seemed to please. Running time, seven reels. Played Mar. 5-6.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

SOLDIERS OF THE STORM: Regis Toomey—This one is far too weak. Use it for a double feature program. Played Feb. 28.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

Empire

LETTING IN THE SUNSHINE: Rene Gadd—This is a good musical comedy. If we could get a few more like this one we could educate the public on this continent to appreciate British films. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 14-15.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

First Division

BIG DRIVE, THE: Official Signal Corps picture of the World War. Because of recent war publicity, brought this to excellent business. Tied up with Legion post and results very satisfactory. Running time, 91 minutes.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

ROAD TO RUIN: Helen Foster, Paul Page—Have not seen any exhibitor reports on this and hasten to tell everyone who wants to make some money to get this picture and give it an extended run. The reaction is beneficial. It causes a great deal of talk and some of those kind of pictures that makes the patrons go out and tell some one else to be sure to see it. Business great.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. Small town patronage.

First National

BEDSIDE: Warren William, Jean Muir—Just a fair program picture, about a fake doctor who finally gets caught up with, but he gets the girl. Played Mar. 5-6.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

BIG SHAKEDOWN, THE: Bette Davis, Charles Farrell—This is just another picture dealing with the old familiar gangster operations. This time they go in the drug business. It is a drama with a touch of comedy and a good love story. In spite of the splendid cast and acting, I consider this only fair entertainment and strictly adult material. The Warner trailer sold it and business about average for a one day showing. Running time, 64 minutes. Played March 22.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

BIG SHAKEDOWN, THE: Charles Farrell—Not up to Warner's standard in production or draw. If you are forced to play it use it on double program. Too many crook and racketeer pictures have been made. While this one deals with drugs, it has nothing new to offer. Played Mar. 21.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family and rural patronage.

CENTRAL AIRPORT: Richard Barthelmess—A very good picture with plenty of action and a good story. The last sequence, where all the automobiles in Havana are gathered so an aeroplane can land, is excellent. Played March 23, 24.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

CONVENTION CITY: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—A wow for entertainment. Drew well and the customers went out with smiles all over their faces.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

CONVENTION CITY: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Mary Astor—This picture takes place in Atlantic City, where a sales convention is going on. It's gay and eventful. Plenty of comedy. A lot of good actors in it. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Feb. 23-24.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

ELMER THE GREAT: Joe E. Brown—Good comedy that pleased and did nice business. Some of the boys complained because Joe did not give his tiger yell, but they are strong for Joe E. Brown just the same. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Feb. 23-24.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

FASHIONS OF 1934: William Powell, Bette Davis—I made a report after previewing this picture before screening it. I thought and stated that it would be a money getter in any house, but to my surprise it did only average business, and only pleased mildly. I was wrong, as it pleased but mildly, and is not a small town picture after all. Played Mar. 11-12.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

FASHIONS OF 1934: William Powell, Bette Davis—A very good production, but not a "42d Street" at the box-office. Played Mar. 15-16.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

FASHIONS OF 1934: William Powell, Bette Davis, Frank McHugh—Boy, what a show this is! If Warner keeps this up the depression will soon be over. Comedy, action, brand new fashions for the females to gasp at and to top it off a big musical number with "Gold Digger" appeal. This Frank McHugh is a knockout. One of his laughs and the audience is ready to roll in the aisle. Played Mar. 4-5-6.—Alvin P. Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

FEMALE: Ruth Chatterton—Good picture but it lacks the something that puts a picture over.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

HAVANA WIDOWS: Joan Blondell, Lyle Talbot—This one has plenty of laughs and is well done. I doubled this one with a western and the gross was above average. Running time, 62 minutes. Played Mar. 7-8.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

JOURNAL OF A CRIME: Ruth Chatterton—This is only fair enteranment and not up to the usual picture from Warners. Too bad that they should waste the perfect performance of Miss Chatterton and Menjou in such a poor story as this. They both deserve better stories and parts and I hope they get a better break next time. Played only one day to only fair business. Pleased about 50 per cent. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Mar. 20.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MANDALAY: Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez—Kay Francis at her best, with lots of fine clothes. A woman's picture. Played Mar. 10.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

MANDALAY: Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez, Lyle Talbot—This Warner family is certainly producing the kind of pictures that the public wants. Step on this one. It's a surefire money-maker for any one. Played Feb. 11-13.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

MASSACRE: Richard Barthelmess—This should please nearly every one. Not his best but a fine picture. Played Feb. 21.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

SON OF A SAILOR: Joe E. Brown—This one has good, clean fun. Although he has made a lot better pictures, would sure like to seem him make one as good as "Sit Tight." Running time, 73 minutes. Played Mar. 5-6.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

SON OF A SAILOR: Joe E. Brown—Great entertainment. As good as any he has made to date. Lends itself admirably to sailor exploitation. Plenty of good comedy all through. Comparatively clean and free from smut so can be recommended for children without fear. Average business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Mar. 9-10.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

WORLD CHANGES, THE: Paul Muni—Very well received. Please, Mr. Producer, let's build up the show business with some more real products. Played Mar. 12-13.—Max B. Horn, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Fox

BERKELEY SQUARE: Leslie Howard, Heather Angel—Might be all right, but no one here could understand it. Large crowd of older women came to see it. All disappointed except a few—and darn few. Running time, 90 minutes. Played Feb. 21-22.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor, Lionel Barrymore—This combination gets 'em. Be sure they don't think Barrymore and Gaynor are together as lovers. However, business very good. No theatre anywhere need be afraid of this one. The question is—why can't we get more like it! With careful selection of shorts, you will have the perfect program for the family. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Feb. 11.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor, Lionel Barrymore—One of the best that has been released by Fox. It starts sadly with a death and ends the same way, with a suicide. Only these events mar the story. Played Mar. 1-2.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Thetare, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor—One of the best pictures of the season. Received more compliments on this production than any I have run in the past four months, and with one exception, "Dinner At Eight," the receipts were the best since November. Clean and wholesome, the kind of picture that will assist exhibitors in regaining the respect of discriminating patrons. Running time, 82 minutes. Played Mar. 20-21.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S GREATEST CASE: Warner Oland, Heather Angel—Only a fair program picture but seemed to please very well. Dialogue not very good. Played Mar. 13-14.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S GREATEST CASE: Warner Oland, Heather Angel—Well liked, story interesting and well directed.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—You'll laugh as you've never laughed before at the show world's greatest entertainer, Will Rogers, in "David Harum." A nice little picture.—Manley Mattice, Novelty Theatre, Middleburgh, N. Y. General patronage.

DEVIL TIGER: Kane Richmond, Marion Burns—Nothing out of tbe ordinary in this jungle type of picture. There has been too many of this kind made already. Average business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Mar. 2-3.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

DEVIL TIGER: Kane Richmond, Marion Burns—Greatest wild animal picture ever filmed. Good for Saturday night.—Manley Mattice, Novelty Theatre, Middleburgh, N. Y. General patronage.

DOCTOR BULL: Will Rogers—Not the best Rogers picture that's been made, but pleased most of the customers. It drew the least of any for us. I don't blame the picture, however. The tobacco situation here is such that people simply haven't the money to attend shows with. Played Jan. 23-24.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

EVER SINCE EVE: George O'Brien—I would class this as an exceptionally good program picture. Excellent story and filled with laughable situations. The National Screen Service trailer does not do this picture justice. A good family picture and especially suitable for week-ends in small towns and rural communities. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 9-10.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Thetare, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: George O'Brien—A very good western with a real cast. Played Mar. 19-20.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre,. Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

HOLD THAT GIRL: James Dunn, Claire Trevor—Patrons liked it and business was fairly good. Action fast. Lots of wise-cracking by Dunn and Trevor. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Mar. 13-14.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD THAT GIRL: James Dunn, Claire Trevor—You'll make no mistake if you are looking for laughs in this picture. Good for Saturday night.—Manley Mattice, Novelty Theatre, Middleburgh, N. Y. General patronage.

HOOPLA: Clara Bow—Picture went over good, drew pretty well. Did not like Clara doing such a tough mutt. She was too hard. Like her better as a cutie. —Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

HOOPLA: Clara Bow—Played on Sunday-Monday-Tuesday and drew extra well. Patrons seemed pleased. Can overdo this kind. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Feb. 11-12-13.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

I WAS A SPY: Herbert Marshall, Madeline Carroll—Didn't give this any extra exploitation, but it drew better than any picture for Monday and Tuesday than we have run for some time. Great entertainment. Great acting. Better than average business. Running time, 90 minutes. Played Mar. 12-13.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

JIMMY AND SALLY: James Dunn, Claire Trevor —Very entertaining. Jimmy well liked here. Claire is building up a rep for herself.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

LAST TRAIL, THE: George O'Brien, Claire Trevor.—Good. Good western, but too short. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Jan. 31.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

MAD GAME, THE: Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor —A good show but program stuff. Fine moral. It tames "ambitious young blood." Played Mar. 14-15.—Max B. Horn, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAD GAME, THE: Spencer Tracy—This would have been satisfactory entertainment but for the ending. As one young man remarked, they went out of their way to ruin it. Ninety-nine of every hundred people want a happy ending to all pictures. Business off. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Feb. 28, Mar. 1. Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

THREE MORE SEND FIRST REPORTS

Additional representation for the states of Texas, Illinois and New York in "What the Picture Did for Me" comes this week with the enrolling of the following exhibitors as regular contributors to the department:

Manley Mattice, Novelty Theatre, Middleburgh, New York; Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Illinois, and Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Sequin, Texas.

Read their reports in this issue.

MY WEAKNESS: Lilian Harvey, Lew Ayres—Excellent picture. First Lilian Harvey picture I have played and everyone liked her. Fine picture for small towns. Poor print. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Feb. 16-17.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

OLSEN'S BIG MOMENT: El Brendel—Very poor entertainment and they told us so. A drunk staggers through seven reels which always makes poor entertainment. Just plain no good. Played Feb. 21-22.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

ORIENT EXPRESS: Norman Foster, Heather Angel—Good program picture with no drawing power whatever, but we used in on cash nite, where it was suitable and satisfied. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Feb. 14.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

ORIENT EXPRESS: Heather Angel, Norman Foster—Just fair. Did not draw much business. Would do well on a double bill. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Mar. 23-24.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

PADDY, THE NEXT BEST THING: Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter—Excellent. Best Gaynor to date. Played Jan. 27-28.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond. Wis. General patronage.

SAILORS' LUCK: James Dunn, Sally Eilers—Excellent. Our crowd liked it. Personally thought it was only a weak program picture.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

SMOKY: Victor Jory, Irene Bentley—Here is a dandy. You can run this one and be glad that you are in the sbow business.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

SMOKY: Victor Jory, Irene Bentley—Excellent. Best show in a long time. Pleased 100 per cent. No booze in this one, which made it a good show. Played Feb. 14-15.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

WALLS OF GOLD: Sally Eilers, Ralph Morgan—Rather a sophisticated type of story dealing with a big moneyed mogul and his philanderings, even to stealing his nephew's girl for wife. But it all ends happily, of course. Shows Sally Eilers in a new role, but she certainly does justice to her part, and Morgan takes his part as natural as usual. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Mar. 12-13.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

WALLS OF GOLD: Norman Foster, Sally Eilers—Good program picture that pleased and did as well as could be expected, coming after "Little Women" and very cold weather, too. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Feb. 21-22.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

WORST WOMEN IN PARIS?: Adolphe Menjou—Most indifferent. Everyone would have been better off if this one had never been made. Result, very poor business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Feb. 14-15.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

Mascot

TARZAN THE FEARLESS: Buster Crabbe—Feature poorly made but did very good business and on serial slowly died out owing to superior picture shown here made by another producer. Played Feb. 1.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family patronage.

MGM

BOMBSHELL: Jean Harlow, Lee Tracy—Fair entertainment. Did not please our crowd. Played Feb. 4-5.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: Jean Harlow, Marie Dressler, Lionel Barrymore—The best entertainment I have seen in anybody's picture. Story great, directing wonderful, and the stars don't need any boosting. They were all on the job in this picture at their best. Played Mar. 18, 19, 20.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore—Excellent entertainment for those who appreciate good acting. No good for the common herd. Running time, 110 minutes. Played Feb. 16-17-18.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

ESKIMO: Native Cast—Drew much better than I expected. Very entertaining, especially to men and children. Quite suggestive in spots, but, strange to say, there were no complaints from patrons. Running time, 117 minutes. Played Mar. 6-7.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery—Not a bad program picture. Second night's business twice as good as first night with dance and six day prize fight tournament as opposition second night. Running time, 80 minutes.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Marion Davies, Bing Crosby—This is certainly great entertainment. Gave splendid satisfaction. Lots of fine comments. A good show and clean.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Marion Davies, Bing Crosby—An excellent musical show. Splendid recording. Bing Crosby steals the show from Marion Davies. Running time, 92 minutes. Played Feb. 27-28.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

HER SWEETHEART (CHRISTOPHER BEAN): Marie Dressler, Lionel Barrymore—This picture has a lot more plot to it than had "Dinner at Eight," and it is my opinion tbat all in all it pleased more of the audience than did that picture. The picture is all Dressler and Barrymore. However, it is not the same class as "Tugboat Annie." Did not pull as well as the other picture, but that is no criticism to go by, for business is below normal and has been for some time. It is good entertainment, but a little drawn out in footage. The followers of Dressler will like it and there is no doubt but what she is a great trouper.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HER SWEETHEART (CHRISTOPHER BEAN): Marie Dressler—Here is one of the mysteries of the show business, that the greatest of all box-office stars, right on the heels of her great success, "Tugboat Annie," should prove so ordinary as far as receipts go. The picture itself is real good entertainment and will please generally. Receipts on this just barely average, and being one of the specials, well, you know the rest.—I. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

NIGHT FLIGHT: Helen Hayes, Lionel and John Barrymore, Clark Gable—This one has not much of a plot but is gripping tension, and good acting as night flying starts in the Argentina. Did average business. Running time, 91 minutes. Played Mar. 1.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY, THE: Max Baer—This picture has everything that spells entertainment. Not a dull moment from start to finish. A climax that is a wow. But we could not sell it to the public; for some reason or other they just did not come in. Running time, 101 minutes. Played Feb. 9-10.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY, THE: Max Baer, Jack Dempsey, Primo Carnera—Great show. Did a nice business. Running time, 110 minutes.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY, THE: Primo Carnera, Jack Dempsey—This picture pleased our patrons. It's more of a man's picture. You will make good with this one. Played Mar. 18-19.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo—Very unsatisfactory business and a loss at the percentage. They don't want costume stuff, they don't want tragedy. The public doesn't want, and I personally most firmly dislike, women dressed like and acting like men. The public has no perverse psychology. Garbo is being killed.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

SONS OF THE DESERT: Laurel and Hardy—Best feature length production this couple has made. A constant gale of laughter from start to finish. An ideal week-end picture. Running time, 66 minutes. Played Mar. 2-3.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

STAGE MOTHER: Alice Brady, Franchot Tone—Here is another Metro picture that is only fair entertainment and will not draw. It is a drama with music and comedy. Alice Brady is not liked here and therefore business was a flop, even on a bargain day. This is an old picture and if you have not played it and are going to, then I want to sympathize with you. Here's hoping that Leo will hold Metro up to standard this year. Running time, 87 minutes. Played Mar. 23.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WOMAN IN HIS LIFE, THE: Otto Kruger, Isabel Jewell—Pretty good picture, but the part does not suit Mr. Kruger. It's not a big picture, but good average entertainment. Played Mar. 9-10.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

Monogram

HE COULDN'T TAKE IT: Ray Walker—This, while not a million dollar special, pleased our Family Night trade. Seemed to enjoy this boy Walker. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Mar. 20.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family and rural patronage.

LUCKY TEXAN, THE: John Wayne—Played this on Saturday double bill and gave satisfaction. Some of the best comedy I have seen in any western. The comedian in this picture is funny. Wayne is always good in any picture. The whole cast is good and story entertaining.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

Paramount

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry—A "trick picture" anywhere. Time and talent and money wasted. Regulars stayed away but many of the grownups, who were mostly parents, liked it. Small children liked it, other kids didn't. Don't ruin your Sunday business with this and don't run a kid matinee if you expect to have any night business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Mar. 22-23.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

ALL OF ME: Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins, George Raft—This is an exceptionally good play. March and Raft were the outstanding players. Miriam Hopkins was also good. Running time, 71 minutes. Played Mar. 10-11.—Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft, Carole Lombard—Only fair. After all the rumpus about this picture, I really thought we would have something big. Nobody got excited about it, and I received some very severe criticism for over-advertising it. No doubt it will go pretty good in the big cities, but my patrons don't like the hero to die in the end, and they told me so. There should be two endings in this type picture. One sad for those who like it and the other happy. People in the small towns don't want the hero to die. If Hollywood wants it that way, okay, give it to them, but don't force it on the little fellow. The picture would do 50 per cent more business by changing the story a little and making a happy ending. Played Mar. 16-17.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Four Marx Brothers—Even a small town knows when there is a flop. This was sure it. As talented as they are musically, why oh why not make a hit. No piano or harp numbers. Oi, stuff so poor it hurts the show business not a little bit. Played Mar. 18-20.—Max B. Horn, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Four Marx Brothers—The Four Marx Brothers "ain't what they used to be" in drawing power, but this kent a fair crowd laughing most of the time.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

EIGHT GIRLS IN A BOAT: Dorothy Wilson, Douglas Montgomery—Boys, this is a honey. A nice warm subject and a bunch of good looking gals. The young girls will just eat it up. A raw picture that will get the men, too, if handled right. Played Mar. 14-15.—Alvin P. Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE: Herbert Marshall, Claudette Colbert—Whatever this was supposed to have been, it missed the mark. The thing that saved it was some of the jungle settings. Story strange and impossible. However, with the paper on this picture, you can sell it to your action audiences. Business average.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall—Good jungle picture. Shows how four civilized people, who suddenly are set adrift in the jungle, will act. Shows the hardships that they go through, living in constant fear of thirst, starvation and, worst of all, savages. Running time, 95 minutes. Played Mar. 13-14.—Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

GOLDEN HARVEST: Richard Arlen, Genevieve Tobin—This was one of the cleanest pictures we have ran lately. But somehow this picture did not click at the box-office. I think the name killed it. But in running this one step on it; they will like it. Played Mar. 20-21.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town patronage.

HELL AND HIGH WATER: Richard Arlen, Judith Allen—This is only fair entertainment and will not go over as well as the other Arlen pictures. Arlen and Miss Allen both turn in a good performance, but the subject matter was not liked by our patrons and therefore they left displeased. The picture is misnamed and that alone will keep many patrons away from it. We played this one day to fair business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 21.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HIS DOUBLE LIFE: Roland Young, Lillian Gish—Clean and fair story, but too much conversation and too much of that with English accent. Did not draw. Lillian Gish, however, as charming as in silent days and doing splendidly even in this one.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott, Barbara Adams—We departed from custom and ran this on a Sunday. Drew better than most specials and pleased. Personally think they changed story a bit too much, but no one else seemed to think so. Had dated it early and used extra advertising. Emphasized the fact that it was good enough so that we were using it on Sunday and Monday. Played Mar. 11-12.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott, Monte Blue—A very good western taken from the story "Border Legion." Played two days and it stood up. Played Mar. 8-9.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott, Monte Blue, Barbara Fritchie—They don't come any better than this one in the western line. It has a logical story, swell acting and moves right along to a splendid climax. You can lay to everything that you have in the way of advertising and the picture will not let you down. The westerns with their moderate rentals are going to be the mortgage raisers if the farmer ever gets in the money. We have found that pictures like "Dinner At Eight" with the high rentals will put us in the red quicker than anything else, and that is what happened the week we ran that picture. It was not worth the money that was paid for it. A chap with a nice voice sings "The Last Roundup." The director missed a bet in that. He should have had the male chorus on the "Roundup" as well as the solo. That I heard from many of the patrons. It would have added to the picture, but it is plenty good enough as it was.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper—Did the kids like it. The grownups, too. Lots of natural ability in that boy.—Max B. Horn, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SERVING THE NATION FOR 95 YEARS • NATION-WIDE SERVICE

MAN OF THE FOREST: Randolph Scott—Good western entertainment. Business fair for bad weather. Too bad Paramount is going to drop these good westerns. Let us hope they will change their minds. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Feb. 16-17.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Randolph Scott—A splendid western. I wish I could get a Zane Grey Paramount just about once each month.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck—This one is of the melodrama type but has plenty of action and some comedy relief. Is much better than I thought before seeing it. My opinion is that for small town theatre it will serve as better week-end than starting on Sunday. However, it will make good entertainment in either position.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. Small town patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck, Baby Le Roy—Good play. The name had us fooled but it was a wonderful play. It showed just how a mother and friends act when their loved one has been kidnapped. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Mar. 3-4.—Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—If you have to run this, Friday and Saturday are the days. Too rough to draw the women and not rough enough for the men. It's an action picture, that's all. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 18.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—Another Charles Rogers picture. I hate to hear that this is his last year with Paramount. He has delivered a consistently good product. This picture for fast moving drama and a possible story fits this pair well.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—When I saw this picture at the Paramount Exchange I wanted to cancel it, but decided to run it on a Friday-Saturday date, with a double bill. I put this with an excellent picture, so my patrons wouldn't holler too much, and to my surprise, they liked "No More Women" the best, which goes to show that an exhibitor can't always pick 'em. Personally, I did not like "No More Women," but my Saturday crowd did, and told me so. Not only that but they all came out to see it. The photos and advertising on this subject is good. The diving gave my patrons a thrill, and to my surprise it satisfied about 80 per cent. Played Mar. 9-10.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: Buster Crabbe, Ida Lupino—I think the title hurts this picture as it did but little business, and yet is a good picture. Something different. You'll like it and so will your patrons, but for some reason it did not draw for me. Robert Armstrong and James Gleason keep one laughing all the time. Beautiful sets.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: Robert Armstrong, Jimmy Gleason, Buster Crabbe, Gertrude Michael—Built around the beauty racket with Armstrong, Gleason and this girl Michael saving the show. Good picture of its kind, but the title must have militated against it because it did not do business. Where this Michael girl has been I do not know, but this I do know: she was a perfect foil for Armstrong and Gleason. But what this Crabbe has I nor my audience can see. He might be all right for a Tarzan but that is about all. It was Armstrong and Gleason and Michael that put the show over. My audience went for her in a big way—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SITTING PRETTY: Jack Haley, Ginger Rogers, Jack Oakie—Another good musical. However, they don't do the business they once did. Water has gone under the bridge again.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

SITTING PRETTY: Jack Oakie—Good business on Sunday and nobody on Monday night. Consensus of opinion was just fair. Pick out some extra strong shorts to play with this.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott—Went over very nicely. These kind of westerns are enjoyable. People come to see them, that stayaway on the shoot 'em up type of western.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott, Judith Allen—Two days to extra good business and everybody very much pleased. You can't go wrong on a Paramount Zane Grey picture. Played Jan. 19-20.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WAY TO LOVE, THE: Maurice Chevalier, Ann Dvorak—Seemed to go every pretty well. Nothing extra as far as drawing power goes. Chevalier well liked here.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

WAY TO LOVE, THE: Maurice Chevalier, Ann Dvorak—Good picture, but didn't draw. Couple of good songs. People that did see it thought it was excellent. Running time, 84 minutes. Played Feb. 18-19-20.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

WHITE WOMAN: Carole Lombard—Used this on cash night. Satisfactory except that recording was poor. Charles Laughton's dialog hardly understandable even on our Western Electric equipment and we have sound hard to beat anywhere. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Feb. 7.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

RKO

AGGIE APPLEBY, MAKER OF MEN: Wynne Gibson—What a flop, partly due to the title "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men." Family trade stayed away, and how! Too rough in subject matter for neighborhood and small town family trade. Don't use this title and any of the press book slogans if you must run it. Even Zasu Pitts' name could't get them in to see this punko from R. K. O. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Feb. 7.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

ANN VICKERS: Irene Dunne—Very good show. Business O. K.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

ANN VICKERS: Irene Dunne—Dreadful. Just one immorality after another. I was ashamed of such a thing on our screen. It is too bad to put such a good player as Irene Dunne in such a story. The casting director must have been eating pickled pigs feet to put Walter Huston in such a role opposite the delicate Irene. More of Edna May Oliver would have helped. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Feb. 12-13.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

ANN VICKERS: Irene Dunne—Miss Dunne is very popular here, but this picture fell way below drawing power. Those who came seemed to like it.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

CHANCE AT HEAVEN: Joel McCrea, Ginger Rogers—Very poor entertainment. Not even good for Bargain Nite. Running time, 70 minutes.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

DELUGE, THE: Peggy Shannon, Matt Moore—This one is a lot different than other pictures. It has earthquakes, tidal waves and the end of the world to provide the thrills. Doubled this one with "King for A Night" and did good business. Both were liked. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Feb. 19.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

EMERGENCY CALL: Bill Boyd, Betty Furness—Expose of hospital graft by the underworld and ambulance chasers. Fast moving and has a great climax, with a fight in a warehouse, bringing in the cops, etc. The patrons certainly liked it. Average business. Running time, 61 minutes. Played Mar. 9-10.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

FLAMING GOLD: Bill Boyd—Satisfactory entertainment for Friday and Saturday, and did a fair business. Our people had rather see Bill Boyd any time than Katharine Hepburn; what a shame Radio let him go. We want Bill Boyd; get him back, Radio. Running time, 53 minutes. Played Mar. 9-10.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio—This picture seemed to draw exceptionally well. It does not compare in quality to some of the other musicals, but it seemed to satisfy. Different from anything that we have ever shown. The trick photography was exceptionally good. Played Mar. 10-11.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Ginger Rogers, Gene Raymond, Fred Astaire—One of the best musicals we have played since the day of "Rio Rita," "Gold Diggers of Broadway," etc. Beautiful music, beautiful girls, and something different in settings and locale. The Carioca dance a bit hot, but it was blocked out by the music and settings and characters. Astaire and Ginger just about steal the show from the leads. Played Mar. 4-5-6.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond, Ginger Rogers—A wonderful picture. Acting and directing good. One of the best musicals of the year. RKO sure has the pictures. "Flying Down to Rio" and "Little Women" are so good they should be played in every theatre. Recording excellent.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond—One of the best musicals. In fact, the story part was better than most of the others, and the dancing of the "Carioca" was very lovely. The title of this certainly helped put it over. Business was slightly above average for Sunday-Monday.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY!: Robert Woolsey, Bert Wheeler—This should give them a new lease on life, and is a good come back after some of the smutty ones they have made. It is plenty good even for the children. Played Mar. 17.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY!: Wheeler and Woolsey—Did an excellent business on this one, if it is vulgar.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

KEEP 'EM ROLLING: Walter Huston—Here is an excellent show in every way.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—Far overrated. Did not please here at all and my patrons told us so. Even the sound was poor. Played Mar. 3-4.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn, Joan Bennett, Frances Dee, Jean Parker—Most excellent. A good box-office picture because of the beautiful story—sweet and clean. This picture would have been a success if just you and I had played the parts, because it had the elements of good entertainment in it. Beauty, romance, sincerity and human appeal. More people praised the cleanliness of this picture than anything else about it. Running time, 114 minutes. Played Feb. 19-20.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—This picture has great drawing power, but the men folks kick and keep on kicking. Radio makes you think this is the greatest picture of the year, but I am glad they are not all this kind. We nevertheless had fine results as it will bring people that haven't been for a long time.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town patronage.

LONG LOST FATHER: John Barrymore—Did not draw. No one who did come seemed to like it.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK: Bruce Cabot—Very good program picture. Clean and entertaining. Recording excellent. Running time, 69 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART: Ginger Rogers, Marion Nixon—Poor picture, although the crowd thought it O. K. Played Jan. 28-29.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

RIGHT TO ROMANCE, THE: Ann Harding—Our patrons liked this one of Ann Harding's better than anything she has done since "East Lynn." Would call it good program picture. It had a variety of attractive scenes that were most pleasing. Ann Harding is always good and the most graceful actress of the screen. Robert Young was fine. Give him a chance, please. Business good. Running time, 66 minutes. Played Mar. 12-13.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

United Artists

MOULIN ROUGE: Constance Bennett—Too much Bennett and too frenchy and too much bedroom for our consumption. We are still wondering what it was all about and why. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 18.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family and rural patronage.

PALOOKA: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Lupez—This is a wow of a picture. Played it for an American Legion benefit and grave great satisfaction. One of the best comedy pictures we ever played and did Jimmy Durante work hard! I'll say he did some great acting, and all the cast was fine. A great comedy and clean comedy. Played March 16.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY THE VIII: Charles Laughton—I didn't think this one would go over, but it did. I would not recommend it for a small town. It's a little deep and to like it you must understand it. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

Universal

BOMBAY MAIL: Edmund Lowe, Shirley Grey—Pretty good story with mystery angle. Action all takes place aboard train from Calcutta, India, to Bombay. Played March 9-10.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BOMBAY MAIL: Edmund Lowe—Rather hard to follow. Drew only average and pleased just fairly well.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BY CANDLELIGHT: Elissa Landi, Paul Lukas—One of these delightfully clever romances that are so hard to put over in small towns. And yet, if you can get the right people in, it gives splendid satisfaction. Not much business, but a grand show. Played Jan. 16-17.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW: John Barrymore, Bebe Daniels—Barrymore and Miss Daniels do some marvelous work, but the action practically all within an attorney's office and the people coming and going. No particular romance and plenty of conversation. Pleased older folks, but did not draw the younger class. Played March 18-19.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, S. D. Small town patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres, June Knight's acting is great in this. Running time, 80 minutes.—P. G Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine—This was enjoyed by my Saturday crowd.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN, THE: Claude Rains, Gloria Stuart—A novelty picture different from the rest. If your patrons like mystery pictures this is one of the best, but it did not draw for us. Pleased them that came. Acting fine and well produced. Our people just did not come to the show. Played March 11, 12.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN, THE: Claude Rains, Gloria Stuart—Not the type of picture that pleases. The directing and acting very good. Running time, 71 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE BIRDS: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—That phenomenally stupid and witless picture "Horseplay" killed Summerville as far as my class A house is concerned. This is shown in the attendance on this piece of badly directed stuff. The scenes where Summerville has his tooth pulled would never get by a short comedy director. The swollen jaw was exaggerated as an amateur would do it. They have killed the appeal of this team.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

LOVE, HONOR AND OH, BABY!: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—For family night or any other night this is a knockout. Drew the biggest mid-week crowd on family night that this theatre has had in years. Seemed to please 100 per cent. One continuous uproar from the very start to the final fade-out. The public nowadays want good clever comedy drama and this picture has plenty of it. Sound was excellent. Played March 1-2-3-4.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND PRETZELS: Mary Brian—Very pleasing entertainment and did well at box-office. Clean, bright and tuneful. Its age did not hurt it any; that is, for us. Wish we could get more bright and happy pictures. Every one wants gay entertainment. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

ONLY YESTERDAY: Margaret Sullavan — Great work by Margaret Sullavan in a story with a sad ending. I couldn't coax the neighbors in to see it, but had a lot of nice compliments on the picture from the few who came.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

ONLY YESTERDAY: Margaret Sullavan—This one was sold to us as a special and in two days and one matinee did us the smallest gross that we have had this year. While it was a good picture it was far from being a picture that would please the majority. Entirely too slow moving to satisfy the younger generation. Had we seen the picture before showing we would never have booked it. The sound was the poorest that we have had in months. Patrons are still complaining that they could not hear. How can the producers expect an exhibitor to hold his patronage by sending out prints with inferior sound. Played March 17-18.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

POOR RICH, THE: Edna May Oliver—A very silly picture that barely grossed film rental. Use it one day only. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 14.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family patronage.

POOR RICH, THE: Edward Everett Horton, Edna May Oliver—Pretty good program picture, but should not be run in a class A house.—Herman J. Brown, Majestic and Adelaide Theatres, Nampa, Idaho. General patronage.

SECRETS OF THE BLUE ROOM: Gloria Stuart, Paul Lukas—Pleased an average midweek crowd. Personally, I thought it was very much better than most mystery dramas.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard—Showed this one on family night and it was well received. Sound was terrible, due to a scratch running the entire length of the sound track on every reel. Ken Maynard is well liked among the western fans. Played March 7.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

WHEELS OF DESTINY: Ken Maynard—Ken Maynard is always good for business. While this one was not as good as most of his pictures of so much shooting and yelling, it did nicely. With so many of the better companies and players dropping out of westerns, we only hope that Ken will keep on giving us these fine westerns. We need them. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

Warner

BABY FACE: Barbara Stanwyck, George Brent—Another swell picture from a company that puts everything into every one they produce. They certainly know how to make them. With "Little Giant," "Picture Snatcher," and now add "Baby Face" to the list along with "42nd Street," "I Am a Fugitive" and "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" and what have you? Nothing but the best pictures on the market. What difference does it make how old such pictures are as long as they are in good shape? George Brent, swell. Played March 6-7.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

EASY TO LOVE: Mary Astor, Adolphe Menjou—Very good comedy; you don't have to hide when the show is over. Played Feb. 14.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

EVER IN MY HEART: Barbara Stanwyck—Splendidly acted drama of the American home during the late war, showing the American reaction to a naturalized German subject married to an American girl, and how the man is forced out by public sentiment to revert to Germany, the land of his birth, and the sacrifices she made for her husband and for her country first. Fair business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 14-15.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Voncouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

FOOTLIGHT PARADE: James Cagney, Ruby Keeler—Admitting that the picture was too long and lacked interest until last four reels. Saving good acting, it will have to be classified as outstanding. The water fall scene is the most beautiful thing that I have ever seen in a picture. It looked impossible and I can't see how it could be rivaled with any other dances staged by Busby Berkely. Ruby Keeler (well, I don't blame Jolson a bit for fighting over her) is the sweetest thing I have ever seen. James Cagney is swell. His dancing went along fine with Ruby's in the "Shanghai Lil" number and when they formed President Roosevelt's picture the audience applauded. Joan Blondell very good and Dick Powell certainly can sing. He has Bing Crosby beaten all to pieces. As for a logical and extraordinary story, neither this or "Gold Diggers" come up to the style of "42nd Street." Running time, 101 minutes. Played March 20, 21.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

HI, NELLIE!: Paul Muni—A fast moving drama with enough comedy relief. I liked Muni in this one much better than in "The World Changes." Played March 3.—Frank A. Finger, New Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill. General patronage.

HI, NELLIE: Paul Muni—Very good newspaper yarn, with enough comedy and suspense to keep 'em going. This girl Glenda Farrell very good. Also our friend, Ned Sparks, is fine. Would recommend it in any man's theatre as good opening. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 16.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family and rural patronage.

HI, NELLIE: Paul Muni—Very good fast moving newspaper story. Muni very good as usual. Draw with him slowly increasing, but honors always go with Ned Sparks and Glenda Farrell whenever they are in any picture here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 16.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo.

HOUSE ON 56TH STREET, THE: Kay Francis—This one is very good. Kay Francis spends 20 years of unjust imprisonment. Then she saves her daughter, Margaret Lindsay, from a similar fate. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 9-10.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

HOUSE ON 56TH STREET, THE: Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez, Gene Raymond—A fine piece of entertainment. Picture well liked, and second night better than usual business.—Jack Greene, Geneseo Theatre, Geneseo, Ill. Small town patronage.

I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—Another hit for Warner Bros. This one has everything, comedy, action drama and romance. Step on this one; it's a laugh getter for the whole family. Played Feb. 25-27.—Alvin P. Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

KENNELL MURDER CASE: William Powell, Mary Astor—A very high class murder mystery drama, the best of its kind. Drawing power a good satisfactory average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

KENNEL MURDER CASE: William Powell—William Powell as Philo Vance is a smoothly done and entertaining murder mystery. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Feb. 20-21.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

LADY KILLER: James Cagney—Above average Cagney picture, should more than please his admirers. It covers a lot of ground, but it holds interest at all times. Seldom has anything funnier been shown, as the scenes where the heroine tells the hero that he can give her a box of monkeys and an elephant for a birthday present, and he takes her at her word. Business above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

LADY KILLER: James Cagney—It's a fast comedy and will please every one. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Feb. 26-27.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

PARACHUTE JUMPER: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—A very good picture. Some nice air scenes. Running time, eight reels. Played March 9-10.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

PICTURE SNATCHER: James Cagney—Just an ordinary knock-down, drag-out gang picture that our people did not want to see. Therefore, they remained at home and business was very low. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 7-8.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

HOLLYWOOD BABES: Scrappy Cartoons—A very good cartoon. For some reason mostly all cartoons from Columbia are very good. Running time, one reel.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

"BOSS" TWEED: March of the Years—This is something different and will please. Running time, one reel.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

MICKEY IN ARABIA: Mickey Mouse—About like the usual run of Mickey Mouses. Running time, seven minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MICKEY McGUIRE COMEDIES: I have found this series very good. My audiences like them.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

OUT OF THE ETHER: Krazy Kat Kartoons—Very good cartoon. All the Krazy Kats have exceptionally good recording which adds to their entertainment value. Running time, one reel.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SANDMAN TALES: Scrappy Cartoons—They all liked this one. Scrappy's all good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

AN OLD GYPSY CUSTOM: Andy Clyde—Pretty fair comedy for any spot or program. Andy Clyde is a real comedian, even if he is not appreciated by the younger element, usually. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Cal. General patronage.

BLUE BLACKBIRDS: Moran and Mack—A real honest-to-goodness comedy with lots of laughs in it. Don't miss using it on Saturday. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

DIVORCE SWEETS: Tom Howard—No good. Not even a laugh in it. Maybe we have a critical community, but they seem to know a good comedy when they see one.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

FARMERS' FATAL FOLLY: Moran and Mack—Just a very ordinary comedy.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

FARMERS' FATAL FOLLY: Moran and Mack—Very good hokum. Really enjoyed by old and young. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family patronage.

FREEZE-OUT, THE: Moran and Mack—The last comedy before death broke up this pair of comedians. Not quite as good as the two former comedies by this pair, but it's better than the average two-reelers. Has an interesting story and few good laughs. Running time, two reels.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

GIMME MY QUARTERBACK: Baby Burlesks—Football by four-year-olds and great on any family program. Used with "Carolina" to added laughs. We are very careful with our shorts. One off-color short will ruin a family crowd drawing feature if repeated more than once. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

GOOD BAD MAN, THE: Coronet Comedies—Never have played a comedy as poor as this one. Just don't run it.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

KID 'N AFRICA: Baby Burlesks—Poor. Pulled it after first show. Running time, one reel.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST DOGIE, THE: Song Hit Stories—James Melton's singing of those popular cowboy songs, "Home on the Range" and "Old Chisholm Trail," will long be remembered by every audience that hears and sees this very outstanding short. Be sure you use this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN LULLABY: Song Hit Stories—Terrible. If you have it booked, shelve it. Running time, one reel.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small and rural patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR MELODY: Musical Comedies—A musical short. Only fair. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MR. ADAM: Ernest Truex—Not so funny and my folks don't like Truex. Even if he came from Missouri they still don't think him funny. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family and rural patronage.

NORTH OF ZERO: Coronet Comedies—Everything a comedy should not be. Not a laugh in it, and just full of suggestive remarks. It cost me five dollars to shelve it, and that's a lot of money these days. Have not played a good Coronet comedy this season. Running time, two reels.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SUNNY SOUTH, THE: Terry-Toons—Very good. Running time, six minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

THREE BEARS, THE: Terry-Toons—All the Terry-Toons are good, but this one is exceptionally entertaining. Running time, six minutes.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

WHAT'S TO DO: Frolics of Youth—Very good. An abundance of laughs. This series, Frolics of Youth, has been very well liked by our patrons. We have played four of them and not found a weak one yet. Running time, two reels.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

Fox

MOTOR MANIA!: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Our first of this series, Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman. This shows the craze for speed in autos, and the crackups on various race courses. Very interesting. Seemed to be liked. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MGM

BEER AND PRETZELS: Musical Reviews—We screened it and shipped it back. Booze, booze and then some more booze. This would be O. K. for hooch hounds. For decent people, no.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

MAIDS A LA MODE: Pitts and Todd—Here is a very good comedy with Pitts and Todd at their best. Plenty of laughs, fast moving and lots of fun for every one. This is rather old, but will please your audience just the same and much better than some of the newest shorts. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

PLANE NUTS: Musical Revues—A very funny comedy. Running time, two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

Paramount

CAPTAIN HENRY'S RADIO SHOW: Lanny Ross—Very good. Paramount's Headliners are O. K. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Reld, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CAPTAIN HENRY'S RADIO SHOW: Lanny Ross, Don Voorhees—Best short we have run in a long time. Be sure to mention it in your advertisement. Running time, 11 minutes—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ON PARADE (No. 7): This series still very good.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

OLD BUGLER, THE: Chic Sale—Pretty good comedy with Chic in the role of the Civil War veteran, who boasts a lot, but accidentally makes good at the finish. Running time, two reels.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

ONE AWFUL NIGHT: Eugene Pallette, Walter Catlett—As good a slapstick as we have used this year. Running time, two reels.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Seems as though a small town using a news is useless. He can't afford a new one and the news is history by the time he plays it. Our last news contract we swear. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family patronage.

SING, BABIES, SING: Baby Rose Marie—Not as good as the usual run of Screen Songs. Running time, nine minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SOCK-A-BYE, BABY: Popeye the Sailor—These cartoons seem to please all. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

RKO

CALIFORNIA WEATHER: Ruth Etting—Not very good, except for Miss Etting's songs. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

GOOD KNIGHT: Cubby the Bear Cartoons—Terrible. Nothing to it.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

HIZZONER: Bert Lahr—All I can say is that this year we have had no comedies that have been worth running and that goes for about 80 per cent of them. Never have I seen a season with them so poor. Sound has slowed them up or else they have forgotten how to make them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOCUS-FOCUS: Clark and McCullough—Excellent comedy in every way. Run it.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

PREFERRED LIST: Dorothy Lee—Fair musical comedy. Farcical courtroom trial with singing by chorus girls. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

RASSLIN' MATCH, THE: Amos 'n' Andy Cartoons—All right. The voices are natural and drawing is good. But it did not draw anything extra. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SHE OUTDONE HIM: Headliners—A burlesque on Mae West's first picture that did not go over very well. I made the big mistake of playing it on Sunday and was heartily ashamed of it. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SUITS TO NUTS: Harry Sweet—No good.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

United Artists

BEARS AND BEES: Silly Symphonies—Excellent cartoon. People talked about it as they came out of the theatre.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MICKEY'S GALA PREMIERE: Mickey Mouse—This is one of the best cartoons of the year. Plenty of laughs and will appeal to both young and old. Plenty of good caricatures of practically all of the screen actors and actresses. One of the best shorts I have seen in the past year.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MICKEY'S NIGHT MARE: Mickey Mouse—Here is a cartoon that seems to flicker. Photography poor and subject poor. Come on, Walt, K. C. wants to be proud of you; give us better cartoons than this. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family and rural patronage.

Universal

ALL AT SEA: Mentone No. 2—Very good and well done. Every Mentone comedy I've played so far has been very good. Keep it up. Running time, two reels.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

BIG BENEFIT, THE: Mentone No. 4—Extra good two-reel subject.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

BIG BENEFIT, BOSWELL SISTERS, ROOMMATES: All three extra good two-reel short subjects.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

BIG BENEFIT, THE: Boswell Sisters—Extra good two-reel short subject.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

CANDY HOUSE, THE: Oswald Cartoons—The fairy tale of Hansel and Gretel is most enjoyable. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

CHICKEN REEL: Oswald Cartoons—Another very good Oswald cartoon. Coming alone fine, Oswald. Keep it up. Running time, one reel.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS: This type of subject is growing in favor with our older patrons and is especially good to help make footage on short comedy feature programs. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Col. General patronage.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS (No. 30): This was our first number in this series, but it did not make much of a hit.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TOY SHOPPE, THE: Oswald Cartoons—My idea of the perfect cartoon. A treat for the kids.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

AROUND THE CLOCK: Norma Terris—The singing in this will appeal to the more discriminating music lovers in your audience, and the clever dancing will appeal to every one. A real high-class short. Running time, 29 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BARBER SHOP BLUES: Claude Hopkins and Band—This is very good, but was not liked quite as much as the others in this series of band numbers. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BARBER SHOP BLUES, EASY ACES (No. 1), LAUGH IN THE LAW, LITTLE MISS MISCHIEF: All four one-reel subjects. Are extra good. You can't go wrong on Vitaphone shorts. Seldom get a poor one.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

BORRAH MINNEVITCH AND HIS HARMONICA RASCALS: Melody Masters—Very entertaining with fine harmonica music. Play it. Running time, one reel.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

PLANE CRAZY: Broadway Brevities—An extra good musical comedy featuring Dorothy Lee. This has plenty of music, dancing and everything you would expect of a musical comedy. Play it on your best days and your audience will compliment you on running the best shorts on the market. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SAMOAN MEMORIES: Musical World Journeys—Very interesting and some fine scenes. Running time, one reel.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

SITTING ON A BACK YARD FENCE: Merry Melodies—Extra good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SPANISH AMERICA: Musical World Journeys—This is a very interesting and educational one-reeler showing many beautiful and interesting scenes in Havana. The Indian matrimonal procedure in this short is very interesting and brought many customers out with good comments on it. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

'TIS SPRING: Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins—Very good color musical as all of this series has been with me. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family patronage.

TURKEY IN THE RAW: Gus Shy—Another fine Big V comedy from Vitaphone. Plenty of laughs. Running time, two reels.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

WARNER BROTHERS TRAILERS: Since I've begun to play Warner Brothers' product I've found out that the special trailers they release on their product seem to put over any picture they release. Personally, I give them a lot of credit for making such fine trailers. If every film company would make their own special trailers on their product and not charge too much for them they would be helping the exhibitors a great deal.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

WRONG, WRONG TRAIL, THE: Block and Sully—This Pepper Pot is fair. Nothing extra. Running time, one reel.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

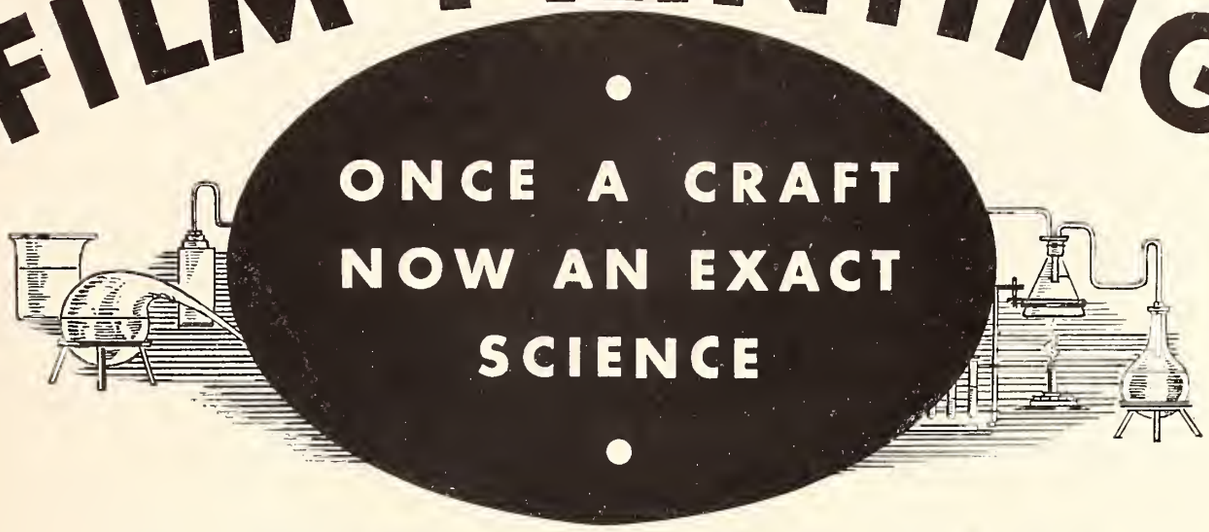
Serials

Mascot

WOLF DOG, THE: Rin Tin Tin, Jr., Frankie Darro, Boots Mallory—Good serial, but audience tires of too many flashbacks of what's what last week, and entirely too much repetition in action. Where's this fellow George Seitz who used to make good serials, or let Bill Howard make one. Running time, 18 minutes each chapter.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family patronage.

Universal

GORDON OF GHOST CITY: Buck Jones, Madge Bellamy—For a drawing card, this is without a doubt the best serial we have ever had. Each week gets bigger and better. You will make no mistake in buying this one.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.



PERILS OF PAULINE: Evalyn Knapp, Robert Allen—This seems to be an extra good serial so far. Our chief objection to serials has always been that they are so monotonous, but this seems like it will be varied enough to suit everybody. Have played three chapters.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PERILS OF PAULINE: Evalyn Knapp, Robert Allen—We have so far played three chapters. So far I can't see much to this. I hope it gets better. Running time, 17 minutes each chapter.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PERILS OF PAULINE: Evalyn Knapp, Robert Allen—A good serial with changing scenes and locale. Where serials are liked this should please them.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich.

FILM PRINTING

THANKS TO OUR ENGINEERS AND CHEMISTS

At Consolidated the old order of "try, try again" has given way to scientific methods that guarantee the right results the first time and uniformity all the time. All our "trial and error" is confined to completely equipped research laboratories where skilled chemical and mechanical engineers constantly draw on the wonders of modern chemistry and machinery to improve the already fine quality of "Certified Prints".

Guess-work and chance results have been entirely eliminated. Elaborate machinery, Consolidated designed and built, and used exclusively at Consolidated Park, has been set up to control quality. Operating conditions are always technically perfect, regulated by a costly air-conditioning plant. Negatives are carefully vacuum and dry cleaned after each print is made. That is why the last print is as good as the first and the negative in perfect condition when returned to the producer.

Only at Consolidated Park can be found the miraculous machines that take negatives and raw stock at one end and at the other deliver the completed print—untouched by human hands throughout the entire operation.

SAFEGUARD YOUR INVESTMENT

Cut-price prints mean cut-price quality—inferior materials carelessly processed on obsolete equipment—poor screen results.

It doesn't pay to jeopardize your entire investment for the few pennies saved on cut-price prints. Make sure of good results. Send your productions to the screen on "Certified Prints." They're made by science to provide the finest possible expression of the sound and action in your negative. Twenty-one years' experience and a loyal devotion to the highest ideals of service are always evident in every frame of "Certified Prints."

CHICAGO

The grievance and clearance-zoning boards for the Chicago territory started functioning last week with the first meeting of the various appointees at the Paramount offices. It was an informal gathering, the main topic of discussion being the cost of operating the boards. An estimated cost of $1,000 a month was arrived at—with explanations that this figure might be lower, but most probably not higher. The temporary budget was arrived at by taking into consideration office rent, secretary's salary, salary of two investigators, telephone and telegraph expenses, plus expenses for postage and miscellaneous items.

The Theatre and Film Relief Dinner was something to talk about both before and after the event and particularly something to record as to the final financial results. With a bow to the committees and a bow plus an orchid to Herb Ellisburg as chairman of the publicity committee, this column records as a factual result a "take" of about $3,700. That this year's event was not only bigger but better and merrier than ever is a statement calling for no contradiction. Certainly those who contributed in whatever manner to make it the success it was are to be heartily congratulated.

Local exhibitors have indicated more than a passing interest in the innovation in reviewing pictures inaugurated by the Chicago Evening American. Instead of the usual critical type of review, in which the reviewer brands pictures as superb, colossal, indifferent or terrible, the Hearst paper has instituted a straight reporting style. The public is told the theme of the picture, given some details as to its plot and execution, but is not burdened with the critic's personal opinion. In other words, the theatregoer is expected to form his or her own opinion, on the basis of the facts detailed.

William K. Hollander, advertising director of Balaban & Katz, has long advocated this method of dealing with pictures. He firmly believes that it will benefit every one connected with the exhibition and distribution of film.

Aaron Saperstein is back from his vacation at Hot Springs declaring that herring is herring—even in Hot Springs.

Abe Blumstein of Columbia, who has been on his back for some time, is now able to sit up and notice things. After a couple of weeks' vacation he expects to be back on the job fit as the proverbial fiddle.

No exploitation move in recent years hereabouts has drawn more space in the daily newspapers than Ludwig Sussman's "Egg Matinee." Mr. Sussman told his Adelphi patrons to bring eggs in lieu of admission for March 29 and 30. He didn't say how few or how many. But eggs were admission tickets. His warning was contained in the announcement that he wanted to collect 500 dozen eggs for the benefit of Rogers Park unfortunates. And to show that he was completely imbued with the Easter spirit himself, Sussman's program consisted of "Calvacade," "Krakatoa" and "Three Little Pigs," all in the Academy's most recent awards.

Jack Miller has appointed the following as delegates to the MPTOA in Los Angeles, April 10 to 12: Edwin Silverman, James Coston, Walter Immerman, L. Reinheimer, W. J. Mueller, Art Sass, Lester Retchin and himself.

C. P. Greenwood, manager of the Paxtonian Theatre, Paxton, Ill., passed away recently following a brief illness.

American Films Increase In Netherlands in Year

American films have increased in the Netherlands in the past year, according to the department of commerce at Washington, making public reports from Vice-Consul W. M. Chase at Amsterdam. The increase is largely due to the decrease in German production.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A CONVENTION ERROR

Exhibitors and producers are coming together at the MPTOA Convention to discuss ways and means of making pictures more palatable for the box office tastes of the American public. An excellent idea. Much good should result from this willingness to listen to the other fellow's side of those problems that vex the industry. But it doesn't go far enough.

The manager also should be heard.

There are plenty of exhibitors who are keen showmen, alive to the needs of our business and well able to speak. But unless the theatre operator is in constant touch with his patrons—unless he sits up nights wrestling with the ever-changing conditions that beset today's showmen, he is not completely qualified to guide the producer to more profitable paths.

In most cases we are safe in saying that the manager is in a much better position to keep his ear to the ground so far as box office likes and dislikes are concerned. Literally living at the theatre, this employee hears first hand, the complaints and praises, the real low-down on the good and the bad points of every program. By the very nature of his work, he is the more direct contact between patron and producer.

It is therefore to be regretted that no provision has been made on the convention programs for managers to speak their piece. We question the completeness of any open forum on picture improvement that does not include representation from this important group.

COMMUNITY AFFAIRS

Perhaps among the most oft quoted criticisms of chain operation is that managers are not encouraged to take part in civic activities, or are not allowed to remain in one situation long enough to do so. There are operators, however, who see the wisdom of allowing their managers to take root and to engage in good works for local betterment. In many of these instances, theatremen have been able to accomplish much for the theatre as well as the community.

For example, we present you Louie Orlove, of the Uptown Theatre, Milwaukee, of the Saxe circuit. This member manages to ably direct the destinies of his house and also to take a leading part in a successful fight for better street transportation. Leading columnists have praised his efforts, the Mayor and other high officials have congratulated him for his unselfish work, patrons in large numbers show their pleasure at the box office.

Managers possessing such talents should be given a loose-rein, irrespective of their connections, independent or chain. There are many such showmen now held down who could win a lot of added respect for their theatres, and by the same token, a distinct increase in grosses were they given the permission to participate in community affairs outside the theatre.

"WELL ROUNDED"

The above term is a favored one in describing aptly a great many campaigns that are forwarded for publication in the Round Table. These contributions detailing the efforts of members to advance the grosses are perhaps not sensationally box office. But they do disclose a determination on the part of the manager to do everything in reason to sell his programs.

As Paul Kunze points out in his well written article on a following page, it manifestly is impossible to turn out sensational campaigns on picture after picture. The average lineup does not call for such heroic methods and, as members have often stated, there is the constant danger of overselling attractions that are not exactly the strongest box office draws.

In view of these factors, it is gratifying to note the consistency with which present day showmen go about extracting the meat of their rapidly changing programs. Using rare judgment and bearing down only when there is occasion for fireworks, theatremen are to be commended for their many "well rounded" campaigns that do not misrepresent and are potent in building up that invaluable prestige and good will.

TIME TO PREPARE

Good news, indeed. United States Steel and General Electric announce hourly wage increases of 10 per cent. Bethlehem Steel and other independents have already hiked their payrolls, as has also been done in the automobile industry. Hundreds of thousands now have more money to spend each week. Perhaps not much more, but enough to encourage theatremen situated in the communities affected to make a try for a fair slice of these extra dollars.

Now is the time to prepare. Stronger advertising, vigorous exploitation, needed replacements and repairs are some of the measures advocated in winning back to the box office the patronage of those who through lack of ready cash have lost the healthy habit of theatregoing.

Suits Engineers Healthy Tieups

The following is what can be termed a good example of adequate tieup exploitation in which the manager took advantage of all available tieins in putting over his picture. It was directed by Bob Suits, Colonial Theatre, Reading, Pa., on "Moulin Rouge."

A hookin with Maxwell House Coffee returned 50 window streamers, scene stills and cutouts in every prominently located store handling that brand. The news jobber handling Silver Screen magazine arranged for windows and one sheet cards at many outlets, and the picture's songs helped in gaining important displays both window and counter, in the various five and ten cent stores.

The special exploitation record was used over two stations and the 15 minute dramatic radio playlet was presented by local players. Also included was a drug store tieup with Max Factor makeup boxes as well as a number of other routine cooperations.

62 Merchants Participate In Daley's "Bargain" Event

A "Convention City Bargain Carnival" was successfully promoted by Manager Hubert J. Daley, Croswell Theatre, Adrian, Mich., to put across that picture, 62 merchants cooperating to make this one of town's biggest shopping events. Newspaper sold on the idea, contributed a full-page ad which with four additional pages of co-ops made an impressive special supplement that was published for three consecutive days. Front-page stories further boomed the idea. Daley promoted high school band to lead automobile parade of new models in which participated all of leading dealers. Drug stores put out specially priced sodas named after picture coupons for same distributed at store and theatre. House P. A. system was used to boost the event and Daley reports it so successful that Chamber of Commerce is now endeavoring to land a few of the smaller conventions for Adrian.

Credit Daley with civic cooperation that helps his town, merchants and theatre.

McLeary Plugs "Nana" With Stencil Slant

Different twist on advance advertising in theatre is Manager Charles McLeary's idea for "Nana" at Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., wherein stairs leading to mezzanine were stenciled with title and date. Picture also sold through leading dress shops by inclusion in every purchase of star still, this aid also given Liberty magazine boys who placed stills in each copy.

On "Moulin Rouge," Charlie effected two co-op pages and had song hits plugged at leading ballrooms and night clubs, these numbers being included in a "lucky listeners'" radio contest, prizes given to those sending in correct titles of all songs played on broadcast.

McLeary apologizes for long silence and states he will be more regular in his reports—a commendable frame of mind. He further states the Round Table section is the first thing he goes for. So say many others.

Governor Attends Strand Annual Orphan Party

Annual orphan theatre party arranged by Manager William McLaughlin, at Brooklyn Strand in conjunction with pre-release showing of "Harold Teen" brought much publicity for picture and also theatre, guest of honor being New York's Governor Lehman, who addressed children from stage after showing and also posed with orphans for breaks in Brooklyn and New York newspapers in which title and theatre were mentioned prominently. Good builder-upper.

Railroad Ties In On "Nana" Showing

It appears that railroads in various sections are loosening up on picture tieups with many instances of special round trip rates in conjunction with theatres. This slant was arranged by Manger C. C. Curran, United Artists, Detroit, on "Nana." Store ad men also availed themselves of sales possibilities in story's period by showing in windows, styles worn at that time as compared with fashions of today, calling further attention to this in ads.

Showmen in the smaller situations should be able to arrange the railroad tieup with as much success as accomplished in the larger spots. The roads need the business.

Damen's Lobby Tops 'Fashions' Campaign

Gasping Londoners rubbed startled eyes some weeks ago at preview date of "Fashions of 1934," reason being $25,000 ostrich plume lobby display engineered by capable Warner London ad head, Dillon Damen. Important British Ostrich and Fancy Trades Association sought idea to stimulate sales; Damen sought likewise to sell picture, and thus came about the promotion of plumes that blanketed spacious vestibule and interior of Prince Edward Theatre.

A huge central ceiling light was surrounded with thick fringe of plumage, wall lights and other fixings treated as generously. Feature of entire flash was period bedstead mounted on low dais covered completely with bedding and pillows of snow-white feathers (see photo) above which title of picture was spelled out in alternating red and white plumes. Compelling extra attention was lovely English girl in feathered bed.

Inside of house was given same treatment with lights, boxes and proscenium hidden behind banks of plumage. And carrying the thought further, small cellophane-wrapped plumes were given to all women at premiere.

As part of actual presentation, Dillon tied in with prominent designer to stage style show and rounded up the evening by promoting appearance of Carroll Gibbons band, prominent English dance orchestra, which introduced to London the song hits of picture. But of course, the plumes were the stopper and and an ace idea, too.

"Wild Cargo" Float Startles New York

Land-going liner and highway ship are some of the terms used by Bob Sisk's RKO publicists to describe the giant animated jungle float constructed to bally "Wild Cargo" at Radio Music Hall in New York and other principal spots. Representing an ocean-going freighter with funnels, whistles, masts, etc., the gag carries 19 animal figures above and below decks (see photo) with motors to supply motion and sound effects to simulate the cries of the various jungle denizens. Large head of Buck moves from side to side and not easily thrilled Broadwayites stopped to marvel as bally advanced picture, while crowds collected in various parts around the city to gaze in wonder.

Other angles also helped. Jungle-fighter Frank Buck, who made picture, appeared at all Music Hall shows, made many broadcasts, talked before school assemblies, advised Central Park officials on construction of new zoo, and visited with caged animals, photos on this breaking many dailies.

Crowds around Ringling Circus, appearing at Madison Square Garden, were "herald-ed" and novelty tracer throwaways were given youngsters. Many windows featured "Wild Cargo" novelties with Eberhard pencil, Western Union, Italian Line, American Express and Woolworth press book tieups all being extensively put over in every section of city.

Twenty national tieups of various kinds are reported to have been effected on this attraction, many of which are now being arranged for other spots.

Indiana Member Doesn't Always Conform to Color Fundamentals In Selling Punchless Pictures

by BOB EWING
Art Head: Mars, Luna, Family Theatres
Lafayette, Indiana

It has often been said that colors cover up a lot of poor workmanship; and while they will not make a poor layout any less conspicuous, they are of great importance, especially with case cards which occupy the same positions year after year and must rely on unusual treatments to attract attention.

An artist is expected to conform to certain fundamentals in the use of color, but I have found that in some cases it is well to forego orthodox rules. For instance, any artist can recall some picture that had no particular selling point worth mentioning, "names" with little sales value, inferior story, combined with an afterthought for a title. That picture represents a problem, and its solution lies, in my opinion, in the application of color, and involves departure from the conventional as outlined by Don Andorfer. In other words, the head in that case should not be done in the dominating color nor should it rate the space usually accorded a head. The press sheet should be searched carefully for a motif symbolic of the time or setting, or title of the picture, and this when found incorporated into the background of the poster and given the dominating colors.

Even when a picture has great "name" value I do not think it is always wise to do the head in the dominating color. Many films can attribute their success to the title rather than to any particular character. It devolves upon the artist to single out the box office titles and play them up.

I assume from Don Andorfer's last article that green plays a prominent part in the coloring of his posters. Personally, I do not care for green in a theatre display; unless particular attention is given to lighting it is apt to look bilious and dead. And I might add that I do not think that green need necessarily be thought of in connection with a mystery play. Black and white are so rarely used alone that they make a much more effective poster, and if used properly succeed in transmitting the air of mystery quite as well as green does.

There are certain colors, in addition to black and white, which are particularly valuable in theatre art, seeming to hold their own under all circumstances better than others, namely, blues, light reds, light yellows, orange and lavender. An endless variety of posters can be done with these colors without their becoming tiresome or giving an impression of sameness.

MARCH WINNER BEING CHOSEN

The March judges are now considering the Quigley Award entries for the third month prize and the winner will be announced in the issue of April 14. As stated, these judges are Messrs. Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio; Ben Grimm, Universal, and Irving Lesser, Roxy Theatre.

The April plaque is now in competition, and again we invite theatre managers everywhere in the world to enter their campaigns for these monthly prizes. Rules and all information regarding the Quigley project have been published frequently in the last few months, and reference to the back issues of Motion Picture Herald will give necessary details.

Honors galore have been heaped upon the previous winners, and every effort will be made to do likewise during the months of these competitions. Everyone has an equal opportunity, and the field is wide open for campaigns from small towns as well as big cities on pictures of any product, major or independent, domestic or foreign.—MIKE.

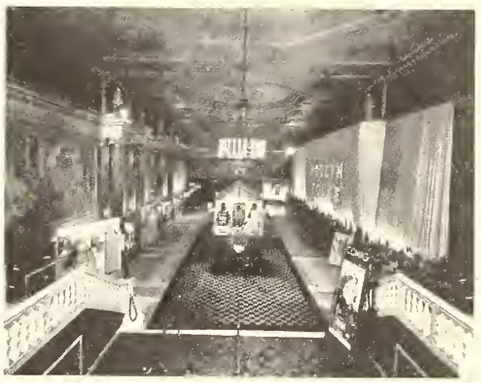
Feldman's Drive Designs Profitable "Design" Date

Designed for profit was Joe Feldman's "Design for Living" campaign at the Stanley Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa. Of course the better stores went for the title in their ads and made up special department and window displays on the new styles to tie in further. Newspaper picture critics treated engagement very generously, and as local papers do not go for contests, Joe promoted one in many adjacent small town papers on whether a woman could live two men at the same time—the theme of the picture.



Schools were hooked into campaign with announcements on bulletin board at three local universities and students of all art schools were also informed of picture from the standpoint of the art effects. To reach the class of people who saw the stage play, space was taken in legitimate theatre programs in advance. Congress of Clubs comprising 167 women's clubs in the county also carried special announcements on the date at local headquarters.

Effective also were many distinctive lobby pieces, accompanying photo illustrating quality of these displays. Tieins with Lux soap and "Screen Romance" returned countless windows in prominently situated stores and at news dealers.

Much extra exploitation effort is necessary in Pittsburgh as papers do not co-operate. Therefore, Feldman's tieups are to be commended considering the obstacles he faces.

Crute Sells Principals On Saturday Matinees

Manager William A. Crute had difficulty in building up his Saturday matinees at the Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Vigorous exploitation availed little. Crute discovered school principals antagonistic toward theatre, holding same responsible for children's neglect of homework. To gain good will therefor, this member gave term passes, good on Saturday matinees only, to children making highest class marks, and reports slow but steady progress in winning cooperation of school principals and PTA.

Original Garbo Costumes Hold Up Brient's Grosses

Though the costumes worn by star in production did not reach Richmond, Va., until middle of engagement, they were used advantageously by Manager Elmer Brient of the State Theatre to hold up business on "Queen Christina," where many visited to see the garments (see photo) actually doned by famous star. Leading store borrowed one of the ensembles for showing in fashion presentation and gave theatre generous credits.

In advance, Elmer and able assistant, Francis Deering, did much. Ace store of city advertised Garbo neckwear and blouses—a first time, says Elmer—and other emporiums did likewise, including Cinema Shop ad. These stores also went for extensive windows and counter displays. Best restaurant in town took space to advertise photo giveaway to patrons. Special three column art and story break was secured with lobby display of Garbo drawings by newspaper staff artist. Besides much extra publicity, added free space was secured with classified hookup.

For a window display of breakfast products in store in theatre building, Elmer secured free streamers in grocery stores, this arranged by newspaper as part of merchandising plan. Class preview to state and city officials, editors, leading merchants et al, two days ahead, contributed much to well designed buildup.

Marshall Scores on "Earth Turns" Premiere

Because Manager Jack A. Marshall, Frances Theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn., put over so good a campaign on the premiere of "Cabin in the Cotton" last year he was allowed to display his showmanship on what was announced as the world premiere on "As the Earth Turns," local newspapers making much publicity out of this honor and leading citizens cooperating in appreciation.

Besides front page stories and editorial comment, newspapers also sponsored window contests in which local merchants were invited to make up prize displays for cash and ticket awards on best reproduced scenes in picture, stills being given to all those who wished to enter.

Donations of copies of novel to public library by Marshall helped publicity with librarians announcing gift and papers running stories. Special preview four days ahead after which comments were posted in lobby aided build-up, as did jumbo telegrams mailed to select list.

Featured in lobby was large revolving globe 8 feet in diameter, other highlight advertising including double sided street banner, sound truck in surrounding area and extra advertising in many outside weekly newspapers. Obviously, the distinction brought to Dyersburg by the "world premiere" was potent in bringing the date a lot of profit as well as prestige.

Most members will recall Balto, the famed Eskimo dog, the leader of the team that pulled the sled into Nome, Alaska, some years ago with medical supplies to save the stricken city. The original sled being available, H. M. Addison's Loew Cleveland ad crew used this as one of the features at the State Theatre in a lobby display on "Eskimo" (see photo), tying it into the picture.

Advertising distribution was secured by stickers pasted on every bundle sent out by a leading laundry, heralds in packages at five and tens and blotters in office buildings distributed by night cleaners. The picture was serialized in one of the papers, A & P arranged windows in 82 local stores, and equipment used in the making of the picture was borrowed from studios and used as display in various sections of the town.

A little different angle was used by calling attention to the camera work in the picture through over 200 local photographers who were invited to participate in an exhibit of their work, the photos being displayed in the lobby.

McManus Profits On Gable "Personal" Riot

The half hour between trains spent by Clark Gable in Kansas City was a period of great excitement, according to Manager John McManus, of the Midland Theatre, where the star made a personal appearance during his brief stop. Advance notices in all papers of the star's anticipated visit sufficed to bring enormous crowds to railroad station, where police reserves were required to protect Gable from admirers and also to protect admirers from menace of locomotive wheels.

Much additional publicity accrued the following day featured by column length front page stories describing the riot at railroad station and theatre. Editorial writers "viewed with alarm," columnists made pertinent cracks and cartoonists drew pictures of the star beleaguered by the thousands of autograph hunters. All breaks included mention of theatre which John anticipates will aid grosses materially on forthcoming Gable pictures. Incidentally, the "riot" has resulted in wooden barriers being erected at the station for use in such further receptions.

'NATURALS' MUST BE PLUGGED

So States Massachusetts Member Who Endorses Recent Editorial; Says Many Ideas Can Be Adapted

by PAUL W. KUNZE
Manager, Old Colony and Plymouth Plymouth, Mass.

I read with interest your editorial in the Round Table Club issue dated March 17 entitled "Box Office Naturals" in which Alden Brinham criticizes the Club procedure, basing his remarks on the fact that only ideas and campaigns are published on "box office naturals" and proclaiming that "anyone can do business on big ones."

To a certain extent Mr. Brinham, of Massillon, Ohio, is correct in saying that "naturals" do substantially better than ordinary pictures at the box office, but the percentage in favor is still based on the effort the individual manager puts into the attraction. Assuming that a so-called "natural" may already be pre-sold to the public, it is still necessary to stage an advertising campaign, intelligently planned, to call attention to the local showing of the film, which will reach the greatest number of people, whether pre-sold or not, telling them that the particular attraction is playing when and where.

Everyone is not reached through the ordinary theatre channels of advertising, whether the "natural" is pre-sold to the public or not. It is this extra effort of an intelligent and complete campaign even in the case of a natural" which results in several hundred dollars' additional gross through reaching those prospective patrons who are not ordinarily contacted through the regular channels of theatre advertising.

The profit on "naturals" does not come from fans who attend every program change, but from those infrequent picture goers who are sold in advance, either through radio, fan magazines, daily newspapers or personal contact. This type of patronage must be reached to make a "natural" show an outstanding gross.

Club Procedure Logical

Further in Mr. Brinham's statements, he wonders why elaborate campaigns are not published on ordinary pictures. Naturally in stands with more than one or two changes a week, it would be impractical to stage an elaborate campaign on anything but the outstanding attraction of the week, because to do so would defeat its own purpose in the long run, through a loss of the public's confidence. In the case of full week runs with double features, logically only the outstanding attraction on the bill would be given a campaign. No one in the business will agree that every release deserves a big campaign; some pictures are poor, others are fair and good entertainment and too few are "naturals" which still must be sold to get that extra profit they are entitled to.

Am sure that managers generally will agree with me and your own comment that even "naturals" need plenty of savvy and perspiration in these times to get over big. As far as Club procedure is concerned, I am convinced it is quite logical to report campaigns on outstanding pictures, as the lesser ones do not deserve it and only react unfavorably when an important occasion comes along. For that matter, most of the ideas and stunts published on "naturals" in the Club columns could easily be adapted to the less important attractions if a manager saw fit to do so.

Paul Kunze has been a member for many years and we anticipate other of his meaty combinations for early publication. Managers should study his views and reactions on the subject of "naturals." They cover the subject very well.

WHAT IS BEING DONE OVERSEAS

Brainos' "Kong" Bally

(Right) NORMAN WESTWOOD, General Manager, Universal Pictures, China, sends this shot of a street bally in Peking. This sort of advertising is rarely done in China, special permit being necessary for such exploitation. Westwood says that pictures in China are exploited in six languages.

Street Float in China

Effective Front in Japan

(Left) The front of the Kinema Club, KOBE, Japan, on "Son of a Sailor" and "Captured." Both lobby and marquee displays are very flashy, the Nipponese showmen evidently being right upon their toes to adapt the American methods of lobby decoration to Japanese taste.

(Right) PAUL VERDAYNE, Paramount manager, Singapore, arranged this unique stunt on "The Sign of the Cross" at Chengmai, Siam, 400 miles into the interior. The excellence of this bally is to be commended, especially since Siam is not a Christian country.

From the Interior of Siam

Havana Foyer on "Henry VIII"

(Left) From the National Theatre, HAVANA, Cuba, comes this lobby shot on "Henry VIII." The creator of this excellent flash unfortunately is anonymous. In addition to the feature, note the effective use of the Mickey Mouse cutouts in advertising these shorts.

(Right) B. W. PALMERTZ, of the Singapore Warner office, forwards this shot of one of the banners used at the Cinema Palace, Batavia, on "Gold Diggers." Other stunts of American origin put across were a loudspeaker truck, song hits played by local orchestras and newspaper contest.

Street Banners in Batavia

"Kid From Spain" in Spain

(Left) This carriage bally with the beautiful senoritas played a prominent part in the campaign on "The Kid from Spain" at the Tivoli Theatre, BARCELONA, Spain. It seems especially fitting that the Cantor opus should have been exploited so vigorously in that country.

(Right) JOHN ARMSTRONG, Paramount Theatres' Great Britain ad chief, is responsible for this very unusual stunt on "Alice in Wonderland" for the date at the Plaza, London. John had the Frog Footman and the Ugly Duchess in the original Hollywood costumes shopping in Piccadilly Circus.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributors. Where they vary, the change is probably due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1933, unless otherwise specified.

Lasting beauty, greater underfoot luxury, lower maintenance costs are the reasons. ¶ Bigelow offers a wide choice of fabrics, designs and colors . . . a full price range . . . a design staff to create special patterns.

Observations

¶ "Something is happening," writes Mr. George E. Eichenlaub, eminent architect of Erie, Pa., originator (so he has always told me) of his own special brand of "standard theatre," and a dynamic sort of a fellow with a typewriter. Just when a strange concentration of reports were making us think very much along the same lines, he writes us, "Something is happening!" And goes on to explain:

"For a long, long time this office had no inquiries whatever concerning new theatres. We long ago began to forget about 'em. The whole business was given up in favor of Professional Education —we went back to college. There we stumbled on a United States Civil Service examination, which offered an opportunity to find out what kind of an architect and engineer we might truly be (there was much room for doubt after sitting around a couple of years without a nibble from the theatre field). Followed an offer to build for Uncle Sam, and it was a grand job until they let down about 15,000 of us Civil Service fellers—and here we are back to our old standard theatres again.

"Then all in one sudden week, what do you think? Something pops! Where our well had been perfectly dry, we get a flock of inquiries for new theatres. . . .New York State, 1,800 seats. . . . Pennsylvania, 800 seats. . . . Tennessee, 1,000 seats. . . . Nebraska, 800 seats. . . . we don't know what to make of it!

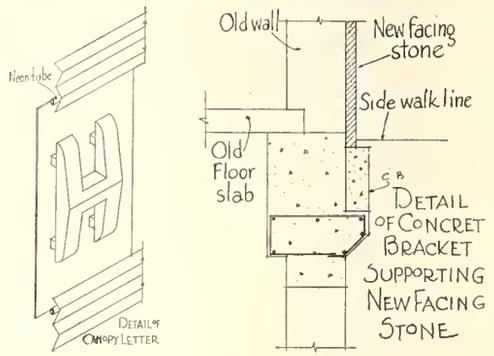
"It begins to look as if the money under the mattress is about to be exhumed. Maybe the owners are thinking it a good idea to dig it out and place it in something tangible where it can do constructive work and where the bankers can't gobble it up, to cash in on the rise when dollars melt to 57c in fact.

"And here's a new angle! The Securities Act is in the papers and it says something about jail! Anyway, the wild-finance boys are being held in check. No longer are they rushing around to build new theatres by peddling stocks at 30% commish, with the bold investor finding himself out on a limb holding the paper—and somebody else holding the theatre! So it begins to appear to us that the bona-fide investor can safely go into a new theatre without being scared stiff that another house will soon be built across the street. (It has happened, you know.)

"Here's still another angle: Did you ever hear about obsolescence? He is the horse that runs first, but finishes last. He is the cheap theatre, done without thought for the future, and the hundred factors that make for sustained, true success—that cheap job the promoter-builder demands and gets. During the Wild Twenties at least nine out of ten theatres built were that kind of a job, and they are now beginning to run down and cost so much to keep up that the only hope is to sell before the job is condemned or closed. Mr. and Mrs. Public have been caught riding over to the next town (a funny preference) in order to attend a nice theatre. When a house looks like a Chic Sales Specialty in a fog, circa 1893, it just ain't the place to go Hollywood 1934! Well, is it?

"The financing angle looks to us like the hard nut to crack. But cracked it will be, for there's a really sound business idea in the fact that those fancy fakes built during the Gaudy Twenties could not hope to compete with a theatre constructed on a business basis, with the latest wrinkles for looks, comfort and economical operation. Maybe some folks are finding that out already, hence all this interest. What do you think?

¶ Well, our thoughts run something like this (reading from building reports at hand):



San Francisco—While there are no large theatres in course of construction in this territory, work is underway on a number of small houses. They are, etc. . . . Birmingham—R. E. Martin of Columbus, Ga., has leased a large building in Sylacauga, Ala., and will remodel it for a motion picture theatre. N. H. Walters has obtained a permit for a new theatre in East Ensley, Ala. . . . Oklahoma City—Griffith Amusement Company is expending considerable money in remodeling and re-equipping theatres over the state. New houses are being built, while others, dark several months, are being revamped and opened again. . . . Richmond—New construction and theatre improvements in this territory are regarded as increasing signs of prosperity. . . . Providence—Sidney and Charles Makowsky will build a theatre in Bristol, and in Warren, Alonzo Vail has about completed plans for a new house. . . . Dallas—Interstate Circuit is expected to invade the suburban field here with the erection of a $250,000 motion picture theatre in Spanish Village. And so on, the reports at hand being here barely indicated. But they yet show that Mr. Eichenlaub's experience is not without explanation. When there is money to be made, there will be plenty of people to seek it.—G. S.

THE NEW STRAND: A RIDDLE IN RECONSTRUCTION

How a modern motion picture theatre was created from another in an unusual building 48 years old

[The following account of the building of the New Strand theatre in St. Paul, Minn., has been prepared by the architects, Liebenberg & Kaplan of Minneapolis.—THE EDITOR.]

THE RECONSTRUCTION of the New Strand theatre in St. Paul, Minn., represented a problem which at first seemed an almost unsurmountable obstacle to both owner and architect. The building was one which had fallen into ill-repute as to its building possibilities purely on account of disuse and non-occupancy. To further complicate reconstruction, a roof fire had razed a substantial portion of the old wood-truss roof framing, leaving the masonry walls in a rather unsupported condition.

In tracing the history of this building, which is over 48 years old, the architects found that the four-story limestone original building, which at first was built as a store and loft building, was first converted into a store and hotel. Later, the upper stories were converted into a ballroom by removing the fourth floor; then again converted into a scenic beer garden. The latter change was made in 1898. In 1920 a party wall adjacent to this building was removed, and the two adjoining buildings were converted into a theatre by means of a unique transverse truss system which supported the old beer garden floor, the second floor being removed to make room for the former theatre construction.

It was of interest to find that this building has been built of limestone originally quarried on the building site, and was used in construction of the walls and footings. The original builders carried some of their old footings to the bottom of the quarry, in some cases as much as 30 feet below the basement floor. It was amusing, to say the least, to find that the original walls were 2 feet, 6 inches thick at the coping line of the roof. Evidently the structure was built for posterity! In spite of this thickness it was found necessary to caisson and underpin the rear and proscenium walls to a depth of over 30 feet below basement floor level in order to guard against wall movement which had begun at the upper levels on account of eccentric loading of the old wooden trusses.

By examining the photographs accompanying this article, you will find that the new building was cut down in height to what would have been about three stories of the original structure. The old wooden roof construction was removed, and a new steel trussed incombustible roof was built at the reduced level. This new roof was built under the old roof before the latter was demolished in order to maintain the properties of the limestone masonry walls.

A rather amusing coincidence occurred at the time of the last reconstruction pictured herewith. The famous Gates Mansion in Minneapolis, home of the picturesque "Bet-a-Million Gates," was being demolished. This building, originally designed by Marshall & Fox, architects of Chicago, was a reproduction of a beautiful Venetian palace. Its design was exquisite and it was considered one of the "show places" of the city. The architects and the owners set about to acquire all of the Bedford stone of this structure, which in some cases was over two feet thick in the wall. This material was removed from the site to a stone plant in St. Paul and refabricated new 4-inch and 8-inch Bedford stone veneer.

This veneer was applied to the face of the old theatre limestone walls by a rather interesting method. In order to obviate new footings for this veneer, and which would have had to be carried to considered depth, a reinforced concrete "encircling shelf beam" was built around the old building and cantilevered through the wall to eliminate "upthrust" and eccentric loading. This shelf beam was built below frost line and became an integral part of the old foundation wall. (See accompanying detail.) The stone veneer was carried on this beam and bonded into the old wall at every course by means of stone headers and galvanized anchors driven into the old wall at acute angles. The resulting exterior was most pleasing, as every evidence of the superannuated structure has disappeared, and a new modern facade has taken its place.

The interior of the structure was completely gutted to make room for the new plans. A new balcony was added, seating approximately 300 persons. The main floor seating arrangement was left practically undisturbed except for aisles, which were rebuilt. This floor seats about 550 persons. A new projection room was built. A new air conditioning plant was installed, which

REMODELING

HOW A GARAGE BECAME A THEATRE

By ROBERT O. BOLLER

Continuing the true story begun in the March 10th issue, of building a theatre in the face of obstacles

[In the first installment, Mr. Boller, the architect in this unique remodeling project, told the very human story of the competitive factors that prompted it, the community co-operation that permitted it, and the financial and architectural problems that confronted it. Now we learn what was actually done structurally to the original building to attain a modest but modern theatre.—THE EDITOR.]

TWO SHOPS, 12 feet by 20 feet, were provided in front, one at either side of a central lobby measuring 16 feet by 15 feet. A vestibule, 4 feet, 6 inches deep, fronted the street, with display frames in either side wall and at the front piers, and a neat box office in the center. Recesses for link mats in the center of vestibule floors were bordered with dark tiles. A tile base around the box office joined a wainscot of cement plaster decorated in colored stencils. The box office depended upon wood-fluted columns at each corner for a distinctive note, with an ornamental plaster cornice above fitting in between the columns, all decorated in gold and varying shades of deep cream and tan.

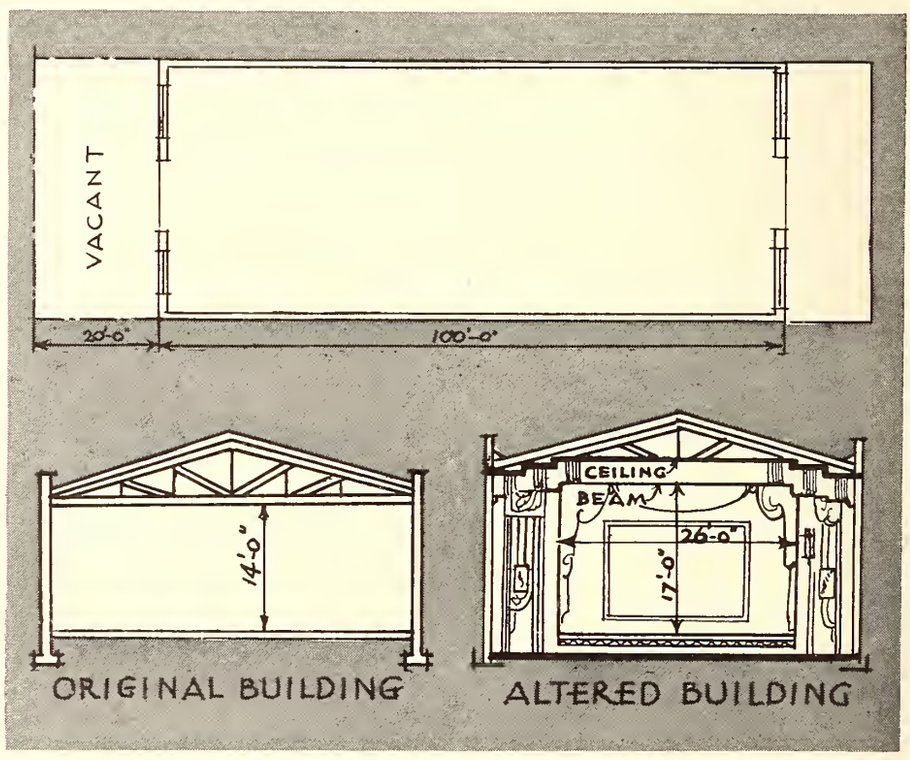
FACADE

The front was finished in stucco, applied over the old brick work wherever possible. The only ornamental work used for the remodeled exterior consisted of terra cotta copings, the rest of the architectural effect being produced by offsets in the stucco work and by the decorating. The central feature was of cement plaster, with a decorative panel painted with weather resisting coach enamel, which lasts indefinitely on exterior work.

The stucco front was of light cream, the terra cotta copings a rich shade of gold, and the central panel on old gold background with an ornamental design in yellow gold, high-lighted with touches of red.

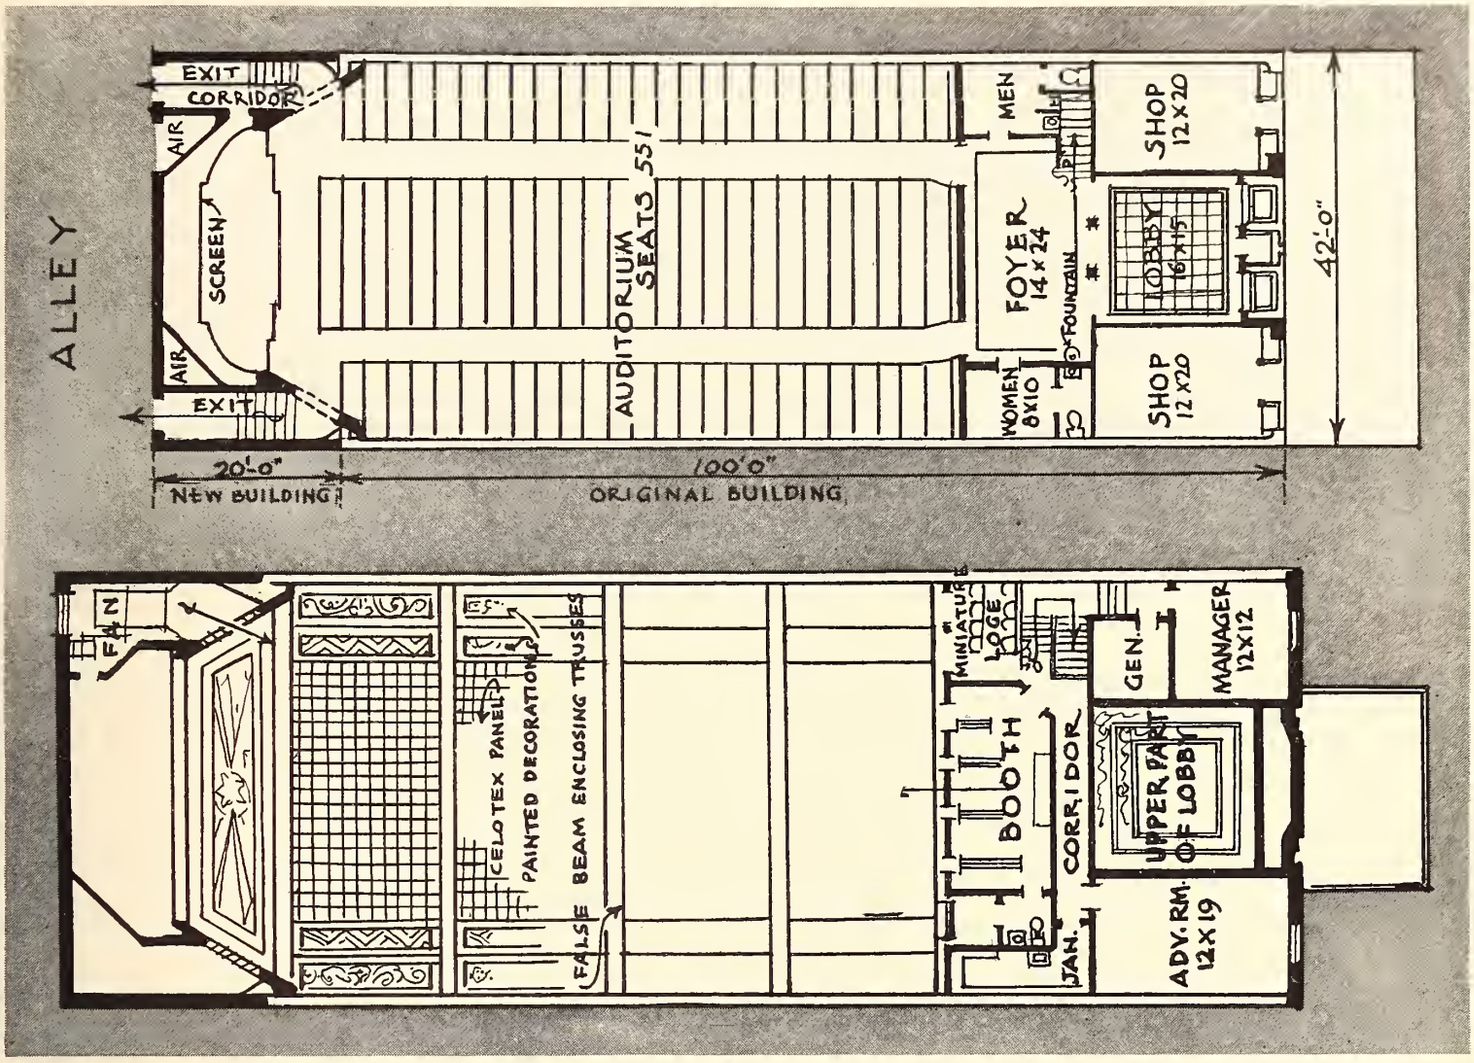
Time and economy were the two essentials in this reconstruction work. The architect was admonished to keep all costs down to a minimum to aid the owner. The whole building was therefore designed on one of the most efficient and economical plans possible for a theatre of this type.

LOBBY



To avoid a squatty effect caused by a low ceiling, the lobby rose the full two stories to the new roof line, while the portions on either side of the lobby in the front-section of the building were designed for a second story to hold the manager's office and advertising and generator rooms.

It was found to be most economical not to go too deeply into the ground in front, and for this reason the lobby floor was sloped 18 inches from the street up to the foyer. The floor was covered with a good grade of battleship linoleum used in a field of henna red, surrounded by stripes of dull gold and nile green, with border and base around the walls of black. A 45-inch wainscoting of smooth Keene's cement was carried to a wood capping above, and was decorated in stenciled designs colored to harmonize with other parts of the lobby.



To eliminate the expense of decorating, all lobby walls above the wainscot, to the frieze around the ceiling, were finished in a vertical grain ivory texture stucco, with an overlay of gold bronze waxing, wiped to show the ivory on all high surfaces. The texture work stopped at a line about 3 feet below the lobby ceiling, and the frieze above and the ceiling were carried out in sand-finished plaster to be used as a base for painted decorations.

The frieze was worked out in ornamental stenciled designs in greens, yellows, and varying shades of red, while the ceiling was finished with a field of henna and borders of stenciled colors. Lines of demarcation for ceiling borders were formed by making simple offsets in the plain plaster work, and the ornamental effect obtained depended entirely upon the skill of the decorator.

On either side of the lobby three display frames presented coming attractions. Three pairs of doors separated the lobby from the foyer. Throughout the building all doors and trim were specified of what is termed "blue yellow pine" or "pine for paint," thus eliminating the expense of more costly woods for staining. Highlighting and antique effects were used on the pine with results highly satisfying and attractive, at small cost.

FOYER

Retiring rooms for men and women open on to either end of the foyer, which is 14 feet by 24 feet in size. Since the ceiling height of the foyer was limited to 9 feet by the projection room and other rooms above, vertical grain texture stucco of warm gray with a blue and silver bronze waxing was employed for the wall finish, to give an illusion of greater height. The ceiling was finished in a lighter shade of gray stucco, with waxing of lighter shades of blue and silver than that used in the wall treatment.

All foyer trim, such as at doors, base and casings, was decorated in two shades of blue enamel to harmonize with the stucco, with simple silver bronze strippings.

The women's room was finished in interior stucco in shades similar to those used in the foyer, except that it was applied with a swirled Italian texture. Tan stucco with old ivory waxing finished walls and ceiling of the men's lounge.

A stock terra cotta drinking fountain, combining beauty and utility, was provided at one corner of the foyer. The opposite corner housed a small stairway to the second floor.

At the head of this stairway, between the projection room and the side wall, there was sufficient space for a miniature loge section, seating eight or ten persons, designed for reservation by small parties. [See plan of second floor.] The remainder of the space over the foyer was taken up with projection booth, janitor's supply room, and a corridor connecting this space with manager's office, advertising and generator rooms in the second story over the front shops.

AUDITORIUM

Downstairs, the auditorium, seating 551, was flanked by walls finished to wainscot height in Keene's cement and decorated to harmonize with the rest of the room. Side walls above the wainscoting were finished in a swirled texture stucco of deep cream with ivory waxing. To obtain greater height, the auditorium ceiling was raised an additional 3 feet between the trusses [see cross section accompanying previous installment.] and false beams finished in acoustical plaster and decorated in shades of tan were built around the exposed trusses. As the roof height at the side walls was not sufficient for the 3-foot clearance possible in the center section, stepped offset panels were provided at either side wall to overcome the difference. [See accompanying cross sections.] These stepped panels were ornamented in stenciled designs in tan, henna and harmonizing tones. Ceiling beams of acoustical material were decorated in a shade of tan to match the stiles of the stepped panels.

The newly raised ceiling sections were covered with 4 by 8 foot celotex sheets, with V-cut joints, 16 inches on centers, both ways. These were finished in a light

MODERNIZING A STORE-FRONT THEATRE

[The following description of the remodeling of the Argo theatre in Argo, Ill., has been prepared by the architect, Mark D. Kalischer of Chicago.—THE EDITOR.]

WHEN THE ARGO was remodelled, it had served its small community, Argo, Ill., for fifteen years. It was no longer adequate, however, and the owner, J. B. Lerner, explained that his patrons now demanded a modern theatre. This would have to be given them, but expenditures would have to be kept at a minimum.

The auditorium itself was housed in a building that was just a big shell behind a small business block of three stores, one of which was used for a lobby. The problem thus was one of completely remodeling the house with the smallest possible expenditure, not only decoratively, but structurally. The floors in the lobby and projection room were falling in and had to be replaced with reinforced concrete. Old wooden stairways were a fire hazard. Mechanical equipment was obsolete, and acoustics had to be corrected.

The outside of the old theatre was of store type. It had a wooden canopy over the sidewalk, but there was no provision for advertising coming attractions. Because of the original construction of the stores, the floor level of the lobby entrance was 6 inches above the sidewalk, necessitating a step up from walk to lobby. The manager's office and box office were situated at the far end of the lobby. Two toilets, with antiquated plumbing, opened on the lobby entrance to the auditorium.

The old theatre had no foyer, and the one entrance to the auditorium was a continuation of the lobby. The projection room was above the toilet at the left and was reached by a rickety stairway in the areaway between the auditorium and stores. (Notice on the old floor plan that there is no entrance to the box office or to the booth except the one from the areaway which can only be entered from the alley.) The electric wiring was a haphazard installation, with switches and controls scattered in various places throughout the house. The heating system was antiquated and inadequate, and the ventilation was poor.

The photographs and diagrams give some of the improvements included in the theatre. The old wooden canopy has been replaced by a new steel marquee designed and executed in the modern manner, blending into the prevailing decorative scheme of the carrara glass front. The wooden floor of the old lobby has been replaced with reinforced concrete covered with terrazzo opening at sidewalk level and eliminating the old six inch step. The terrazzo covers the entire lobby, foyer and toilet floors. The box office is set at sidewalk level, just inside the lobby.

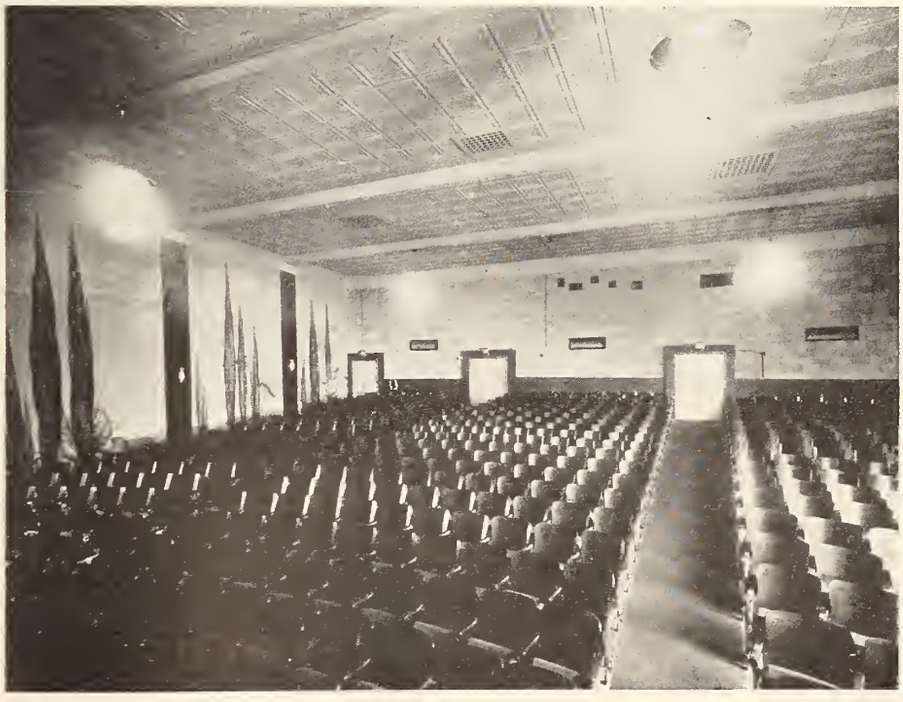
A part of one of the adjacent stores has been converted into office and rest room facilities, with openings into the foyer. All exits have been enlarged and equipped with fireproof doors and latest panic hardware.



The old heating and ventilating equipment has been replaced with a new air conditioning system combining heating and ventilating. One large oil-burning heating unit replaces the three old coal-fueled furnaces formerly used. This plant, occupying very little space and automatically controlled, is capable of delivering four times the amount of heat developed by the old furnaces. In designing this system the ultimate in air conditioning was considered as a basis for layout. All ducts, blowers and grilles were based on air quantities and static pressures adequate for cooling. The heating and ventilating equipment was laid out to provide space for the ultimate installation of compressors, condensers, cooling tower and evaporators, so that mechanical refrigeration may be installed without any modifications in the present equipment.

The house was completely rewired and all lighting controls were centralized at one point. Modern light fixtures of unique design were installed throughout the theatre.

The entire decorative scheme of the theatre is carried out in the modern manner. The outside front is covered with black carrara glass with a design of ivory glass strips. All trimmings and hardware are chromium finished and are especially designed to harmonize with and match the decorative scheme that has been carried out throughout the theatre. There are four chromium-plated metal display cases on the street, sunk flush with the wall facings and illuminated with neon. The new marquee, having three bands of red neon running around the outside, is cantilevered out over the sidewalk. Directly above the marquee is a large attraction board with chasing neon border. The new vertical sign above has an animated neon design on the top.

The lobby has black carrara glass wainscoting, and the upper walls are decorated in green and silver. Four large neon illuminated display cases, capable of displaying a three-sheet, are sunk flush in the lobby walls and below each case. The heating and ventilating grilles are made part of the decorative scheme. The decorative scheme carried out in the terrazzo floor consists of two bands of film running the entire length of the lobby. Also included in the floor design are four motion

The modernizing effect of illuminating devices as applied to the facade and entrance of the drab, out-of-date Doan theatre. At right is pictured the original building, which is radically transformed in the sketch above by the simple but ingenious use of modern theatre lighting. The new design takes into consideration the advertising requirements of the theatre, incorporating a luminous background against which are silhouetted removable letters in addition to the program display facilities of marquee. In the same style is the illumination provided the display cases and box office, while the vestibule walls, left plain, glow softly with the partial reflection of this light and that from cornice coves.

SUMMER COMFORT THROUGH VENTILATION

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

Turning now to the seasonal application of air conditioning systems without compression or similar mechanical refrigeration

A FEW YEARS AGO a marquee covered with icebergs and polar bears, and a sign telling of manufactured weather, sold many tickets at the box office. This was partly due to the novelty, and partly due to coolness inside the theatre, but also due to the fact that the ventilation of theatres up to ten years ago was abominable.

While air conditioning has gone forward in gigantic strides it has not been alone. Much has been learned about ventilation. The development of a well designed and well installed ventilating system will prove to be the answer in many theatre locations for maintaining summer business.

Ventilation, as the definition has been established in all of these articles, includes all types and kinds of fans, air washers, filters and other equipment, except mechanical refrigeration.

The starting point for any discussion on ventilation is, of course, the consideration of air.

WHAT IS THE NATURE OF AIR

AIR IS A mechanical mixture of gases. By volume it is about 79% nitrogen, and 20% oxygen. The oxygen is the ingredient so necessary for life and comfort. The nitrogen is an inert gas which serves as a dilutant of the oxygen, for human beings cannot breath pure oxygen without injury to the body tissues. Of the gases that make up the remaining 1%, ozone and carbon dioxide are the only ones which demand attention.

OZONE

Ozone exists in small quantities in outdoor air. This is especially so in the atmosphere of high altitudes. Ozone is oxygen. The molecule contains three atoms of oxygen and therefore its chemical formula is O_3. Most all human or body odors can be destroyed by oxidization. Consequently the presence of ozone in air tends to destroy such odors. Ozone can be mechanically "manufactured" with electrical equipment, and it can be used in treating air. Many theatres have been approached by salesmen of ozone equipment. Some definite tests have been made of its use in theatre operation. Such tests have been only partially successful, but ozone equipment is not recommended for the general treating of air for theatre ventilation.

CARBON DIOXIDE

Carbon dioxide exists even in outdoor air, that which is referred to as pure air. Pure air usually contains three to four parts by volume in every 10,000. Carbon dioxide is also one of the products of human respiration. It then follows that the carbon dioxide content of the air in any auditorium might be taken as a measure of the importance of ventilation. It has been established by good authority that 2% carbon dioxide present in the air will increase the lung action 50%, while 3% will increase it 100%, adding greatly to physical discomfort. The carbon dioxide content of air in an auditorium can be kept down by an adequate supply of air from the outside, not by recirculation or other means of air agitation.

FOREIGN MATTER

In addition to the various gases composing air there is also present odors, fumes, dust, smoke, bacteria and water vapor. All of these are now appreciated fully by ventilating engineers and are extremely important in establishing healthy ventilation. There are times when ventilation complaints can be traced to the presence of disagreeable odors. The most common odors met with in theatre ventilation are those emanating from the human body, from the mouth, throat, lungs, perspiration and soiled clothing. In theatre ventilation these are in most every instance overcome by increasing the rate of air change in the auditorium. Once again, this can't be accomplished by recirculating large volumes of air, or by air agitation.

AIR FILTERS

Apparatus for the removal of dust and smoke and certain other fumes have been used for some time, but not generally in theatres for ventilation. In the early days filters were made of fine mesh cloth, but they were unsatisfactory, clogging very quickly to the point where it was impossible to draw air through them. Various types of air filters are: air washers, viscous cell, automatic viscous cell, and dry air filters.

The air washer as an air filter is familiar to all theatre managers. Much of the sediment or "mud" which collects in the air washer tank has been removed from the air, even though the air washer is only about 60% efficient at best for removing suspended particles from air. All types of filters offer some positive resistance to the passage of air, therefore in order to maintain air volume, the fresh air intake will have to be enlarged should a filter installation be considered. The various types of viscous cell filters and the dry filters range in efficiency much higher than the air washer, some types being rated as 98% efficient.

Air filters are rated by their capacity in cubic feet per minute; by the resistance, measured in inches of water column, to the passage of air at the specified cubic foot rate; and by the percentage of dust removal.

Air filters are to be recommended only as a refinement in theatre ventilating, unless the theatre is located in a very dirty section of a city, or in a town located in open country where prevailing air currents carry a quantity of dust.

AIR CONTAMINATION

The exact measurement of odors, fumes, dust particles, smoke and bacteria has engaged the time and energies of many research workers over a period of years. Perhaps the most exact and workable developments along these lines have been contributed by Dr. E. V. Hill of Chicago. Doctor Hill developed the synthetic air chart, which has been accepted as standard by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers. Readings and measurements of the factors: effective temperature difference, dust particles per cubic foot, bacteria colonies, per cent of odors, carbon dioxide parts in 10,000 and distribution are shown on this chart, all of which are scientifically established. The final column on this chart indicates the percentage of perfection.

It would be extremely interesting to see such a chart compiled on the conditions in some of the larger theatres, equipped with some of the higher-priced air conditioning equipment, taken about 10 p.m., after 60% of the air has been recirculated all day long!

This chart is made note of here so that theatre managers and owners will know that there is a scientific method of determining the exact condition existing in an auditorium at any particular time, resulting from the operation of ventilating or air-conditioning equipment.

This entire discussion so far is to emphasize the importance of sufficient air quantity, delivered at a sufficiently high rate in order to bring about rapid air changes within an auditorium.

WATER VAPOR

The atmospheric element in which most variation is found is water vapor. Much space has been devoted to this subject in previous articles under the name of humidity. Yet its importance in theatre ventilation is so pronounced that it amply justifies this prominence. In the final analysis water vapor, as contacted in air, is in reality steam at a very low pressure. Its properties, actions and reactions are similar to those of steam. With this conception understood it should be perfectly clear that water vapor exists independently of air, and is affected only by the temperature of the air. Because of this very intimate mixture of water vapor and air the temperature of the two must be the same or very nearly the same.

When the wet bulb temperature and the dry bulb temperature are the same, the air is then said to be saturated because it is carrying all the water vapor possible. This being true, and realizing that the temperature of the water vapor and the air are the same, it follows that in any incident where the relative humidity is less than 100% the water vapor in that air may be considered as superheated up to the temperature of the air. Therefore the total heat of the air is the sum of the heat of the air, and the heat of the water vapor, in that air.

Remember, the water vapor is always in a superheated state except at the point where the air is saturated. The heat of the water vapor can be divided into three components: the heat of the liquid, the heat of vaporization, and the superheat of the water vapor. This being understood, it will perhaps be easier to understand the cooling effect of an air washer when used (without refrigeration) in connection with summer ventilation.

EFFECT AND USE OF AIR WASHER

WHEN AIR WITH a humidity less than saturation comes in contact with water, as in an air washer, it will vaporize some of that water which adds to the moisture content of the air, until the saturation point is reached. Now it is known that heat is required to vaporize water, consequently if this air actually picks up moisture some of the water must vaporize. If the water vaporizes, heat must be supplied; as no heat is added from the outside, the heat of vaporization must be supplied from the heat in the air, and from the superheat of the water vapor already in that air. This heat of vaporization is in a sense consumed and is not sensitive (usually called latent heat); that is, you can't feel it; hence the air is cooled to a certain extent by the exact amount of the heat of vaporization. This evaporation of the air washer water will continue, with the resultant lowering of temperature, until the air becomes saturated with water vapor.

It is perhaps in order at this point to distinguish clearly between the wet bulb temperature and the dew point in light of the foregoing paragraph. The dew point of air is reached by removing heat (mechanical or ice refrigeration) without changing its moisture content, while the wet bulb temperature is produced by adding moisture to the air and causing its temperature to be lowered by the heat of vaporization of the water added.

This chart is referred to in the text and represents a form for tabulating local temperatures. As reproduced here the tabulation is greatly reduced. The original chart measured 8 x 11 inches.

Now consider the air washer. The water of the air washer is used over and over again, by means of a pump which picks it up from the tank and pumps it into the spray nozzles. Because of this continuous circulation of the washer water, its temperature will in a comparatively short time approach the wet bulb temperature of the air. When this temperature is reached, the wet bulb temperature of the air won't change, but the dry bulb temperature will be lowered, always approaching the wet bulb temperature.

COOLING FUNCTION

This is the theoretical principle upon which ventilating systems designed to create a cooling effect by use of air washers is based. Frankly, the amount of cooling effect obtainable by this method is not very appreciable, in some instances it is negligible. Actually and practically there are times during summer months when the temperature of the air washer water is higher than the west bulb temperature of the air, and it even approaches very close to the dry bulb temperature of the air.

At such times, it is the writer's opinion, some of the heat of vaporization, if not all, is taken from the water of the air washer, thereby gradually cooling the air washer water until its temperature moves down toward the wet bulb temperature of the air. During this process, when the air washer water is cooling to a point approaching the wet bulb temperature of the air, the air itself is not receiving any cooling whatever—actually it becomes hotter and more moist. This set of circumstances is like blowing on a spoonful of hot soup to cool it, and of course only complicates the atmospheric condition in the theatre. When such conditions (washer water at a higher temperature than the wet bulb of the air) exist, the air washer should not be used, and dependency for the best possible effect must be placed entirely upon rapid air change in the auditorium.

AIR MOTION IN CREATING COOLNESS

FROM ALL OF the foregoing discussion it is evident that the element of atmospheric comfort (when operating without refrigeration) which theatre managers should put greatest dependence on, is air motion. It is the writer's opinion that well-established, hard and fast permissible limits and practical values for air motion have not been completely established to date. This is partially due to the progress made in refrigeration as applied to air conditioning, resulting in the opinion by many engineers that ventilation, to be truly up-to-date and modern, must include mechanical refrigeration. However, with all the data available on air conditioning there still remains much benefit to be derived from the delivery into an auditorium of large quantities of air, thereby bringing about complete air changes every two or three minutes. This statement, of course, has particular reference to meeting summer conditions.

EFFECT OF AIR MOTION

Air motion is of greatest importance—an absolute necessity. In still air the human body surrounds itself with a layer or coating of warm and often very humid air. Even a moderate air movement relieves this condition by blowing away that layer of air, thereby bringing new air in contact with the body. The cooling of the body results from the evaporation of the moisture (perspiration) which forms on the skin. The heat of vaporization supplied by the body results in a cooling effect. Generally the more air that can be brought in contact with the body the more rapid is the rate of evaporation of body moisture, and consequently the greater the cooling action.

Air coming in contact with the body at too great a velocity will undoubtedly cause extreme discomfort. Every possible precaution must be taken to eliminate drafts. Air motion, when applied to ventilation (without refrigeration), should combine maximum agitation of the air with rapid air change. Air currents varying in degree and direction absolutely create a very refreshing effect, though the exact measurement of this effect in engineering units has not as yet been practically established.

AIR DISTRIBUTION

It is very important in planning a ventilating system for a theatre, to work out a scheme of distribution which displaces foul air; one that pushes the foul air ahead of it rather than diffusing and mixing the new air with the stale air. It follows that to accomplish this the fewer number of delivery points the better, with an arrangement of the points of delivery so that the air generally is projected in a common direction.

This cannot always take place literally, because air currents are erratic. Some diffusion always takes place. But the general principle is good as a guide. The introduction of air at a level above peoples' heads, at the front of the theatre (stage) so that the path of the air is downward and toward the rear, with removal at or near the floor line, or from the doors of the auditorium by building up a slight pressure within the auditorium, has in general proved most satisfactory.

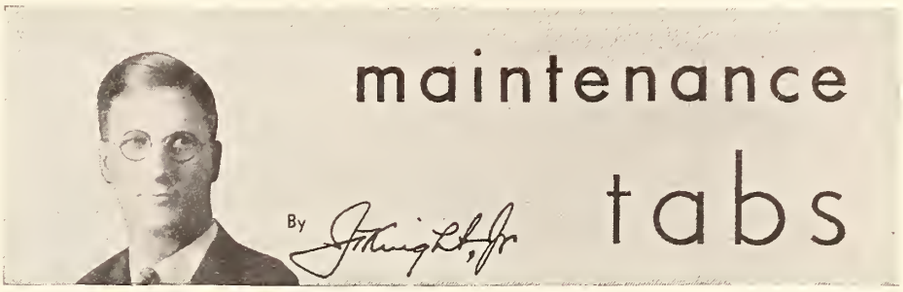
Movement of air toward one's face is very much more comfortable and satisfactory in every way than air pressure upon the back of the neck. It is permissible to resort to high velocities of air in the zone above 8 feet from the floor. The movement of air about a person at rest in excess of about 4 feet per second, is very likely to bring complaints of drafts.

OBSERVING AIR MOTION

Air motion within an auditorium can be observed very nicely by the theatre manager or owner by producing mechanical smoke, either in the auditorium or in the delivery ducts, and timing its movement. The white vapor resulting from mixing ammonia and hydrochloric acid may be used for this purpose. The auditorium must be empty, of course, before making this experiment.



Some very effective ventilating systems have been planned using both delivery and exhaust fans. Air may be projected many feet into an auditorium, depending upon the velocity, shape of opening and directional louvers, etc., while the exhaust fan influences the air only a very short distance about the exhaust outlet. Generally it is necessary to relieve the condition in the top of the balcony, or in the rear of the main floor when the balcony deeply overhangs the main floor, by using exhaust fans. In very large theatres, regardless of the shape of the auditorium, a well thought-out exhaust system especially planned to relieve air pockets is very necessary.

MUSHROOMS

In many theatres ventilation is through mushroom ventilators located at intervals underneath the seats. Some years ago it was considered good practice to deliver air through these mushrooms, and exhaust from overhead through grilles in the ceiling. This system is absolutely outmoded now, and any such system should be reversed to obtain the best results. Deliver air at the ceiling, and exhaust from the mushrooms under the seats.

REVERSE DIRECTION

There is another system of introducing air into an auditorium which has many capable engineers supporting it. This method delivers the air high up from the rear of the auditorium and blows it at high velocity toward the stage. The air traveling at high velocity above the heads of the audience is supposed to carry to the stage, where it drops downward, turns and moves back toward the rear of the auditorium, striking the audience in the face. Such systems usually require some sort of exhaust system with grilles near the floor line at the back of the auditorium. This method, or variations of it, is generally used where recirculation of air is planned, for the sake of economy either in summer refrigeration or winter heating.

WASHING WOODWORK (answering W. A.): Hot water and soap should never be used to wash any woodwork, regardless of finish. Hot water softens all paints, varnishes and shellac, and the soap, even if only slightly alkaline (and most sop is) does the rest—removes the finish. Another thing, don't use shellac on seats if you are going to continue to wash them. Shellac usually turns a milky white when water is used on it.

My recommendation would be that if you want to improve the appearance of the seats, call in a good painter and have him give them a coat of, say, four-hour valspar varnish. Then stop washing them, use a furniture cleaner instead. This will probably cost you from 20 to 30 cents a seat and is a lot of money to spend.

My next suggestion is that you stop using an oil polish and turn to a good wax polish and rub the wax in well until there is no surplus wax left on the surface to come off on anybody's clothing. Don't attempt to do all the seats in one night. Schedule it over a period of, say, three weeks. Such a program continually repeated should greatly improve the seats and keep them nice-looking. Above all things, stop using hot water and soap!

TAGGING OF VALVES: Each valve in the ventilating, heating and plumbing system in a theatre should be tagged. There are two methods: (1) Wire securely to each valve a linen tag, giving full information on the tag as to exactly what the valve controls. (2) Wire to each valve a small brass tag serially numbered, then list each valve by number, telling its exact location and what it controls. A copy of such lists should be kept at hand in the manager's office, and other copies posted in the boiler and engine rooms, or any other advantageous location in the theatre. The method of using brass tags is best.

EMERGENCIES: Have you given your night cleaning force, early morning cleaning force, or watchman specific instructions on just what to do in case of an emergency? A robbery, a fire or severe damage by wind or storm might be less serious if the right thing were done promptly.

RUST: Pigment paints other than red lead, chromium oxide and chrome yellow, speed up the rusting process. So specify one of these three for the first coat if you are planning to paint fire escapes, marquees or flashings.

CLEANING FLUES: How many times have the flues in the boiler of your theatre been cleaned this winter? I'll bet they haven't been brushed every two weeks at least! An eighth of an inch of soot or ash on the flues will reduce the heat transfer to the water of the boiler about 50%. It is certainly worth your while to check and insist that the flues be regularly brushed every two weeks.

IN ALL SPORTS as played in the truly American way the fellow who doesn't put all he's got into it is branded a "quitter." Suppose we should adopt the same policy in our game of theatre operation? So what! Just this, "Good enough" is not sufficient today, and maintenance is still and always will be a big part of your job.

ANY QUESTIONS? When you come across something in the maintenance of your theatre that gives you trouble, I'll be glad to find you a solution, or attempt to, if you'll just let me know what it is. Only your initials will be given in the reply.

FUNCTIONS OF VENTILATING FANS

WHEN AIR IS forced through a duct a pressure is necessary to start the movement and to maintain the flow of air. This pressure must be developed by the fan or fans. It becomes of great importance because it controls the capacity of the fan selected for that particular job. This pressure required divides into two separate pressures, static head pressure and velocity head pressure. The sum of the two is the total head pressure, and becomes the determining factor in establishing the capacity of the fan necessary.

There is little use in going into the details here of the methods or equipment used in determining these pressures. The thea-

PLANNING MODERN LOW-COST THEATRES

By BEN SCHLANGER

An architect cites some of the technical and economic advantages of the small theatre as it may be built today

THERE ARE MANY locations and neighborhoods where there is a definite need for either a new motion picture theatre or for the remodeling of an existing one. After four years of restricted construction, many theatres are to be found very poorly adapted to the purpose of properly exhibiting motion pictures. In addition, in the past four years or so, there has been, in numerous instances, a marked shift of population, causing many newly developed neighborhoods to be in need of a motion picture theatre. A neighborhood is in need of a theatre if its residents must either walk too far or ride to get to the nearest theatre. This has been definitely proved recently, as evidenced recently by the erection of small neighborhood houses, while no large deluxe house has been built in quite some time. Yet the number of small theatres recently built is small compared with the actual need for such units. The reason is lack of financing.

Financing of a small theatre is commonly difficult because the estimated cost is usually much higher than need be. Although in each instance the cost may be assumed to be the lowest possible, it might be that some of the fundamental factors which control cost may not have been given due consideration. It is highly possible, if the important factors are given adequate study, that many new small projects would mature because of the controlled and reasonable costs which would result.

Some of the important factors controling cost are hereinafter listed, and how they may affect cost is also given consideration. Every exhibitor should acquaint himself with this problem, even if he himself does not have in mind any new project or remodeling. The exhibitor must be alert to this in order to know what he may expect in the form of competition in his immediate or adjoining territory. Very serious competition may arise from a newly built theatre of moderate cost, the overhead of which, due to reduced rent and amortization, is low, and the planning of which offers a more effective means of exhibition. The main cost controlling factors are (1) Seating capacity, (2) Size of structure, (3) Materials of construction, (4) Extent of decoration and lighting treatment, and (5) Street facade.

Each particular neighborhood may call for a different consideration of each of these factors, but in each case, the ultimate aim when building a theatre should be to produce a unit which has a maximum income per seat with a construction cost at a minimum.

At the present time (perhaps at all times) there is talk about over-seating. Statistics usually quoted to prove this assumption are greatly misleading. A theatre seat which is not producing the required income to justify its existence (and there are quite a large number of these) should no longer be considered in statistical enumeration. The only seats that should be considered are those in theatres which have been properly planned according to the requirements of good exhibition and the community they serve.

SEATING CAPACITY

A MINIMUM seating capacity would naturally allow a structure of minimum size, thereby reducing cost. It is not always that the small theatre cost per seat will be the lowest. The lowest cost per seat is more easily obtainable in a large unit than it is in a small unit. But it must be remembered that the initial low cost per seat is a foolish objective when the income per seat becomes less than the income of a seat, the initial cost of which may have been higher.

It therefore may follow that the proper seating capacity would be determined when the desirable and reasonable income per seat is known. Since the per-seat income is greatly reduced when a theatre has more seats than is necessary, it is very important to arrive at the absolute minimum seating capacity advisable which would yet insure a sufficient economic return. Fortunately, the smaller type of motion picture theatre is far better adapted to exhibition, and so it becomes doubly important to reduce capacities.

Exactly how small a motion picture can be and still be a logical income-producing unit is of course determined by a number of factors, some of which (somewhat, in the order of their importance) are (a) population to be drawn from, (b) transient or residential location, (c) competition offered by other houses, (d) number of program changes per week, (e) local building ordinances, and (f) admission prices.

As stated before, the portion of the people from whom patronage may be expected are either those people who are within fairly short walking distance in towns and cities, and the shortest riding distance in rural locations, from a particular theatre. In a big city it would be those people who could be attracted to a theatre located on a popular street as transient patronage.

If a residential territory lacks a motion picture theatre and has a population of approximately as little as from 4,000 to 6,000 people, such a territory could utilize a 600-seat unit. This population may produce about 450 patrons at one time as an average. But 600 seats would be necessary to take care of peak good days and week-end business.

A greater population within a limited territory, such as may occur in large multiple-dwelling neighborhoods, does not necessarily justify the erection of an increased capacity unit. Such a neighborhood could more readily do more business totally in two smaller units than in the one larger unit. The greater choice in program for the patron permits this, thus encouraging more habitual patronage on the whole.

Besides the fact that the smaller unit shows itself to be logical because of its potential patronage, other practical construction aspects make it still more feasible. Most building codes and ordinances have less stringent requirements for the erection of the smaller unit because of the minimized hazards to be found in their design. These less stringent requirements mean simpler planning and construction and a minimum amount of outside ground area devoted to exit passage.

Theatres having a capacity of from 200 to 500 seats are feasible under two different conditions—the first being for rural districts of population below 4,000, and the second for transient locations in big cities. In the case of the transient unit, 300 seats have the efficiency of twice as many and even more, due to the repeated use of each seat during the day's business.

These small units can be erected very economically, especially in small towns where expensive materials and superfluous eye-catching architecture can easily be dispensed with. This should be true for city locations as well, but the element of competition in congested territory always invites the temptation of having one more tricky effect than the other fellow.

SIZE OF STRUCTURE

THE SECOND consideration which affects the cost of the motion picture theatre is the size or the total number of cubic feet of structure. Besides the seating capacity, which determines to a great extent the size of the structure, are such aspects as the proper seating arrangement, the proper size of the motion picture screen, lounge and toilet facilities, circulation spaces consisting in lobby, foyers, standee space, aisles, etc. To these items there can be, and there usually is, given a mistaken amount of cubic feet of structure. The correct minimum sizes for these portions will control the initial construction cost without sacrifice to the effectiveness of the whole.

The size of the screen and the size and shape of the auditorium seating space are inter-dependent. For each seating capacity problem there is a seating plan which will require a minimum of square-foot area. This at the same time will have a maximum of floor area affording an undistorted view of a screen. The screen size will accommodate rear as well as front row seats. Some of the factors which will control the size of the structure are:

1. Distance from screen to first row: A minimum distance equalling at least the width of the screen being used.
2. Distance from last row to screen: A maximum distance equalling no more than 5½ times the width of the screen.
3. Circulating aisles arrangement: A minimum number of aisles across the width of the auditorium being advisable.
4. Side seat distortion: See Figure 1 for Angle of Distortion.
5. Size of Screen.

In Figure 2 is shown diagrammatically the effect that the width of the screen may have on the seating plan arrangement. Two screen widths are shown—one 12 feet wide, the other 18 feet wide. A seating capacity of approximately 600 is the basis of the study.

In each case the last and first row of seats are located as governed, as heretofore stated by the screen width. Note that the shape of the seating plan necessary for the 12-feet screen utilizes a rectangle greater in area than is necessary for an 18-feet wide screen. Note also that the 18-feet wide screen in this diagram has much less of the extreme side seats. The smaller screen also causes a greater waste area on either side of it. This diagram shows that it is highly efficient to use the narrower deep-shape plan with the larger screen. The deep shape is commonly used, but with too small a screen to enable comfortable vision from the last rows.

The aisle arrangement of the narrower plan, which would have a bank of seven seats against each side wall, two aisles and a center bank of 14 seats, is a most efficient space saver. Adding more seats to the width would force the use of two additional wall aisles, because most building codes do not permit more than seven seats in a bank with access to one aisle only.

Much space can also be saved in the planning of the smaller cinema if a minimum area is devoted to lobbies, foyers, promenades, standee space, etc. The distance between the first set of entrance storm doors and the next set of doors need never exceed much over 10 feet. The standee space behind the last row of seats, usually made more than 10 feet deep, can be reduced to 5 or 6 feet.

It is better to provide a lounge room for patrons who must wait for a seat. Space for this lounge room could be found by eliminating separate men's and women's lounges adjoining the respective toilet rooms, and instead of having two lounges, arranging for one common lounge placed near the auditorium seating. Only a very small anteroom, approximately 5x8 feet, is necessary in front of each toilet room.

The total height of the auditorium should be no higher than 2 feet above the top of the screen. Any additional height only serves to increase cost without giving any worthwhile advantage. Given the approximate simple architectural form and lines, low ceiling heights can be treated very successfully.

MATERIALS OF CONSTRUCTION

THE VARIOUS building codes and ordinances, and the local materials available, largely control the building materials used for theatre structures. Most building codes permit a partially non-fireproof type of construction for theatres under 600 seats. The safety of the public in a theatre structure is chiefly guarded by the adequate provision for easy and quick egress in an emergency. This provision is far more important than the need for totally fireproof construction. Semi-fireproof, or fire retarding construction, of which there are various types, is suitable for theatre structures having 600 and less seating capacity. The following materials and construction should prove economical, yet highly suitable.

EXTERIOR

EXTERIOR WALLS should be of masonry, but should be kept down to a minimum height (See Figure 1). These walls, if they do not face on a street, could be built of concrete blocks or terra cotta blocks, since they would not have to be wall-bearing in this case. Only the street entrance wall would need more than ap-

CONTRACT LAW FOR THEATRE OPERATORS

By LEO T. PARKER

Concluding a discussion of the fundamentals of contract law with citations of recent decisions of the higher courts

MANY THEATRE owners have operated theatres for many years feeling secure against losses which may result from fire, tornado or robbery, when in fact payment of insurance would have been refused had a loss occurred. This same rule is applicable with respect to various other kinds of contracts, particularly leases.

Therefore, it is very important for all theatre owners and operators to carefully read these contracts knowing that an insurance policy, lease or other written agreement, is a legal contract by the written terms of which the company agrees to pay a stipulated amount of money or perform definite services under the certain conditions specified in the policy or contract.

Notwithstanding this established law a great majority of theatre owners, although believing themselves to be generally cautious, neglect to carefully read and understand the terms of their most important contracts. Moreover, many theatre owners do not carefully read complicated contracts, such as leases, but trust that the agent or representative has truthfully and correctly explained the terms and obligations assumed thereunder.

The importance of this advice is apparent when it is realized that an insurance company, lessor or other contracting party, is automatically relieved of paying insurance money or fulfilling other obligations if the theatre owner violates any material written provision in the contract or if such obligation is not clearly included in the written contract.

It is important to know that failure to read a contract never is an excuse which entitles the theatre owner to collect insurance, or otherwise be the victor in a litigation involving a contract, where the other party introduces convincing testimony to prove that the former violated a part of the contract, or that the written contract does not contain an obligation which the theatre owner believed such contract contained.

For instance, in a leading case (91 U. S. 45), the Supreme Court of the United States stated the established law:

"It will not do for a man to enter into a contract, and, when called upon to respond to its obligations, to say that he did not read it when he signed it, or did not know what it contained. If this were permitted, contracts would not be worth the paper on which they are written."

AUTOMATIC RENEWAL

Another very important rule of the law advisable not to forget, in order to avoid serious and expensive litigation, is that a written contract is automatically extended for its original period if both parties continue in the same relation after expiration of the contract.

For illustration, contrary to the general opinion a theatre owner who retains possession of leased property even one day after the lease has expired is liable for payment of the rent for a period equal to the full term of the expired lease.

For example, in a recent case (135 N. Y. S. 633), a tenant who had leased property twelve months was notified by the landlord that the rent would be increased for the next year. The tenant stated that he would not renew the lease, but remained in the building one month after the lease expired. He sent the landlord a check for one month's rent and at the end of thirty days he moved off the premises. The landlord sued for damages, and the court held the tenant liable for payment of the balance eleven months rent whether or not he retained the building.

NEED TO VACATE

However, where a theatre operator vacates the premises at any time before midnight of the day the lease expires, he is not liable for payment of rent during the following term. Yet mere notification given to the landlord by a theatre operator that he intends to vacate the premises, does not relieve the latter from liability for payment of rent for the complete following term, providing he holds over and retains possession of the premises after midnight of the day on which the lease term terminates. (33 Pa. Super. Ct. 283).

Also, numerous courts have held employers bound on a year's employment contract, where an employee, who had been hired for a year, was permitted to continue work after expiration of the year's contract.

CONTRACTS MADE WITH EMPLOYES

WITH RESPECT to sale, lease, rental, insurance and the like contracts an employer always is responsible for the acts which its representative commits within the scope of the employment. Moreover, a general authority to transact business may be conferred purposely or unintentionally on a representative, under which circumstances the firm is liable for contracts made with theatre owners.

However, the liability of an employer for the contracts made by its agent cannot be determined merely by the authority which the representative says he possesses. This is true because controversies of this nature are determined by the courts only after a very thorough investigation of how the theatre owner became informed of the agent's authority to represent his employer in the particular transaction.

VERBAL CONTRADICTIONS

Frequently, a representative of a firm makes certain verbal statements which are directly contradictory to the contents of the written agreement and which are supposed to be authorized by the firm. Later when litigation arises the complaining party may introduce testimony pertaining to these verbal statements and expect to be awarded a favorable verdict because of this testimony. However, the courts have repeatedly held that where verbal statements merely contradict the written statements of a contract, evidence of these oral statements will not be admitted, and the litigation must be decided strictly in accordance with the written parts of the contract.

HONESTY OF PARTIES PRESUMED

THE LAW ALWAYS presumes every person to be honest and trustworthy until proven to the contrary. For instance, very often the character of merchandise purchased by a theatre owner is such that the latter is compelled to rely upon the honesty of the manufacturer to supply the proper goods. Under these circumstances the court will imply a warranty on the part of the seller that he will supply merchandise reasonably fit in consideration of the price paid. Also, the courts always presume that both buyer and seller fully intended, when the contract was made, to fulfill the various obligations, but any proof is admissible which tends to disprove this presumption or unlawfulness of the contract.

IMPLIED OBLIGATION

Very often litigations between theatre owners and sellers hinge on the legality of guarantees. Generally speaking, the difference between an express contract and an implied contract is that in the former the parties agree on their obligations, whereas an implied contract is a result of the peculiar relation of the parties. In other words, the courts may imply an obligation, although neither party has expressly agreed to perform a definite act.

It is important to know that no particular form or arrangement of words is necessary to constitute a valid express guarantee. Any positive assertion regarding the quality of a product is sufficient to make the manufacturer liable, provided the statements are made by a person having proper authority to bind the seller and the statements are relied upon by the buyer.

RECENT DECISION

For illustration, in a quite recently decided leading case the court said:

"It has been rightfully held and has been uniformly adopted law that a statement made at the time of a sale is a warranty, provided it appears on the evidence to have been so intended by both the buyer and the seller and the buyer relied upon such statement."

Consequently, in view of this established law, a seller may make any absurd and unreasonable guarantee for which he is responsible, if the theatre owner relies on the guarantee. However, the seller positively is not bound by the warranty if the buyer is well versed and knows that the statements are not true. Also, a guarantee given after the contract of sale is made is not effective, because such a guarantee is not based upon valid consideration.

"SILENT GUARANTEE"

Still another important point of the law is that a seller may be liable on a guarantee simply because he remains silent when in fact he rightfully should speak up and explain certain things regarding the merchandise.

For example, in a very recent leading case (134 A. 62), a higher court held a seller bound by an implied guarantee, where it was proved that the buyer was deceived because the seller failed to impart information of known defects in a machine. This court said:

"A seller of merchandise may not do anything to conceal from the buyer a material fact affecting it, or say or do anything to divert or forestall an intended inquiry by him, or deliberately hide defects, for in so doing he is not merely remaining silent, but is taking active steps to mislead. So the surrounding circumstances may be such that the effect of his silence is actually to produce a false impression in the mind of the vendee (buyer), and the making of an agreement, or doing of some other act, may it itself lead the buyer to believe that a certain fact exists and so amount to an affirmation of it. So the seller may stand in such relationship of trust and confidence

ESSENTIALS OF A VALID CONTRACT

By M. MARVIN BERGER
MEMBER NEW YORK BAR

IN MY ARTICLE of last month I dealt with one of the requirements of some types of contracts—the requirement that certain agreements must be in writing. To meet the acid test of a contract—that is, its enforceability in a court of law—certain other essentials must be complied with. Briefly stated, they are:

1. The parties to a contract must, in the eyes of the law, be capable of contracting. Persons regarded as incapable of entering into a binding agreement are those who have been legally declared insane. In addition, the contracts of lunatics not legally declared insane and of drunkards, whose insanity or intoxication prevents them from understanding the nature of their acts at the time of the making of a contract, may be unenforceable.

In some states married women may not enter into certain forms of contracts, generally contracts with their husbands, and surety agreements. Persons under age may make contracts, but they are privileged to annul them during minority or upon attaining majority, in which event enforcement cannot be had by the other party.

2. The subject matter of the contract must be lawful. A contract to do anything which is contrary to law or against public policy is unenforceable. And so, a gambling contract, an agreement to commit a crime, or an agreement exacting an usurious rate of interest (to mention but a few illegal contracts) cannot be sued upon.

3. There must be a meeting of the minds of the parties upon the terms of the contract—that is to say, they must agree upon the same thing. A contract usually comes into being as the result of one party making an offer to a second party, and the second party accepting the offer and communicating his acceptance to the first party before the offer is withdrawn. The acceptance will not give rise to an agreement if it attempts to vary the terms of the offer.

For example, if A offers to sell B an automobile for $100 and B accepts on condition that A reduce the price to $90, no contract has been made. Instead, we have a new offer by B which must be accepted by A before a contract comes into being.

The minds of the parties do not meet if either of the parties is induced to enter into an agreement through the use by the other party of fraud, duress or undue influence, or, under certain circumstances, if the contract was made as the result of mistake by one or both of the parties.

4. There must be a consideration for the agreement. A mere promise to do something is not a contract unless there is given to the party making the promise a consideration or inducement for making the promise. This inducement may take the form of something done, given or promised to be done or given by the party to whom the promise is made, to the party making the promise. The consideration must be of some value, it must be legal and must not be impossible to perform.

By the statement that the consideration must be of some value, it is not meant that the consideration must equal the promise in value. In many contracts, for example, we find a person agreeing to do something "in consideration of the sum of one dollar." When the party to whom the promise is made will do something which he is not obliged to do, or refrain from doing something which he is not obliged to refrain from doing, a consideration for the promise is set up.

And so, when A promises B five dollars if B agrees not to exhibit double features at his theatre for a period of six months, and B carries out his part of the agreement, he may collect from A. In this instance, B's promise not to show double features for the specified period is the consideration for A's promise to pay B five dollars.

A past consideration will not support a promise. For example, if A finds a lost article and returns it to B, and B promises to pay A a reward, A cannot recover the reward since the consideration for B's promise lies in the past. Again, the consideration for a promise cannot be something which the person giving the consideration is already bound to do.

For instance, if A has agreed to repair B's projection machine for $100 and when the job is half completed demands another $100 to finish the work, the promise of B to pay the additional $100 cannot be enforced. The reason for this is that the consideration for B's promise; i. e., completion of the repairs, is something which A was already obligated to do.

THE TREND IN REPRODUCTION METHODS

By AARON NADELL

A review of today's changes in sound technique, augmented by descriptions of equipment now available for use in the theatre

LIGHTNESS, small size, low cost and low operating expense are the outstanding objectives of recent changes in theatre sound apparatus. Developments relating more directly to the quality of sound drawn from the equipment have followed substantially along the same lines: the benefits of a broader range of frequency response have been made available at a minimum of cost and re-wiring. These improvements have been made possible only by virtue of changes in almost all of the component parts which, in their aggregate, constitute a theatre sound system.

The trend and effect of many recent developments can be visualized by a reader who may not have been so fortunate as to have seen some of the latest models, if that reader cares to call to mind the very similar development of radio receivers. Thus in, say, 1922, a home radio receiver would have approximately the following appearance: A box, containing the tuning element; another box, containing an amplifier; a speaker, a storage battery, B-batteries, C-batteries, a battery charger. In installation, this equipment called for a convenient layout of its component parts, and for suitable connecting wires. In operation it required the manipulating of a number of controls, and careful periodic check of battery currents and voltages.

A 1928 sound system consisted of a number of boxes or panels, with suitable batteries or motor-generators, all of which had to be distributed in convenient locations and wired together. The compactness and simplicity of a modern radio is realized today in such a sound reproduction system as one consisting in a single cabinet, complete, including monitor, mounted on the wall between the two projection ports and operated by a single switch. Today the one cabinet can contain every part of the sound system except the two projector attachments and the stage speakers, and it can supply without further complications the power to light the exciting lamps and to bias the photoelectric cells. Such extreme simplicity would have been impossible in 1928 for the excellent reason that the component parts by means of which it was obtained did not then exist.

The idea of simplification has extended even to those improvements in sound quality which are commonly mentioned under trade names such as "wide range," "full range," etc. These improvements can now be had much more easily than was possible a year ago. Major branches of theatre sound equipment which have benefited by recent improvements are mentioned, and the changes described, in the paragraphs to follow.

DISC PICKUP

Any theatre can now obtain a disc reproducer of especially true fidelity. The fact that certain crystals generate electric current when subjected to pressure or bending, has been utilized in the construction of a pickup of remarkably light weight and faithful response. It costs less than the better grade theatre pickups that used to be available, despite the fact that those earlier ones were not capable of the same high-quality output. However, it needs somewhat more amplification, which in any given given theatre may or may not be available, and being of high impedance, must be coupled to the low-impedance input of the average theatre amplifier through a suitable transformer.

MICROPHONE PICKUP

Crystals similar to those used for the most modern disc reproducer can also be designed to serve as microphones, and such microphones are now made commercially. In contrast to the conditions of a year or two ago, when the conventional double-button carbon "mike" was the only announcing instrument within the reach of the average theatre, manufacturers are now offering a wide variety of microphones suited to every stage show, announcement, lobby or ballyhoo purpose.

Condenser microphones are obtainable at competitive prices. They give excellent quality without the hiss of the carbon type, and are sensitive to distant sounds, which makes them exceptionally well suited to concealment in footlights or behind stage drapery. The "ribbon" or "velocity" microphone, which has recently replaced the condenser "mike" in some recording studios, is now also within reach of the average theatre, and lapel microphones of carbon construction have been offered during the year just past. In this matter the theatre is today confronted by an almost embarrassment of riches. No type of microphone is now priced so high as to be beyond the reach of very moderate-sized houses.

FILM PICKUP

Selenium type photocells are still undergoing more or less experimental use in a few theatres, but have not won very wide acceptance. Interesting changes, however, have taken place in other portions of the film reproducing assembly. B-batteries have become increasingly unpopular. Few modern manufacturers use them, preferring to bias the photocell by means of a d. c. line drawn from the same rectifier that supplies plate power to the system's amplifying tubes. Some manufacturers of older types of equipment are now offering to modify existing apparatus to precisely the same purpose. The changes required are extremely simple and inexpensive. The small expense is not only more than paid for by the saving in B-batteries, but is further justified by eliminating low or noisy batteries as one of the ever-present menaces to a good show.

DEVELOPMENTS OF even greater interest have modified earlier practice with respect to exciter lamps. Some manufacturers now light the exciter with a. c., so as to preclude the possibility of any 120-cycle hum that might result by filtering the appropriate frequencies within the amplifier. This procedure effects quite a sizeable economy, since storage batteries, rectifiers or generators capable of supplying several amperes of current to each exciter must be of fairly large size, while the filters that are used with either rectifier or generator grow disproportionately costly as the amperage of the current to be filtered is increased. However, exciting lamps cannot be lighted with a. c. without filtering and, therefore, losing certain frequencies of sound, and manufacturers who supply equipment using this method of exciter supply commonly offer the alternative—a rectifier-d. c. supply—to theatres that consider the difference in quality worth the additional expense. Here again the variety of equipment at the disposal of the theatre has been widened, enabling the exhibitor to suit has own needs more closely and economically than has before been possible. In addition, it has become possible, using d. c. exciter supply, to cut down the current required by approximately one-third, thus minimizing filter and power costs for d. c. supply.

The photoelectric cell amplifier is not widely favored; some manufacturers prefer the simplicity of the coupling transformer. On the other hand, this amplifier has been improved by adoption of the screen-grid tube, one of which does the work of two tubes of the older type. Possible trouble with these amplifiers may also now be guarded against by somewhat increased use of a simple changeover system that permits the photocell of either projector to operate, in case of emergency, through the cell amplifier on the other.

The sound-on-film drive, or attachment, has been modified recently by widespread substitution of the curved sound-gate for the vertical type preferred in nearly all earlier models. The friction-clutch type of driving mechanism seems now to be in somewhat greater favor than the spring-filtered flywheel. The use of a second sound sprocket, as additional precaution against flutter, has become increasingly popular with the increasing trend toward reproduction of frequencies above 5,000.

The synchronous-type a. c. motor, controlled in speed by the frequency of the power line, appears to be firmly entrenched. Nearly all systems use it. Such speed control devices as are still supplied by makers of sound equipment are infinitely simpler in design and construction than the multi-tube contrivances of earlier days.

TUBES

Recent improvements in tubes could not be described adequately in an article many times the length of this one. Books have been written about them. The process is still proceeding at a pace that dismays many tube manufacturers. But more compact and far less expensive amplifiers have resulted from these new tubes, which sometimes make it possible for one tube to do the work of three or four of earlier design.

In the matter of rectifying tubes, the mercury-vapor variety has won distinct favor as compared with the vacuum rectifier, and special adapters to make possible its substitution are now used in nearly all installations that were designed for the more costly varieties of vacuum rectifiers. The vacuum tube as a rectifier still holds its own, however, for low current.

Amplifying tubes have been improved to the point where the work that formerly was possible only to a large and bulky tube using relatively high filament power, can now be performed by a much smaller article. The newest tubes are extremely compact. Some of the most recent design incorporate what are, in effect, two or three tubes, performing two or three different functions, within one glass envelope.

AMPLIFIERS

The effect of these tube changes upon amplifier design is dramatized by a physical comparison between some of the latest and some of the earliest amplifiers. The 20 watts or so of speech power that once required a double rack reaching from floor to ceiling and weighing (when fully equipped with its apparatus) well over a ton, may now be provided by a little suitcase amplifier small enough and light enough for a school-boy to lift and carry away. And this difference in physical characteristics is no greater than the corresponding difference in price and operating costs. Amplifiers of excellent quality, suitable to a large theatre, can now be bought for not much more than a set of tubes, for some theatre amplifiers, cost back in 1929.

Taking advantage of this difference in price and size, an increasing number of theatres are availing themselves of the advantage of a double amplifying channel as precaution against breakdown, a precaution once barred to some of them by the mere space required, and to all except the largest and wealthiest by its cost.

Amplifiers have been improved in quality of response as well as with respect to compactness and price. Reproduction up to the highest frequencies now recorded on commercial film is well inside the upper limit of most present-day theatre amplifiers (though not always of the speakers). Even the most reputable makes of earlier amplifiers could not invariably reproduce the same broad range.

Range of volume is as important to good sound as range of frequency response. The lower limit of volume is, of course, that which is barely audible; while the full power of a large orchestra is within the compass of few, if any, present-day theatre systems. Increased reserve of volume is today more practicable than ever before, in view of the comparative cheapness and simplicity of the amplifiers now obtainable, and much of the modification directed during the year just past at increasing the range of frequency response, has carried with it, as a matter of course, a substantial increase in the range of volume available to the theatres.

SPEAKERS

No portion of theatre sound equipment has undergone more drastic overhauling than the loudspeaker system. The response of the speaker has long been the limiting factor that prevented reproduction of a wider band of frequencies. During the year just past that limit has been almost wholly removed. Precisely as in the case of microphones, the variety of speakers and flexibility of speaker arrangements now available have been vastly increased, and prices have been materially lessened.

IN THE BROADEST sense there are today two different speaker arrangements for covering an extended frequency band. One is to use a single speaker to cover the full available range of frequencies, from extreme lows to extreme highs (one hears at least the laboratory claim of from 16 to 16,000 cycles!). The other and more common procedure is to retain the existing speakers and add to them so-called tweeters and woofers—the tweeters covering those frequencies above the range of the older speakers, and the woofers reproducing the extreme lows. Many varieties of this arrangement are used. Sometimes the existing speakers are removed and the tweeters and woofers alone relied upon to reproduce the entire sound spectrum. Sometimes the woofer is omitted and the tweeter alone is added to the speaker system already in use.

By virtue of this recent development in reproduction technique, employing speakers that respond to only a chosen band of frequencies (as opposed to the use of a group of speakers designed to cover as wide a band as possible) it is now possible for any is equipped with a band-pass filter, composed of suitable inductances or condensers, or both, often tuned by a resistor.

The most common method of using tuned speaker arrangements, consisting of two or more speakers each of which covers a separate frequency band, is to include filter circuits that prevent loss of energy. Obviously it is inefficient to waste amplification in providing a loudspeaker with power of a frequency to which it cannot respond. Therefore the amplifier output circuit is split into parallel low-frequency and high-frequency circuits, or sometimes into low, middle and high, if three sets of speakers are used. Each of these circuits is provided with a band-pass filter, composed of inductances or condensers, or both, often tuned by a resistor.

The purpose of the filter is to insure that no speaker receives energy of a frequency to which it cannot respond. By inclusion of suitable controls in these circuits, it becomes possible to vary the volume of each frequency band and thus to attain the most pleasing combination of sound for a given acoustic condition. Although something of the same sort was attempted in the very early days of sound, with so-called "bass" and "tenor" speakers, the range of frequencies involved was extremely narrow. The flexibility of the present arrangement in suiting every possible auditorium condition has never before been even remotely approached. Frequency bands covering thousands of cycles can now be adjusted with the utmost nicety to compensate for a wide variety of acoustic defects.

However, where such adjustment is not needed, the use of frequency filters can be avoided (though of course the expense of the filter is small). Tweeters are available which will not draw any energy to which they cannot respond. These are based upon the reverse of the principle used in the crystal microphone and disc reproducer. In the case of those instruments, a crystal, distorted as to shape, generated electric current. The identical crystal, built to serve as a loudspeaker, will change its own shape—vibrate—if current is supplied to it. At the present time such speakers are available for the higher sound bands only. Used as a tweeter with existing speakers or with woofers, a speaker of this kind requires no frequency filter because energy of a frequency to which it cannot respond will not flow through it.

With so wide a choice of speaker arrangements it is understandable that some manufacturers speak of their work in widening the range of frequency response as specifically made for each individual theatre. Problems of distribution and other acoustic conditions determine the speaker set-up that will be most advantageous in the case of any given auditorium.

There is one precaution to be taken by an exhibitor planning speaker changes without technical advice. The efficiency of speakers varies widely. This has nothing to do with the range of frequency response. It is simply a matter of what percentage of the electrical energy supplied to it the speaker is able to convert into sound energy. A new speaker or speaker arrangement may yield better quality than the old one, but be less efficient, and thus require increased amplification for the same volume of sound. Unless the theatre has large reserves of amplification this possibility should be remembered when speaker changes are made, otherwise the purchase of new speakers may also require the purchase of a new amplifier, even though a different amplifier might not be otherwise indicated.

If changes are intended to increase the range in volume as well as the range in frequency, the efficiency of the speakers chosen is a matter of first importance. When speakers are changed every reasonable effort should be made to obtain new models that are more, not less, efficient than the old ones. But where this cannot be done, a new amplifier is not likely to increase your expenditure much, compared with the value of the improvement.

POWER SUPPLIES

The trend in power supplies is entirely away from the earlier arrangements under electrogram

A. C. RIPPLE—When power for arc lamps is supplied by a bulb rectifier or synchronous converter, the a. c. ripple will cause a d. c. meter to indicate approximately 15% less than current actually flowing. If there is penciling of the negative carbon, try using carbon trim of the next larger size.

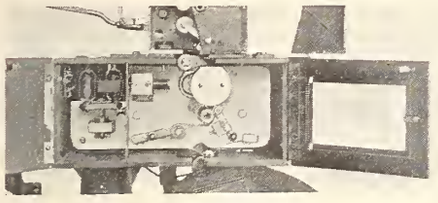
which power was furnished by separate batteries, motor-generators or rectifiers. Batteries seem definitely in disfavor; they are not included in any of the latest equipment known to this writer, and have been almost completely replaced in installations that once used them, by rectifiers or motor-generators. The separate rectifier, or motor-generator, however, is itself in less use today. In most of the newer apparatus the power supply is integrally built into the same small and compact amplifiers already described. The increasing use of mercury-vapor rectifiers in theatre equipment, and the decline in amperage necessary in the case of d. c.-operated exciters, as well as increased recourse to a. c. exciter power, would seem to indicate that sound systems of the future will tend to consist only of single panel, embodying within itself all the amplification and power changes necessary, in attachments for the projectors, and stage speakers.

THE TREND IN COSTS

The cost of equipment has been mentioned from time to time during this brief review, but perhaps the full picture has not been conveyed. At the beginning of the discussion comparison was made with the complexities of an early radio receiver and the simple and compact radio (much more complex, however, from an engineering point of view) that is in the reader's home today. That comparison can now be extended. In 1923 the reader may have paid nine and a half dollars for a 201-type tube that can be bought anywhere now for 35 cents; and the $45 that his first home loudspeaker may have cost him, will today buy quite a good radio, with speaker built in and complete with tubes. Sound equipment prices since 1928 have followed quite a similar trend.

But sound equipment can never be made quite as compact as a modern radio, since it presumably will always be divided between two projectors, an amplifying panel, and speakers backstage; and sound equipment will never decline in price to quite the same degree that home radios did unless the country builds a million theatres and manufactures the talking picture apparatus in mass production. Engineering improvements in the equipment will doubtless continue, and some further increase in simplicity is still in prospect, but there would seem good reason to believe that existing prices are at the present time very close to bottom.



IN THE CURRENT SOUND EQUIPMENT MARKET

SOUNDHEADS

Goodall Electric Mfg. Company

THREE TYPES of soundheads are manufactured by this company—a standard professional head, a model for Powers A and B projectors, and a 35-millimeter portable projector-sound system.

The Goodall standard head is equipped with self aligning ball bearings throughout and V-belt drives. The aperture is of hardened steel and also contains the photocell in an oil-proof house. The film is held in alignment with split guide rollers and one pressure roller. A double exciter lamp assembly is together with the optical system. The "jerk" of the lower take up does not effect the sound sprocket due to a special cushioned take-up roller. The entire inner assembly is removable by loosening two screws without effecting the sound sprocket drive. The standard model soundheads are furnished for Simplex, Motiograph and Powers projectors.

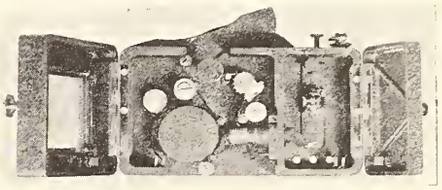
The Powers soundhead is mounted on the Powers base directly back of the projector head. This soundhead is 4 inches high and 6 inches long. It uses standard photocells and exciter lamps. A large fly wheel filter and supported on ball bearings is connected directly through to the sound sprocket. The excited lamp and lens system is protected by a ventilated removable shield. The photocell is housed in a solid hard steel tube which also serves as a curved aperture for the light beam. An extended framing lever is added. The mechanism is driven by a V-belt direct to the constant speed motor.

The portable equipment, designed for a throw of from 40 to 60 feet, has an intermittent of standard type running in oil, uses standard photocell and excited lamp, employs a friction disc to take up slack in film, ventilates the lamp housing by means of a centrifugal fan, while the projector mechanism is ventilated and insulated. The projector is 18 x 18 x 8 inches and weighs 50 pounds. The amplifier and speaker are housed in one case, the projection and sound apparatus in another. Volume is declared to be sufficient for a 500-seat auditorium.

Martin Band Instrument Company

GEARS AND FILM pressure gate are eliminated in the soundhead offered by this manufacturer. Back surface of film slides over turtle arrangement which houses the photocell. Specifications include ball bearing impedance roller, glass doors, all connections to front of soundhead, drive and absorption through flywheel connected by endless woven belts. Finish is in black crackle. Included is amplification system designed to cover the full available frequency range.

Picture-Fone Corporation



SPECIFICATIONS of the soundhead attachment marketed by this manufacturer are as follows:

Head of heavy cast aluminum, lathe-turned. Bearings of annular ball type with grease retainers. Shafts treated with chrome-nickel steel. Light gate made of tool steel, designed flat to eliminate friction of curves, and undercut to avoid scratching of film. Sound gate, opening wide to facilitate threading of film, uses standard projector pads and springs.

The system includes an amplifier of triple push-pull type, with either fixed bias or self-bias. Tubes are vertical. (No screen grid tubes are used.)

Scott Ballantyne Company

SOUND-ON-FILM reproducers available from this company are manufactured by the Largen Manufacturing Company of Creighton, Neb. There are models designed for Simplex, Powers, Motiograph and Fulco projectors. The head has a special filter device designed to overcome effect of imperfect sprocket holes, a condenser and objective lens system used in connection with a mechanical confining aperture, clamp type socket for the exciter lamp with a screw adjustment, drum type film track (track mounted directly on photocell case), adjustable film guide rollers, and tension springs of spring steel.

Lincrophone Company

SOUNDHEADS designed for various projectors are produced by this manufacturer. Principal specifications include two sprockets, adjustable guide and pad rollers, helical gear drive and flywheel design eliminating weight from the soundhead shaft.

SOS Corporation

THREE SOUNDHEAD models are offered by this manufacturer, referred to as Super Cinephone, Senior De-Luxe and Standard DeLuxe. The last named has many of the technical features of the Super Cinephone, but does not employ ball bearings in its design. The Senior DeLuxe is of simplified construction with a special quick-change exciter lamp arrangement, holdback sprocket and drum-type sliding aperture, which is designed to eliminate dependence on the projector mechanism for suitable tension and adjustment. The curved aperture has flanges on both sides contributing to this effect.

The Super-Cinephone head is adapted to Simplex, Superior and Powers projectors. The motor coupling is by a system of multiple belts on a 23-pound pulley. The shaft is of alloy steel running in phosphor-bronze sleeves on ball bearings. Double bearings are used at the sound sprocket. Film travel is over a slit-block having a flat surface, with tension provided by pads similar to those employed at projection apertures. Optical system is by Bausch & Lomb with a beam adjusted to a frequency range of from 60 to 9,000 cycles.

The exciter lamp socket on this model is mounted on a resilient base, while the photocell is mounted on a four-prong base and plugs into a socket. Cell and socket are shielded. A d.c. exciter lamp ammeter with rheostat is mounted on the back plate of Simplex models. Powers models include risers, motor brackets and drives.

Weber Machine Corporation

TWO TYPES of soundheads are manufactured by this company for professional projectors, Model A and Model D. The essential difference between the Model A and Model D is that the Model A features a rotating drum for film control, while the Model D uses a fixed turtle-back. In other respects they are practically the same, both being driven direct from motor with round woven belts. The projector mechanism is driven from the soundhead by a silent chain. The optical unit is of the parabolic lens type. Photoelectric cell is of the caesium type, Model A using cartridge mounting, Model D using pronged socket.

Syncrofilm soundhead for Simplex.

The Syncrofilm Model E portable projector consists of two units. The projector is of suitcase type. Mechanism is mounted in a cast aluminum case 8½x21x21 inches. Motor is 110-volt Universal constant speed governor type (a.c. or other voltage motors can be supplied if required). Projection lamps are Mazda pre-focused base, 500, 750, and 1,000-watt, 115-volt. The optical and lens system consists of a vitrified silvered reflector, ground and polished condenser lenses, and a high grade projection lens system mounted in a focusing jacket. Lenses are quarter size.

Soundheads for Holmes, Acme and other makes of silent 35-millimeter portable projectors are designed to meet the requirements of the projector on which they are mounted and feature simplicity.

SOUND SYSTEMS

Cincinnati Time Recorder Company

FOUR MODELS of reproduction systems are marketed by this manufacturer, adapted to capacities from 300 to 2,500. They include speakers as well as amplification and soundheads.

The soundhead has a case-hardened photoelectric cell housing eliminating aperture plates and tension pads. Warped film is automatically flattened at the sound aperture. Exciter lamp mounting has a three-way micrometer adjustment.

Other specifications provide for a 45-pound flywheel with double fabric belt-drive, a hold-back sprocket, exciter lamp shield which in case of film breakage prevents contact with lamp. The head may be installed on standard projectors, including Simplex, Kaplan, Powers, Motiograph and Superior.

All amplifiers are completely self-contained, a.c.-operated. The built-in power unit eliminates batteries. Each amplifier is constructed of matched parts. Double-channel units are available for all models.

Stage equipment includes the latest developments in speakers using full-range units. Each theatre is surveyed in advance and the particular equipment best suited to its needs is recommended.

RCA Victor

FIVE TYPES of RCA Victor reproducing equipment are available for installation in all types of theatres and screening rooms. Each type has a specific application as follows:

Standard super-size, for theatres having a maximum of 4,000 seats and a cubical volume not exceeding 1,100,000 cubic feet; standard large size, for theatres up to 2,500 seats and volume of 600,000 cubic feet; standard small size, for theatres seating up to 1,400 and having a cubical volume of 200,000 cubic feet; special deluxe size, for theatres up to 800 seats and having a cubical volume of 120,000 cubic feet; and special size, for theatres under 600 seats and less than 85,000 cubic feet in volume. For theatres of cubical volumes larger than 1,100,000 cubic feet additional power amplifiers are added to the super-size equipment.

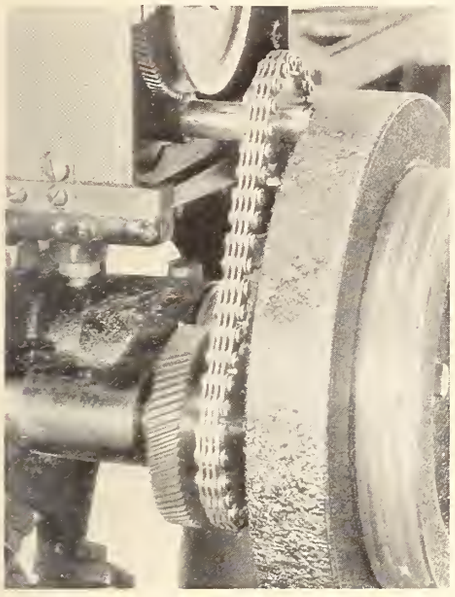
All of the above equipments, with the exception of the special size, use the latest RCA Victor Photophone Type PS-24 soundhead. This soundhead uses a rotary stabilizer sound take-off instead of the conventional sound gate; ball bearings throughout, and built-in motor drive. The type PS-24 soundhead is supplied for attaching to Simplex and Motiograph projectors.

The special size equipment employs a conventional type of soundhead using a sound gate and is belt-driven to the constant speed sprocket shaft. Two types are supplied, for Powers and Simplex projectors.

Amplifiers and all a.c.-operated power supply units for each type of equipment are mounted on a single amplifier rack. With the exception of the power or output amplifiers, each of the amplifier racks for the larger equipments are identical, including provisions for special inputs from either a 500-ohm or 250-ohm source, field supply for the loudspeakers, individual 10-volt, 5 ampere d.c. exciter lamp supply panels for each soundhead, and terminal boards for connecting the external circuits. The amplifiers for the two smaller equipments are identical, but the special deluxe equipment rack uses 10 volt, 5 ampere d.c. exciter lamp supply units, whereas the smallest uses 27 volt, 1 ampere d.c. units.

Loudspeakers of the directional baffle type, employing a dynamic mechanism, are employed as standard with all types of reproducing equipment.

Platter Sound Products



A SOUND SYSTEM complete from head to speakers is offered by this manufacturer. The heads are designed for Simplex, Power or Kaplan projectors, while special adaptors are available for other projectors.

The light gate assembly is of adjustable type, optical system designed to meet requirements of extended frequency recording, and an endless chain drive. The photocell is immediately accessible for removal. Main sound sprocket drive is mounted on ball bearings, and absorption is through a triple-belt flywheel weighing 19 pounds.

Speakers are of heavy-duty type in combination with tweeters. The horns are of direction design directly adapted to the speaker units.

This manufacturer also produces a portable sound-on-film projector with professional intermittent, automatic fire shutter for accommodation to various sizes of lens, forced fan cooling system, portable speaker, soundboard and amplification, standard photocell mounting and detachable magazine. All controls are mounted in the projector case.

Western Electric

COMPLETE sound reproduction apparatus from soundhead to speakers is unified in the theatre sound system of this manufacturer. New features of this system are prominently represented in extension of the frequency range, the technical provisions for which may also be adapted to installations previously made.

AMPLIFIERS

Clough-Brengle Company

TWO SERIES of amplifiers are manufactured by this company for theatre use. Both groups are designed to meet reproduction conditions imposed by extension of the frequency range.

One has an output of 15 watts, the other 27 watts. No. 2A3 output tubes are used in single or double push-pull. Cathode circuits are arranged to eliminate cathode leakage. Units are constructed for either single- or double-channel amplifiers with built-in control panel, including all switches, meter and monitor speaker. A built-in output transformer is designed to permit wide latitude in selection of speakers. Low-loss photocell cable with bayonet connectors is supplied. Speakers by this manufacturer are also available.

sound picture amplifier, recently designed for adaptation to "wide range" sound systems. It is all a.c.-operated, and the power transformer is located in a position to prevent entrance of stray currents from it to the photocell circuit. Tubes are in the open. The unit is provided with a main volume control and changeover switch. Above the volume control is a pilot light. Adjustments for the exciter lamps and photocell voltage are on the control side.

This amplifier is deigned to operate with any soundhead. It has output impedances of 8, 16 and 500 ohms. All a.c. wires, cell and exciter wires are shielded and grounded. No d.c. current passes directly through the primary winding of audio transformers. Tubes used are three 56s, two 2A5s, and one 5Z3, developing from 8 to 10 watts output.

Lincrophone Company

THE AMPLIFIER for theatre use produced by this manufacturer is of five-stage, push-pull type with 250 tubes in the output. The design incorporates relatively low resistance input, a T-type pad for volume control, photocell balancers, exciter lamp meter and rheostat, and dual switches that break both exciter and photocell lines.

The unit is housed in a black crystalline-finish cabinet and uses nine tubes. Output is 15 watts, and the output impedances are 2, 4, 8 and 500 ohms.

In addition to this product are directional theatre horns and speakers rated at a high-frequency response of 10,000 cycles.

Goodall Electric Mfg. Company

THE THEATRE amplifiers developed by this manufacturer are of three types, both single- and double-channel. No pre-amplifier is required. One model uses two No. 45 tubes in push-pull, another uses No. 47 tubes, and the third employs No. 2A3 tubes in push-pull in the output.

A special tone control is provided to compensate for the voice frequencies. Four shielded cables with polarity plugs provide connections to the soundheads for exciter lamp and photocell connections. Separate fuses and switches are provided for the exciter lamp circuit and the amplifier tubes. The exciter lamp circuit is equipped with a changeover switch, voltmeter and rheostat for controlling the voltages.

P. E. cell voltage control is provided. The master volume control is located in the center. A lever switch provides instant change-over from film, microphone and disc. Auditorium volume control can be furnished.

ed frequency reproduction. Outside matching transformers are eliminated. Photocell voltages are automatically controlled. Provision is made for semi-automatic changeover, and there is a visual volume indicator for each projector. Use of a.c. or d.c. exciter lamp supply is optional. The conduit box is equipped with knockouts for all connections.

Webster Electric Company

A SOUND-ON-FILM amplifier system is offered by this manufacturer consisting in the main amplifier unit equipped with duplicate amplifier chassis, each forming an independent amplification channel (Model GRS-72-D dual channel). Between the amplifiers is located the power supply and control panel combined with a mounting frame. An individual pre-amplifier is provided for each projector, the main fader and a dummy fader with a coupling drive between them.

The pre-amplifier is of a single-stage type, using the 56-type tube. This may be mounted to the wall by means of adjustable brackets, which permits the use of a short cell coupling lead. The output is coupled to the main fader by a 500-ohm shielded line. The fader is of constant-impedance T-type, coupled to the main amplifier through a matching transformer.

ABILITY: A BASIS FOR WAGE SCALE AGREEMENTS

THE TIME is not far distant when exhibitors and projectionists will again confront each other in the discussion of wage scale contracts. Many present agreements will expire this year and be up for renewal upon the same or another basis. Naturally the men will wish to gain all they can. Naturally, also, exhibitors will wish to secure projection as cheaply as possible. And there is the rub.

As these discussions approach, exhibitors may well consider the meaning of "cheap." It has as many possible interpretations as a chameleon has colors. There are all possible shades of difference in the work of different projectionists. The high paid man may really be cheap and the low paid one very dear.

Through all the years of motion picture industry history, far too little attention has been paid to expert ability in projection. That failure has cost huge sums of money in unnecessarily rapid deterioration of costly projection equipment, and in box office losses chargeable directly to poor projection.

Projectionists seeking employment, too seldom approach the exhibitor or manager in an attempt to sell their services upon a basis of expert ability. It is an astonishing fact that exhibitors and managers very seldom make much effort to examine into the knowledge and ability of projectionists seeking employment. Unions have been known to resent attempts of managers to inquire into the ability of members sent to their theatres to take a position as projectionist. Unions, with few exceptions, make little or no effort to approach exhibitors in the attempt to secure increased pay or renewal of present contracts with arguments in any degree based upon knowledge of and ability in the work. Instead, in many cases at least, the whole argument is based upon theatre seating capacity, but without any assurance that men of superior ability will be assigned.

Freely granted that large theatres may ordinarily be expected to possess ability to pay more than smaller ones, still why not base the argument for higher pay in large theatres upon an agreement to supply to them the very best men available? Would it not seem a far better basis for argument?

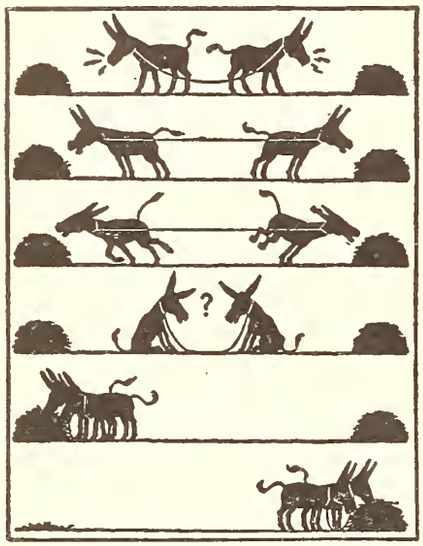
Basically it is quite true that theatres of any size should expect to be supplied with men of high class ability. However, in projection, as in almost all other walks of life, there is a difference in ability as between different men. We cannot deal entirely with things as they should be, but rather with them as they are found in the affairs of life.

The coming wage scale discussions will occur under entirely new conditions. Does it not sound reasonable to union men that it might be easier, because more reasonable, to interject the item ability rather strongly into the coming arguments? The modern projectionist in a large theatre has under his charge thousands of dollars worth of equipment, the speed of deterioration and cost of upkeep of which will in very large degree be dependent upon the amount of knowledge and expert skill applied to it by the projectionist. That is indisputable.

The excellence of the show is directly dependent, both in sound and picture, upon the expert skill and care applied to projection by the man or men in charge. That too is known fact. It is not a subject amenable to argument. Every union has some men that can and do deliver superior results, and could and would do even better did they feel their knowledge and skill had recognized money value. Some unions have men of high grade ability, but wage scale leveling does not encourage them to use that ability to its limit, nor does it encourage men of less ability to improve their knowledge and their work. They "get the scale," so why worry. That is the "argument" some of them have presented to me personally.

Gentlemen, ever since 1884 I have been a union man, both in practice and in principle. However, I have never held it to be good unionism to hold that everything a union may do is necessarily good. I have always held and probably always will hold that union procedure, being man-made, is susceptible to improvement. I do not hold him to be a good union man who keeps his mouth shut when things are done which are obviously wrong, or when the procedure being used might be improved. That is, to my way of thinking, just a wee bit quently jumped in and expressed my views. cowardly. I have therefore, not infre- I have at times been roundly cursed for so doing, not exactly because I was wrong, but for the reason that my views would call for change, make the work of union leaders perhaps less easy, and—well, anyhow who was I who dared tell those in power what they should do?

Well, gentlemen, I'm not telling them, but merely suggesting procedure along the lines of common sense. Exhibitors would feel much more willing to pay good wages for men if they could feel assured that the highly paid ones possessed real ability.



Mark you well, I am not trying to tell you exhibitors would rush up, throw their arms around your necks, kiss you on both cheeks and demand the privilege of paying even men of unusual ability high wages. As a matter of fact, I don't think they would quite do that. I do say, however, that if unions made some real effort to establish high standards of workmanship among their members, and based pay, at least to some extent, upon ability, it would be more reasonable for exhibitors to be not nearly so ready to fight reasonable wage scales. Or if it be found impossible to establish definite grades among union members, at least some real effort could be made to assure exhibitors that the higher-scale theatres will have assigned to them the best men the union has, and that assurance could be incorporated in the contract. As to a flat scale for all, it is the most discouraging thing imaginable, for the reason that it holds out absolutely no inducement for men to improve themselves in knowledge, which means, in effect, in ability to improve their work.

SOURCE OF FILM DIMENSIONS

JOHN L. RAMDELL of Buffalo, N. Y., asks, "You being a source of general as well as specific information, having failed elsewhere, may I ask you to tell me just who it was fixed the width of motion picture film at 1 3/8 inches, and who determined the dimensions of the pictures printed thereon for so many years? May I also ask whether or not you believe much further improvements will reach us in the near future?"

In the June, 1932, issue of the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, in an obituary of Thomas A. Edison, it is stated on the basis of the investigations of Mr. Terry Ramsaye in his history of the motion picture, "A Million and One Nights:"

"It was not until late in 1892 that a promoter chanced upon the motion picture machine in a corner of the West Orange plant and prevailed upon Edison to let him put it on the market. The machine, in its peep-show form, went out into the world, and all over the world, beginning April, 1894. That was the Edison Kinetoscope. It presented films of the same dimensions, using the same sprocket holes and other physical characteristics as the motion picture films of today. The very size remains the same today, despite the many experiments then and since then aimed at greater areas, and was determined by the covering power of the objective of a microscope that happened to be in the plant in 1887 when the experimentation began."

That, so far as I know or can ascertain, is true concerning the width of the film itself. The frame, of course, has been altered in size to allow for the sound track. Its present dimensions have been pronounced standard by the motion picture Academy.

Yes, Friend Ramdell, there will be plenty of improvements right along—some of them in the near future. That is as it should be. However, the industry has arrived at that stage when changes have to be gradual and be adapted pretty well to the existing setup.

CROCUS CLOTH FOR CLEANING

J. M. SULLIVAN of New York City, writes, "A salesman was here yesterday and among other things tried to get our manager to buy some Crocus cloth, saying it was the best thing to use to clean electrical contacts and carbon contacts. Some years ago I wrote asking how best to clean contacts and you advised No. 00 sandpaper, except when the carbon jaws were rough and in bad condition. I have always found your advice good, including that offered in your department and books, so I've used sandpaper ever since. The salesman demonstrated the cloth and it seemed to work very well, but I would not okay its purchase until I had asked you about it."

Things change constantly, Friend Sullivan. When I gave you the advice about sandpaper it was the best there was. Later along came this Crocus cloth. It is a decided improvement on anything we have had before, including sandpaper. You will do well to have your manager lay in a supply for use in cleaning contacts, including those of the arc lamp.

EFFECT OF DIRTY LENSES

JOHN L. BURNS and T. R. Eckerson of East St. Louis, Mo., ask, "We have had a rather warm discussion as to just what the various possible effects of dirty lenses upon the screen image, so will you kindly tell us, in your Comments just what possible effects dirt on lenses may have. We shall appreciate it if you will."

This question, so far as I am able to recollect, has never been brought up exactly in this way. Therefore, after thinking the matter over carefully, I called upon the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company's Scientific Bureau. I now have before me the following:

"We have a report from Mr. Scheick on a conversation he had with you recently in which you asked him to state what the effect would be on the picture quality, of dirt on the surfaces of a projection lens. He tells us that in his reply he divided all possible kinds of dirt on the lens into two classifications, one consisting of particles that would be entirely opaque, and the other of material that would be translucent.

"He reports that he told you that the effect of any deposits that were entirely opaque would be to reduce the total screen illumination by an amount proportional to the ratio of the area covered by the opaque material to the total useful area of the lens. He also tells us that he explained that material deposited on the lens surfaces that was more or less transparent to light, would cause two effects: first, a reduction in illumination in proportion to the light absorbed by the foreign material; and second, a reduction in contrast due to light diffused in its passage through the translucent material being spread over the whole area of the screen, causing areas that should be black to appear gray, without any corresponding increase in the brightness of the light areas, thereby reducing the general contrast in the picture.

"This answer is complete. Mr. Scheick has analyzed the situation in a manner that leaves nothing to be said. He has asked us, however, to write you confirming what he said and correcting it if necessary. We have no corrections to make."

NEW SPOT EQUIPMENT

AT THE INVITATION of the Century Lighting Equipment Company of New York City, I have witnessed a practical demonstration of a new spot lamp just developed by that company. It uses either a 1,000- or a 1,500-watt mazda lamp similar to these used for motion picture projection, the filament of which is composed of tiny tungsten wire coils.

The equipment takes up no more room than the usual arc-lamp spot, is extremely mobile, can instantly be turned in any

As to results, I saw a flood projected through an open window upon a building two blocks away. Though it was only in the dusk of the evening, the flood was plainly visible. Turned upon a building about 150 feet away it showed up well. Turned into the loft of the building we were in, where it was fairly dark, it showed up very well indeed.

The lamp is equipped with an arrangement of shutters by means of which the light may be instantly made into a round spot, a flood or a slot of light either horizontal or vertical of any length desired up to the length or breadth of the spread of light in flood. In other words, a long narrow or wide line of light may at will be projected either horizontally or vertically, its dimensions susceptible to instant change either way. The spot may also be made octagonal if desired.

The light is not concentrated, with reduction of spot dimensions, hence is always of the same intensity per unit of area of space covered. There is one limitation, however. A 10-foot spot is about as small as is practicable to project for the reason that the edges of the shutters set up a sort of halation of bright blue light, which at small diameters extends so far out that most or all of the remaining distance between the shutters is covered. This does not appreciably affect any but the small Theatres using stage shows of some prespots—spots less than 10 feet in diameter. tensions would be likely to find this equipment useful in getting a brilliant light for the chorus line and picking up entrances from either side of the stage. The demonstration I witnessed was made with a 1,000-watt lamp.

PROJECTION SOCIETY SHOWS NEW LIFE

A MEETING of the American Projection Society was held in its club room recently to hear Rudolph Mehling deliver a lecture on an adapter for the new a.c. arc. The astonishing and gratifying part is that though it was one of the stormiest nights of a very stormy winter, 125 men were present—the largest number of projectionists gathered to listen to a technical talk in New York City in some years.

It surely is gratifying that interest in such matters apparently is reviving. For several years past New York City projectionists have centered their minds and activities upon almost everything in the wide world except technical discussions. It is to be hoped the society will continue the good work that seems to have been so well started under the direction of President E. H. Byrne. I am happy to encourage activities of this nature and hope to hear that projectionists of other localities also are beginning to resume technical discussions.

Among those present were H. Conrad, Lester Isaac, L. Wheeler, P. A. McGuire, J. O. Brien, W. Katz, A. Polin, S. Schnieder, H. Klein, S. Price, J. O'Keefe, J. Tietler, H. L. Cohen, B. Popkin, E. H. Byrne and C. Schnieder. I was unable to be present. The work is too heavy just now to permit my taking part in many all-night meetings, especially when the wind howls and snow fills the air. Lester Isaac and P. A. McGuire addressed the assemblage regarding the possibility of restoring the society to its old time standing. May I suggest that as a first step some means should be found for a sound, ample financial basis, also that union politics be forever forbidden. It would seem reasonable to suppose that Local 306, with union politics barred, might agree to give considerable financial aid to the organization, though that could only be aceptable under definite assurance that the society would bar any discussion of union affairs in its rooms or meetings, and that it remain immune from interference, except upon those grounds, by union officers.

What I am getting at is that by reason of the undoubted good accomplished by such educational meetings and lectures, the local could very well afford to give substantial financial aid in some form acceptable to both organizations. The society must not try to "run the union," nor the union try to run the society.

Mr. Mehling, who is well known in the projection field, has designed an adapter by means of which present d.c. reflector type low-intensity equipments may be transformed into equipment utilizing the new type d.c. arc. To accomplish the change requires only the removal of the present lamp and arc controller and substitution of the adapter. A plyer and screwdriver are all the tools necessary to accomplish the change This device, which is made by the Blue Seal Products Company, Mr. Mehling described.

The equipment is sturdy, and due to extreme sensitivity of the arc control, maintains the arc length at very nearly constant values. The control operates under only a one-fourth variation in arc voltage.

REVERSING SPROCKETS

FROM A Pennsylvania projectionist comes this query, "Is it possible to reverse an intermittent sprocket (Powers mechanism), the teeth of which are worn on one side and to use their unworn sides? What would cause one side of the screen image to be out of focus in such manner that it can be put into focus, but with result that the other side then is out? Switching lenses does not affect the trouble, which is on one projector only. Each projector is equi-distant from center line of screen."

It is possible to do as you suggest with regard to the sprocket, but I cannot recommend it. Removing and installing an intermittent sprocket is a very delicate operation, and one that I would recommend be done only at the factory or at any rate by an experienced projector repair man. If you decide to tackle it you will do well to study and closely follow instructions on page 633, volume 2 of your Bluebook.

The out-of-focus trouble evidently is not in the lens itself. It probably has its seat in the aperture plate Either one side of the film track, and therefore the tension shoe, is worn more than the other, or one side of the aperture plate is higher than the other, possibly because the bearing surfaces were not cleaned thoroughly before installation.

Using a short, steel straight-edge, test the surface of both aperture plate film tracks. If either or both are not perfectly straight and true, remove the plate and test it again. If not worn—if its film tracks are perfectly straight—then clean the rear surface and the surface it rests upon and re-install, whereupon the trouble should disappear.

If the tracks are worn out-of-true, then it will be necessary to secure a new plate and a new tension shoe, since if one is worn the other of course must be. I think this will be your answer, but if not, then advise me and I'll investigate further.

REPORT BLANKS

Some months ago Better Theatres offered to supply a book of blanks suitable for making reports to the management, free of charge to each projectionist writing us his request for such blanks, provided that there be enough requests to warrant printing them. Thus far too few projectionists have indicated that they regularly make written reports to the management. Further requests are, therefore, being awaited.

LIGHT SOURCE BRILLIANCY

IN COMPILING data for inclusion in the sixth edition of the Bluebook, now in course of preparation, I requested from the National Carbon Company engineers data as to relative brilliancy of various light sources (arcs) used in projection. The answer was prompt, courteous and informative. It reads:

"The straight high-intensity, using 16.3-millimeter trim with 120 to 125 amperes, provides about 750 to 800 candle-power per each square millimeter of crater area. The high-intensity reflector type will provide from 400 to 650 candle-power per square millimeter area, according to current flow within limits of carbon rating.

"The low-intensity reflector type lamp gives an average of about 165 candle-power per square millimeter area. The new a.c. arc gives about 280 candle-power per square millimeter, as compared with 130 candle-power for the ordinary a.c. arc using neutral-cored carbons. The old d.c. arc is rated at about 165 candle-power per square millimeter."

Thus we are not only able to see the enormous gains modern arcs have provided, but the expected results from each.

Acoustical Products and Engineering

PROPER acoustics is today a subject of outstanding importance in motion picture theatres. Talking pictures require specific acoustic conditions..

Almost all problems of poor acoustics may be solved by applying the proper type and amount of acoustical (sound-absorbent) materials on walls or ceilings. The necessary acoustical correction may be calculated upon exact scientific basis, and precise recommendations may be made from a study of plans and interior furnishings, even in advance of construction. Acoustical materials of various types are available and can be quite readily harmonized with any style of interior.

Advertising Novelties

THE thing to be accomplished through the use of advertising novelties, of one type or another is the chief consideration in their selection. Among the popular novelties, however, which have been used by theatres for stimulating matinee business, building up juvenile performances or bolstering business on week nights are balloons, thermometers on which are imprinted pictures of stars, buttons, badges, pennants, confections, toys, etc. A popular children's matinee stunt can be obtained by giving away a variety of novelty toys. WELL KEPT THEATRES HELP TO SELL MOTION PICTURE ENTERTAINMENT

By JOHN McMANUS
Manager Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo.

[Mr. McManus recently received a letter from the Missouri State Labor and Industrial Inspection Department complimenting him on having "the cleanest and best maintained" theatre in the state.—THE EDITOR.]

BUSINESS—more business—that is what we are scheming and striving to acquire today. "Business" is the magic word that drives us on, in Show Business the same as in less glamorous and less specialized fields.

Show Business, of course, is today about 99 per cent motion pictures. Not that stage attractions are to be ignored as business-getters. But it is true in most theatre situations that the screen is the week-in-and-week-out draw.

The motion picture is therefore what showmen today are largely engaged in selling. Had it not been for the motion picture, Show Business would not be the important element of modern life everywhere that it now is, nor would it have been likely to develop into a tremendous industry, reaching from metropolis to hamlet and requiring many thousands of buildings methodically designed, equipped and managed.

These physical properties really play an important part in the efforts of showmen to sell the motion picture. Not only does the theatre have very definite technical significance, but by the pleasant surroundings offered, it can add considerale force to the appeal of the program. It should be kept in tip-top condition if all the business available is to be got. Careless supervision of the physical theatre has often meant the difference in the long run between profit and loss.

My schooling in theatre management has been one that calls for bearing down strongly on the physical condition of the theatre at all times. The proof of the pudding is in the eating of it, and I have found that a high standard of theatre maintenance repays the cost in money and effort a thousand times over.

The tribute recently paid to the conditions maintained at Loew's Midland is in no way entirely due to my efforts, of course, for my immediate superior, Mr. W. A. Finney, is one of the strictest taskmasters in this phase of theatre operation. For that matter—and this makes what I say here more significent—the operating policy of Loew's Theatres is based on the conviction that good entertainment can always be made better entertainment by giving [Continued on following page]

Air Conditioning and Cooling Equipment

AIR CONDITIONING in the theatre has already arrived at a degree of importance making it one of the necessary adjuncts of the modern motion picture theatre. Because in the theatre people are closely associated physically in great numbers, and for the purpose of realizing enjoyment, the atmospheric conditions of the auditorium especially must not be dependent upon the weather or on any other chance factor. Enjoyment of the entertainment is closely connected with comfort, and the popularity of the theatre is of course influenced by its effect upon health.

Air conditioning does not only mean facilities for cooling a theatre during the hot months, but involves distribution of fresh, clean air at proper temperatures and pressures, and without drafts in the breathing zone. This may mean that the system should be capable of functioning in connection with the heating apparatus as well as with the cooling facilities.

Local conditions influence to some extent the kind of an air conditioning system required in any specific theatre. Some could achieve comfortable, healthful air conditions the simpler, less costly ventilating equipment. Others require more elaborate systems, perhaps employing mechanical refrigeration.

The cooling method in the more elaborate apparatus requires a refrigeration chamber, in which the air is drawn through water vapor, the water having been cooled by means of a compressor, the refrigeration agent being carbon dioxide or other chemical of similar action. It is also possible to install a system having air-washing facilities with a measure of air-temperature control without inclusion of mechanical refrigeration.

Arc Regulators

AS THE NAME implies the arc regulator regulates the voltage at the arc through automatic feeding as the carbon is consumed and the gap between the carbons increases. The result of this automatic action is a steady light on the screen pronounced superior to that which it is possible to produce by hand. The arc control, as it is frequently called, feeds the carbons in an even manner.

Taking the Midland as an example: We go over the house according to regular inspection schedules with painstaking care. This represents work, of course, but work that turns in, over the years, a handsome profit. When there is a slip-up somewhere, the one to blame is taken to task. Where repairs and replacements are needed correction is made at once.

The seating is gone over daily. We have one man especially detailed to do this, and he does nothing but take care of the seats, seeing that they are fastened securely to the flooring, that the upholstering is in good condition, that replacements are made gradually so the appearance of the seating is uniform.

Carpeting is the object of similar vigilance. It is inspected daily by a maintenance man, while ushers and porters are instructed to keep an eye out for worn border edges, step risers and so on. This is essential to a well kept theatre. In fact, maintenance of this kind is less a burden to a theatre than maintenance of the haphazard variety. When repairs are made when needed, substantial replacement is not necessary so often, and the cost of maintenance is spread over a long period. Frequently the improvements required are so slight that the cost is negligible.

Paint is urgently needed in many a theatre today. Painting should always be high up in the theatre's maintenance schedule. Paint is comparable to a new suit. But it is better to be always well dressed than to be "all dolled up" just once in a while. Paint should be applied when needed, not merely some time later on. It protects, it gives a theatre freshness and cleanliness. Certainly, if your theatre does not look fresh and clean, you can't expect people to enjoy being in it. At the Midland we have engaged a painter to keep painted surfaces spic and span at all times and have been repaid the cost many times over.

Lighting is a point where of late there has been some tendency to stint. The theatre should be bright. Color in your lighting will add interest. But brightness is essential above all. Brightness symbolizes a good time. It creates a sense of gayety, which is what the theatre is in the main supposed to represent. Watch your lighting, keep lamps replaced, see that your equipment is doing the job it can do to invite patronage.

I have selected three things in maintenance of the property which obviously bear closely upon the selling of motion picture entertainment. But maintenance is really all of a piece, each element dovetailing into the other, and all fundamentally important to the successful conductance of a theatre business today. There is a sum-total of effect on the patronage that must never be overlooked.

And here's another side to the matter: High standards of maintenance have a desirable effect upon the personnel. They instill pep, make for pride in the job, stimulate loyalty to the management. Employes that are surrounded with fine influences like their job, and by becoming efficient in it, eliminate waste. Engineer, projectionist, stage manager, porter, usher, cashier—all at the Midland are on their mettle to maintain and, if possible, to raise the standards of their theatre. They reflect this in their work and in their contacts with the public. This pays dividends.

Batteries

BATTERIES FORM important units of sound reproducers and are generally furnished by the manufacturer with the sound apparatus. Non-synchronous devices do not use them, but synchronous methods must have them in order to eliminate the hum of the alternating current. Any standard make of batteries can be used, but it is always best to use the make furnished or recommended by the manufacturer of the sound apparatus.

Another important use of batteries in motion picture theatres is in emergency lighting systems which augment the regular source of light power as a safeguard against breakdown of the local system. They are installed for instant service upon such a breakdown, being placed in operation automatically. Besides giving the necessary power for lighting, they are capable also of affording the projector motors power for some time. Prices depend on the nature of the installation.

Brass Rails and Ornamental Bronze

BRASS RAILS have many uses in motion picture theatres—for separating sections of the lobby and foyer for proper control of traffic, as a means of protection at the edge of the balcony, around the orchestra pit, and so on.

Ornamental bronze has extensive use in motion picture theatres, sometimes merely decoratively, as in the form of placques, but most commonly for a combined utilitarian and decorative purpose, as represented by organ grilles and other gratings, box office wickets, lighting fixtures, display cases, etc.

Carbons

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons are required for projection in most motion picture theatres (all except those using Mazda light sources).

Modern projection demands the best in quality in projection carbons today, and this demand is being met by the carbon manufacturers through their scientific and research departments with products that have kept pace with modern progress.

Development of the alternating current arc and the necessary lamp and transformer equipment for the use of the a.c. carbon, has added to the projection light resources of smaller theatres. The a.c. carbon can also be used with d.c. current at the arc.

Carpets

BECAUSE of the hard wear to which theatre carpets are subjected it has been found that there is no saving in the selection of cheap carpets. Generally, floor coverings and carpets should give an impression of stability and foundation upon which one may walk with security.

The following are standard weaves of carpets, listed in order of price from the highest to the lowest:

1. Chenille.
2. Saxony.
3. American Oriental
4. Winton.
5. Axminster.
6. Velvet.
7. Tapestry.

Any of the grades from Saxony to Axminster, inclusive, have been used successfully in theatres.

Carpet padding used under the carpet not only provides a softer and more comfortable feeling to the foot but reduces friction and adds many years to the life of the carpet by keeping it away from direct contact with the hard floor.

Carpets also should be selected with a view to the acoustics of the theatre.

Chairs, Theatre

CHAIRS should be so chosen and the seating layout should be so planned as to ensure the maximum seating capacity consistent with comfort, safety, facility of entrance and exit, compliance with local or state building requirements, proper sight lines, elevations and other mechanical adaptations and adjustments

Talking pictures have injected another element into the problem of seating for higher efficiency, i. e., acoustics. The acoustical properties of the theatre chair are now very important, and for sound-equipped houses upholstered seats have become a necessity due to their sound-absorbent quality. Veneer backs and seats are likely to induce sound reverberation of obnoxious character and may easily mar an otherwise perfect acoustical condition.

Chair Covers

IN ADDITION to giving a pleasing and inviting appearance to the auditorium, chair covers serve the practical purpose of coolness and sanitation. An interior otherwise drab may be transformed into a cool, clean, cheerful looking place through their use.

There are several things that should be borne in mind in connection with the use of chair covers. It should be remembered that auditorium and balcony chairs as a rule require two distinct and different styles of covers. The auditorium chair should be equipped with a cover which covers the entire chair back while the balcony chair need only have a quarter back. This is because of the slope on which balcony chairs are placed.

Working from blue prints provides the most satisfactory way of assuring a perfect fit of the cover for each chair.

Chair pads for veneer seats are also obtainable, and there are also special chair materials which are intended to be used as aids to acoustics.

Chair Fastening Cement

CEMENT of this kind is for firmly attaching into the floor the metal pieces to which the theatre chair is bolted. Into a hole made in the floor, the metal piece itself, or bolt for its attachment, is inserted, then around it is poured the melted cement. In about ten minutes this cement hardens and holds the metal piece or bolt firmly in place.

When used in reseating, the old metal piece or bolt is removed, a new one inserted and the cement poured around it.

Change Makers

SPEED AND ACCURACY are obtained at the box office through the use of coin changing machines which in addition to their time saving facilities offer a valuable protection against annoying mistakes in making change to patrons. With the coin changing machines a light touch at the keyboard is all that is necessary to deliver the correct number of coins to the patron who easily scoops them up from a cup at the side of the change maker. Coins may be delivered either from the right or left side and these automatic cashiers as developed for theatres have been improved in recent months until now they are available in sizes which occupy only about 81 square inches of space in the box office.

Changeable Sign Letters

CHANGEABLE SIGN LETTERS are widely used by theatres in the marquee and have proved especially popular, because of the flexible manner in which they permit billing of a current or coming attraction. Changeable sign letters are generally made of cast aluminum with the letter part cut out. When used on the marquee these letters can be moved to make an attractive announcement. They are obtainable in large and small sizes and, in addition, numerals, characters, word plates and spacer panels of the same character are also available.

Composition Flooring

MANY PARTS of a theatre are suited to use of floor covering other than woven materials, and often composition flooring may adequately take the place of expensive tiles, terrazzo, etc.

Composition flooring is made by a number of companies specializing in this product, and all have their own processes. It may be said, however, that the basic materials are cork or rubber, and natural gums.

Composition floors, due to their resilience, afford comfort underfoot, durable and easy to maintain. Manufacturers offer them in a wide variety of colors and designs so that it is possible to harmonize them with the color scheme and decorative plan of any interior. Special designs can be executed in practically all of these materials, thus giving the floor distinction and individuality. Among the areas where resilient composition floors may be used are the following: lobbies, lounges, smoking rooms, dressing rooms, hallways, foyers, executive offices, etc.

Condensers (Lenses)

CONDENSERS are single glass lenses, unmounted. They are made in various diameters from 2¼ inches to 7¼ inches in diameter; the 4½-inch and the 7¼-inch are the sizes used mostly in motion picture work. The condenser is located in the front end of the lamphouse to gather the rays of light from the light source, and bend them, or condense them into a spot of light on the aperture. They are made in different shapes, some being Plano Convex, some Meniscus or Moon shape, and others Bi-Convex.

Focal lengths for motion picture work are usually 6½-7½-8½ and 9½ inches; condensers 5 inches, 6 inches and 8 inches in diameter are usually used for spotlight projection.

Curtain Control Machines

FEW THINGS leave a finer impression on the theatre audience than the smooth and silent opening and closing of the curtain. This is accomplished by curtain control machines which operate automatically. The curtain can be controlled from the booth or from back stage by the simple process of pressing a button.

Curtain control equipment consists of track equipped with cable and snaps to which the curtain is fastened. In opening and closing the curtain may be stopped at any desired point across the stage and may also be reversed at will.

The motor for operating the curtain is usually placed on the stage or it may be placed in the grids or mounted on a platform. This permits the machine, track and curtains to be flied in addition to open from the center.

A type of curtain control machine specially designed for small theatres with tracks up to 40 feet in length, has been put on the market at a price considerably lower than that of the larger machines.

Electric Measuring Instruments

THE DEVELOPMENT and improvement in theatre lighting and projection have thrown onto the shoulders of the electrician, as well as the projectionist, many responsibilities. At their command are factors which make or break the show. With enormous switchboards to control, emergency lighting plants, motors, generators, arcs, dimmers, transverters, magnetic appliances and many other involved and sensitive electrical instruments, it devolves on the theatre to provide adequate equipment for their correct operation. In the list of necessary measuring instruments are ammeters, voltmeters, vacuum tube testers and the like.

Film Inspection Machines

PERFECT PROJECTION is impossible unless the film itself is in perfect mechanical condition. Today the public demands good screen and sound results and the projectionist can accomplish this only when proper inspection has been given to the film. Film inspection machines enhance efficiency in this work.

Film Rewinders

THIS DEVICE is used for rewinding films after they are run through the projectors, and are made in two general patterns, the bench and fire-proof enclosed type. The bench or open rewind is made in one piece types with the dummy and geared end complete in one unit, and others are made so that they can be clamped to a bench or shelf, while some are permanently fastened by means of bolts. Some are made with plain bearings and some have their spindles mounted on ball bearings.

The enclosed rewinds are made in various patterns, both hand drive and motor drive models. The motor drive type is generally automatic in its operation, stopping at the end of the film or should the film break. Some are made with plain bearings and some have their spindles mounted on ball bearings. Some motor drive types also have multiple speed ranges and accommodate either one- or two-thousand-foot reels. One type also has a detachable grinding and polishing attachment.

Fire Extinguishers

THERE ARE for theatres four types of fire extinguishers: the one quart size hand extinguisher, containing carbon tetra-chloride; the 2½-gallon soda and acid extinguisher; the 2½-gallon foam type, and the portable carbon Dioxide hand type. Good ones of these types are manufactured by many companies. Instructions from fire inspectors should be carefully followed in distributing these through the theatre building. Prices range around $12.00.

Fire Prevention for Projectors

IMPORTANT equipment has been developed which it is said definitely prevents a film fire in the projection machine. This equipment is a safety control device, that is easily installed and which is operated on the regular line voltage. The main control unit and dowser are mounted on the cone of the lamphouse and act as the main light cut off, taking the place of the regular dowser. The dowser is operated from five distinct points of contact, covering every avenue through which a fire could start in the projector while it is in operation or at a standstill with the film in it. All contact points are very sensitive, and the dowser is instantaneous in its action, yet does not depend upon springs to actuate it.

AGAIN ENTERING into lower insurance rates are fireproof shutters for the projection booth. Such equipment in the modern theatre has placed the patrons beyond the danger line, so to speak. These safety shutters are so constructed that they drop when film breaks. Certain designs work automatically, while others operate through a release effected by the projectionist. The list price of the shutters range from $9.00 up, depending on size.

Generators, Motor

MOTOR-GENERATOR sets are used almost exclusively for converting a.c. supply into d.c. for the projection arc. They consist of a motor of suitable type for the service available as to voltage, phase and frequency and of the proper horsepower, connected through a coupling or on a common shaft, with a d.c. generator armature. This latter may be of a size to furnish from 15 to 600 or more amperes, and at a voltage of from 80 to 100. Ballast rheostats are used to drop this voltage to that of the arc, which varies from about 50 to 75 volts, depending upon its character. These generators are designed to hold their voltage very steady regardless of load and should be quiet operating and free from vibration.

The above describes the Multiple type unit which operates any number of arcs up to its full capacity in multiple and is almost exclusively used in this country. Where only two arcs of the same amperage are burned alternately, as on two projectors, the Series type with its higher efficiency can be used and is still sold largely outside the United States.

Heating Systems

THERE ARE A number of types and arrangements of theatre heating systems, each designed to fit the individual building. One of the systems is known as the fuel-to-air method whereby the transmission of the heating effect from the fuel is obtained without the intermediate processes of transmission through piping and radiators. The volumes of outdoor air entering the system are heated quickly and uniformly, producing comfortable heating and invigorating ventilation in all seasons of the year. The heating units most generally used to warm the incoming air are commonly known as unit heat generators.

Horn Lifts and Horn Towers

A HORN LIFT is an automatically controlled electrically driven elevator to raise and lower sound horns to their proper places behind the screen. They operate on the hydraulic, cable and drum and screw lift principle, and when the stage is needed for acts, the lift lowers the horn down under the stage. The portion of the stage flooring directly above the lift is attached to the lift, becoming a part of it, and any stage setup located over the lift goes up with it and is ready for use the instant the lift returns to the low level.

Horn towers are structural steel towers on which the horns are fastened. These towers are generally on rubber-tired, ball bearing casters so that they may be moved about silently to properly locate the horns behind the screen. When the horns are not in use the towers can be pushed out of the way.

Lamps, High Intensity

HIGH INTENSITY projector lamps are of two types—reflector type, and condensing-lens type. Their selection depends on the size of the theatre and other local factors. The condenser-lens type (so-called super-high intensity) is generally operated at from 115 to 130 amperes. The reflector type is generally operated at from 70 to 80 amperes. Lamps in the high intensity class are of the larger type or represent other conditions requiring a higher degree of screen illumination.

Lamps, Incandescent, Projection

INCANDESCENT LAMPS for theatre motion picture projection are usually of the low-voltage type for added efficiency and greater source concentration. They cannot be used on the ordinary lighting circuit without a transformer or regulator. The 900-watt, 30-ampere, T-20 bulb lamp usually provides acceptable results on good screens up to 16 feet wide at throws not greater than about 100 feet.

There are also available 1,000-watt prefocus base, and 1,500-watt bipost base, 100-120 volt, T-20 bulb lamps employing the biplane type of filament construction, which is inherently of higher cost but makes possible the requisite source concentration at ordinary circuit voltages and thus saves the cost of auxiliary apparatus. They are preferred where operating schedules are relatively short, and for projectors of the semi-portable type. Screen results equal or surpass those from the 900-watt lamp. The 1,500-watt lamp requires forced ventilation.

For portable 35-mm. projectors there are the 500-watt monoplane filament, and the 750-watt and 1,000-watt biplane filament lamps in short T-20 bulbs with medium prefocus bases. All are of the 100-120 volt type. The 750-watt and 1,000-watt lamps require forced ventilation.

For stereoptican projection there are the 500-watt, short T-20 bulb, medium prefocus base lamp; and the 100-watt, long T-20 bulb mogul prefocus base lamp. Both of the 100-120 volt types employ monoplane filaments.

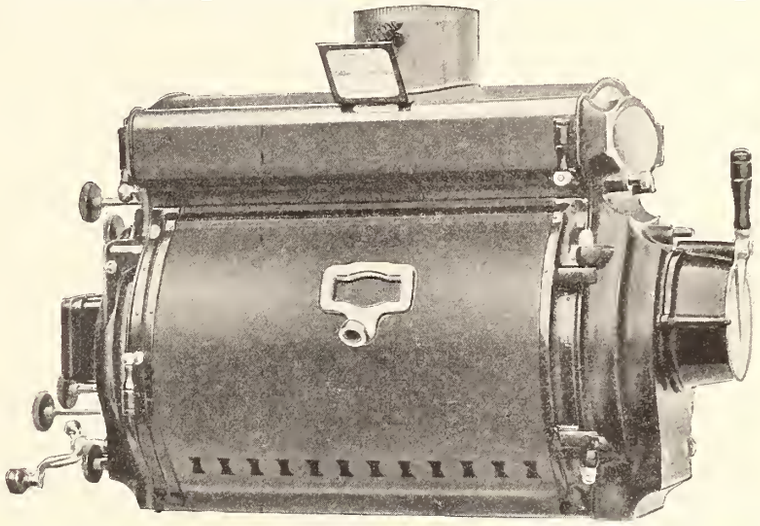
Lamps, General Lighting



THE MANY TYPES of lamps available today make it possible to have light of just the proper quantity and quality. The types of lamps used to a great extent influence the cost of lighting. Lamps themselves vary in cost. Special, expensive types are often used where the more standard types would be satisfactory. Poor and inefficient lamps use up energy and do not give the light they should. Old, dirty and blackened lamps waste energy without a proper return. Lamps of the wrong voltage give too little light, or burn out too quickly.

Incandescent lamps are usually designated by wattage, voltage, bulb shaps and diameter. The diameter of the bulb is given in eighths of an inch.

Colored lamps are available with inside spray finish and with natural colors in several sizes. The natural-colored lamps are specially desirable for indirect cove lighting; the inside-colored lamps for exterior displays and where the lamps themselves are seen.

Spotlight and floodlight lamps have filaments that are as concentrated as practicable, and in the prefocus types, placed very

Lenses

FOR MOTION PICTURE theatre service there are projection lenses and condensing lenses. The latter are also used in projection but are placed in the lamphouse and condense the rays to a spot on the aperture. Projection lenses are objective lenses placed in the projector head.

The prime requirement of a projection lens is to give a bright, well defined picture on the screen without any distortion or color rays. These lenses are made in four sizes: Eighth, quarter, half and three-quarters (diameters, respectively, of 1 11/16, 1 5/16, 2 25/32 and 3¼ inches).

The one-eighth and one-quarter sizes are furnished in equivalent focii of two inches E. F., to eight inches E. F. The half-size is furnished in equivalent focii of four and a half inches E. F. to ten inches E. F., and the three-quarters in equivalent focii of from six inches E. F. to ten inches E.F. There is also procurable a bifocal projection lens with a range of from one-half to three-quarters of an inch in focal length, designed to eliminate the change of lenses in shifting operation from sound to silent films, and vice versa. All the sizes named are standard. Focal lengths are determined by the size of the picture desired.

Lighting Control Equipment

THE MODERN theatre with a well balanced and effective lighing system, has made many demands on the manufacturers of lighting control equipment. Elaborate color effects must be possible and to change the lighting and gradually merge the light from one color to another without attracting the audiences a very flexible control system is required. Even the small control systems permit the operator to produce hundreds of color shades.

Lights, Spot

ARE MADE in arc and incandescent types for use on stage—in the booth—in cove lighting, and for head spotting. Most spotlights on the market can be used for spot lighting and for full flood. The arc types are made in sizes of 3 ampere up to 150 ampere. They come complete with stand and attachment cord and connecter. Within the last year, the high intensity spot has appeared. It is an adaptation of the high intensity lamp to spot and flood lighting.

The incandescent spotlights are in sizes of from 250 watt to 2,000 watt. The sizes usually used are 250, 400, 500 and 1,000 watt.

The small head spots of 250 watts are used for cove lighting or spotting the head of a singer or organist. The incandescent spotlights come either with floor standard or pipe hangers for border lighting batons.

In stage work spotlights are frequently banked one above the other on a stand and used for flood-lighting from the wings. Prices range from $12 to $500.

Lobby Display

AN ATTRACTIVE lobby is a boon to business. To conform to the beauty in lobby decoration, colorful and attractive lobby displays have been created. Automatic poster displays in polished bronze are constructed for convenient display of standard stills and photographs, featuring current and coming attractions. Art glass today is advantageously used, making a striking and effective display. Many artistic endeavors have been directed toward the lobby with the result that today few shoddy lobbies greet the patron.

Lobby Display Frames

LOBBY ADVERTISING is an obviously effective business stimulant and in this connection the use of lobby display frames easily ranks first in appearance. With the effective display frames now available it is possible not only to obtain a maximum advertising value from their use but also to add materially to the appearance of the lobby. The front of the theatre may now be "dressed up" in excellent fashion with these frames. In the case of new theatres it is common practice to design lobby frames in conformity with the architectural style of the house.

Marquees

USE OF MARQUEES BY motion picture theatres in general. They serve a number of practical purposes. They offer theatres an excellent advertising medium while giving to the house an attractive and inviting entrance. During inclement weather they offer protection to waiting patrons.

Marquees are usually constructed of sheet metal and may be obtained in a variety of designs. They are furnished with glass roof or with steel ceiling and metal roof. Numerous interesting standard designs have been developed by marquee manufacturers especially for theatre use. These are easily installed and are shipped to theatres in convenient sections. Suggestions for attractive designs are available. Inquiries should be accompanied by approximate measurements of the front of the building where the marquee is to be used.

Microphones

MICROPHONES in theatres have a variety of uses, ranging from stage program presentations, regular and emergency announcements, to reports to patrons on sports and other timely items of interest. In most cases microphones can be added to the amplifying equipment used for sound-on-film service with little accessory equipment.

Several types of microphones are available. Carbon button and condenser types are most suitable and the least expensive for all-round theatre use. Although carbon microphones may be obtained in both single and double button types, the double button type is usually recommended for casual use in theatres as it gives clearer reproduction than the single button model and costs only slightly more.

Condenser microphones are quiet in operation and are preferred for use in stage productions. Although the condenser microphone is more expensive than the carbon button type, condenser microphone reproduction is free from the slight hiss, known as carbon noise.

Organs

ASIDE from detail considerations, the important thing to bear in mind in the purchase of a theatre organ is whether or not the instrument is designed and built to meet theatre requirements. Demands upon an organ to be used in a theatre and in a church, for example, are obviously at variance. The result is that organs for theatres are built along exacting lines, expressly for the work they are intended to perform.

Perfumes and Perfumers

DISAGREEABLE odors are unfortunately a usual concomitant of crowds, particularly in such compact enclosures as the motion picture auditorium. These odors may be effectively eliminated by the use of highly aromatic perfumes, method of diffusion is the simple one of which are diffused throughout the air. One placing the perfume in decorative cones, resembling a vase, at various places along the walls. These cones are made of clay and readily absorb the perfume, which may be said to saturate the cones, and the odor radiates from the latter to quite a large area beyond.

Another widely used method is to spray the air with a perfume at suitable intervals.

A trifle less simple and perhaps more effective method is that of placing perfume in a disseminator located at the ventilating fan so that the evaporated liquid or solidified perfume will carry its fragrance through the auditorium along with the fresh air.

Plastic Paint

PLASTIC PAINT is extensively used for decorating auditorium walls, lobbies and foyers of theatres. With this paint almost any sort of rough texture can be developed from the most refined stipple to the shaggiest Spanish palm finish. Sand swirl, two-tone and other effects can also be obtained in a number of colors and color combinations.

Plastic paint comes in the form of a white powder. Before application it is mixed with water; sometimes, also, with coloring matter. It may be tinted with dry colors before application, or the plastic paint may be sized and then glazed with an oil glaze tinted with oil colors. It may be applied on any type of surface and when thus properly applied and treated it can be washed from time to time with soap and water.

Portable Projectors

PORTABLE PROJECTORS are motion picture projection machines which are designed to be set up only temporarily and not for permanent installation in a regular theatre, as a rule, although used there. They are particularly adapted for use in schools, clubs, etc., and may be obtained for installation in connection with leading makes of sound equipment or with sound apparatus built in. There is a model with a heavy pedestal for permanent installation.

Semi-portable projectors are standard motion picture machines which may be utilized for either temporary or permanent installations. That is to say, these machines, while sturdily constructed, are comparatively light in weight and may be moved from rooms or buildings easily. Sound apparatus specially constructed for portable machines is available. Also available are sound-on-film unit projectors of portable type for both 35-mm. and 16 mm. film.

Projection Booths and Equipment

THE PROJECTION room, or booth, because of the fact that it is one of the nerve centers of the motion picture theatre, is becoming standardized. Not in size, naturally, but in general construction, and the high standard of equipment, etc. The projection room, because of the very nature of the purpose it serves, must be fireproof and ideally ventilated.

There are many things to keep in mind in the purchase of projection room equipment. Certain parts of this equipment must conform to the building codes, it must be practical, it must satisfy the projectionist and it must lend itself to better projection.

The design and layout of the projection room should have the careful attention of the architect or builder at the time the plans for the theatre are being prepared.

The desirable projection room may vary in size but to acommodate two projectors, it should be at least 15 feet by 10 feet, with 12 foot ceiling. This size will also care for a spotlight and slide dissolver. By all means toilet facilities should be provided and a shower bath is highly desirable.

PROJECTORS HERE referred to are the standard non-portable machines designed for permanent installation, usually in theatres. It is the expressed belief of theatre owners and projectionists that practically ideal projection is possible with equipment available at present, provided it is in the hands of a competent operator. Modern projection machines are the result of many years of improvement and development to meet the ever-growing requirements for the best possible screen results.

All late model standard projectors are either constructed specially for sound picture projection or are readily adapted to any make or model of sound apparatus, either for sound-on-disc or sound-on-film.

Public Address Systems

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS provide a means of electrically amplifying the voice. The microphone picks up the ing to the original sound waves, these "words" are carried through amplifiers to the speakers, where they are transformed into their original physical form as sound waves, only now of much greater intensity than when merely created by the human vocal mechanism. Public address systems are used principally in the theatre for announcements, though it is adaptable to many related purposes. Microphonic attachment may be made at several points in the system, making its function available to the manager in his office as well as backstage.

Rheostats

AN IMPORTANT item of projection equipment is the Rheostat. A rheostat may be described as a resistor provided with means for varying resistance (opposition). The resistance may be varied by having a contact lever or slider moved over a number of stationary buttons or segments between which sections of the rheostat are connected, by compressing a number of carbon or graphite disc or parts, by using a number of levers or knife-switches for cutting in and out resistance.

Safes, Box Office

THIS IS A SAFE anchored inside the box office into which the cashier may drop silver coins and bills as received from patrons beyond what is needed for purposes of making change. This type of safe has been developed as a result of the many "stick-ups" of theatre box offices in which the robber has obtained receipts running into several thousand dollars. It is widely used in several other trades, the idea, in brief, being that with this type of safe in the box office a theatre is likely to lose only the amount which it is keeping exposed for making change.

Box office safes are made of steel and

STOP KIDDING YOURSELF ABOUT YOUR SCREEN!

Honestly, wouldn't an expert resurfacing job greatly improve your picture and your sound? We know it would, from the word of such circuits as RKO, Warners, Saenger and others. They like our special screen resurfacing results—as much as they like our method of doing all work without interference with any performance. The cost is reasonable, too.

Schools

THEATRE MANAGEMENT and theatre organ playing are no longer hit-or-miss propositions. Both have become highly specialized. The theatre manager must be trained in administration duties, advertising and technics, and the organist must be able to dramatize the music to accompany the screen attractions. So valuable do chain organizations consider the trained man or woman that they are demanding those persons who have become skilled through graduate work in schools.

Screens

THERE ARE FOUR types of motion picture screens. This classification is based on the character of the finished surfaces, as follows: Metallic, Matt White, Beaded and Translucent (or rear projection). The latter type is not in general use, and for the purposes of this description will require no further mention.

Sound screens are of two types, porous and perforated. A porous screen is one on which a reflective surface is built on a loosely woven fabric, leaving the openings in the cloth unobstructed to permit the passage of sound. A perforated screen surface is applied on a closely woven fabric, first making an opaque sheet, which is then perforated with minute holes to permit the passage of sound.

Screens should be selected largely by the width of the theatre and its projection equipment or light source.

Screens are again classified as to their reflective properties into three general classes: Diffusive (matt white), semi-diffusive metallic (silver or gold fibre), and directive (beaded). The white is the only one of the above types which could be used satisfactorily in a theatre of any size, and only then with high intensity projection. Because it diffuses the light almost equally to all the seats, it is a necessity in the extra-wide auditoriums. Due to their higher reflective properties, the metallic and beaded surfaces will produce satisfactory brilliance and detail when used in conjunction with the more economical projection units, making a substantial saving in current. Since the beaded screen has the highest reflective surface, it should be used with incandescent projection lamps.

Screen Masks

LARGER SCREENS HAVE come into rather general vogue recently, due to the elaborate type of productions now being produced which, with the use of special lenses have enabled theatres to present outstanding scenes with greater effect and scope. The many opportunities to use the full screen to give added value to important scenes have brought about the development of the screen modifier, or mask which, automatically operated, permits framing of the screen at any desired size. The screen modifier, or mask, was first used in connection with sound-on-film to compensate for the sound on the edge of the film. This equipment is now being used in many other ways, especially in achieving ingenious opportunities for titles, announcements and special trailers.

Screen Resurfacing

TO INSURE proper screen illumination without increasing power consumption or incurring the risk of glare, the screen surface should be kept as reflective as possible. In spite of regular cleaning routine, however, screens gradually get soiled, and in instances in which it is not felt that a new screen is warranted, one has recourse to resurfacing.

Exhibitors have used a flat white paint to resurface their screens. However, due to the greater necessity today for an immaculate screen, the practice of resurfacing is increasing, and as a result specific materials and expert methods are available. One of these materials is sprayed on, after the screen is washed, and is of such character that it does not clog the perforations, and that it restores to the screen a high reflective power. One of the characteristics cited in a resurfacing material now on the market is its penetrability, causing it to permeate the texture of the screen fabric, restoring its original tightness.

Signs, Directional

TAKE THE CASE of a patron who comes from the auditorium and asks for directions. If the theatre owner has had this experience he realizes the embarrassment and other inconvenience. The patron is paying his way into the theatre and he deserves every consideration. The modern theatre today is equipping itself with the directional sign. Every business building is doing likewise.

Signs may be considered in two general groups—those that are illuminated and those which are etched on metal or wood without illumination. The illuminated signs, which are highly artistic in finish and construction, are made to read either from one side or both. The lettering in the signs is chipped into the glass and silvered, making it easy to read in daylight. The letters glow in a soft greenish color. Illumination is accomplished with 25-watt showcase lamps. Signs are fitted with lamps, cord and plug ready for attaching to light socket.

Signs—Electric

MOTION PICTURE theatres are dealers in the use of electrical advertising, the usual electric signs at some of the metropolitan houses being the most elaborate of their kind. Since the sign must necessarily be made with consideration for the size of the theatre facade and facilities for anchoring it, the matter is usually given individual consideration, and sketches prepared for the specific building to which the sign is to be fastened.

Slides

SLIDES ARE DIVIDED into four different classes: Song slides, advertising slides, announcement slides and special advertising slides. Song slides have come into vogue within the last few years.

A patented slide, having a paper frame and a composition transparency flexible enough to be placed in a typewriter, permits the management to prepare its own slides, at a moment's notice if need be, and is thus particularly useful for special announcements.

Sound Equipment, Complete

MUSIC and sound reproducing devices are of two types, synchronous and non-synchronous. The latter use phonograph records, which are cued to the picture. The majority of these machines, which have from two to four discs for the records, are operated from the pit or other location in view of the screen. The synchronous type, however, is operated from the projection booth, employing disc records or film recordings made in conjunction with the picture

Among the developments in motion picture sound is the increase in the employment of the sound-on-film method of reproductoin. Experiment has eradicated many of the disadvantages of this method and increased its advantages.

Dear Mr. Wright:

Of late, we have had rather frequent occasions to hear from the trade, regarding your new Model 309 Full Range Reproducer and Horn.

The comments we have heard lead us to believe that your new reproducing equipment, together with our new theatre amplifiers, offer a combination which leaves nothing to be desired from the standpoint of tone quality and up-to-the-minute reproduction from Sound-on-Film.

We recall an occasion several weeks ago, when a demonstration test was conducted at one of the Shea Theatres in Buffalo, New York, in comparison with other equipment which is widely used and known. In this test your Model 309 Full Range Reproducer and Horn were used together with our GRS-72 Theatre Amplifier. The report we received was certainly most gratifying.

With kindest wishes for continued success, we remain

Sincerely yours,

IT is natural for anyone to boost his own product. But it means something when every user of your equipment is enthusiastic about it and anxious to testify to that effect.

And, even a stronger recommendation occurs when a responsible, well-known concern makes the statement that they are receiving letters of enthusiasm from users of your reproducers and horns.

Read what the Webster Electric Co. has to say about our New Model 309 Full Range Reproducer and Horn. Everyone who has heard of an amplifier should know of the high standing of this concern. It pleases us to recommend their entire line of amplifiers and especially their New Model GRS-72 Theatre Unit.

Modernize your SOUND equipment. Our theatre reproducer covers the full range of the latest types of recordings. Write for complete information. Send complete details of your theatre and Sound Equipment for free suggestions from our Engineering Department.

Switchboards

CONTROL OF LIGHTING through the use of switchboards makes possible the wonderful lighting effects achieved in motion picture theatres today. Switchboards for this work are built in many capacities. Scenes for unusual lighting effects may be pre-selected by such a board and the theatre flooded with appropriate lighting scheme at a proper cue by the simple method of throwing a switch. Lighting control systems are being adopted by theatres of lesser size that heretofore have considered such installations as being only for the larger metropolitan houses.

Manufacturers of this type of equipment are glad to furnish engineering service and consult with exhibitors and architects on various phases of these lighting control systems.

Switches

NEVER in the history of the theatre has electrical equipment played as vital a role as it does today. From projection room to stage and to manager's office, electricity to a large extent runs the show. With the program on a minute schedule, electrical switches in turn have an important duty to perform.

Temperature Control Apparatus

TEMPERATURE control apparatus are devices for automatically controlling the temperature of the auditorium, organ chambers or any part of the theatre where a uniform heat must be maintained. In a control for an auditorium the device is a small thermostat, which actuates a valve on an air-line, which in turn operates the shutters in the air ducts. In the average size theatre several of these will be located at various places and each will operate independently of the other, thus relieving hot or cold spots in any one section. Controls for organ chambers turn on or off electric heaters and also work on the thermostatic principle.

Upholstery Material

USE OF SOUND absorbing upholstering on theatre seats has come into popular demand since the advent of sound pictures. A popular fabric used in this connection is mohair, which combines beauty with important sound properties. Upholstering material of this nature may be obtained in a variety of colors and executed in interesting patterns and designs. It is claimed for this material that it will not fade, does not mat down, and can be kept fresh and clean with little effort. Use of mohair for upholstering is said to produce a marked elimination of reverberations in the theatre auditorium.

Usher Signal Systems

THE USHER SIGNAL SYSTEM provides a sending station at each aisle. equipped with numeral push buttons that give any total of seats that aisle might have. The usher registers on this station the number of vacant seats available, which information is transmitted to the floor or head usher, depending on the size of the theatre. In the larger houses the floor usher relays the information to the head usher. The head usher sends total of all aisles and floors to the doorman who directs the people to the different sections of the house where the vacant seats are waiting.

Vacuum Cleaning Equipment

APPARATUS FOR cleaning carpeting and fabrics by suction is to be considered more or less necessary for proper maintenance of the theatre. Brooms and brushes are useful, but cannot be considered substitutes for suitably designed vacuum cleaning equipment, which not only cleanses more effectively, but does so with less time and labor.

The unusually large and elaborate theatre is sometimes best served by stationary equipment with pipes leading to the various levels, where the hose is attached. To the average theatre, however, unit cleaners of heavy-duty type with a high degree of portability are best adapted.

To make little odd jobs of cleaning easier, as in small offices, lounges, etc., it is frequently worth while to augment this larger equipment with a cleaner of the common domestic type.

Ventilators

PROPER DISTRIBUTION of air in the theatre is an important feature of correct ventilation. One of the methods of achieving this is through the use of ventilators located in the auditorium floor. Air brought into the theatre is distributed in this manner to all parts of the house. Ventilators of this type which are generally known as mushroom ventilators, may be adjusted to permit the desired amount of air entering the auditorium.

Summer Comfort Through Ventilation

tre manager or owner can protect himself against many difficulties resulting from insufficient fan capacity, and faulty duct work, by insisting that, first, ducts be of ample size; second, ducts have as nearly uniform cross-section as possible; three, ducts have the fewest possible bends; fourth, bends must be as sweeping as possible, not angular or sharp.

The center line radius should be at least 1½ times the width of the duct. The proper proportion of branch ducts, should there be any necessary from the main duct, is extremely important. Only too often branch ducts are guessed at and made most any size, and dependence placed upon a damper to control the quantity of air which flows into the branch. Duct systems should not connect directly to fan housings. There should be a canvas connecting section, which method will greatly minimize the transmission of mechanical noises from the fan through the duct system.

The static head and the velocity head establish the load on the fan; the load on the fan establishes the horsepower of the motor necessary to drive the fan; the horsepower of the motor establishes the cost of power to operate the system. By increasing the duct sizes, making sweeping bends instead of angles, the power may be reduced, but larger ducts cost more to install and take up more room. It is obvious that there is a conflict with opposing factors. The services of a reliable engineer and the installation made by a reliable company or contractor, are the manager's or owner's best protection that duct sizes, as weighed against power consumption, are correct.

CENTRIFUGAL FANS

In any system, fans of course are of great importance. The centrifugal fan is most generally used for theatre ventilation and has proven satisfactory. It consists of a wheel made of steel plates; it looks very similar (but is much smaller) to the old-fashioned stern paddle wheels used on river boats, or the old-fashioned mill wheel. The radial vanes of steel plate revolve in a steel plate casing. The air enters these fans along the axis of the wheel. The motion of the wheel causes the air to flow towards its circumference (centrifugal force) and discharges the air into an outlet located as a tangent with respect to the fan circumference. The velocity of the air is due to the centrifugal force imparted to it, and also to the velocity given to it by the tip of the fan as it whips it into the outlet.

This last statement indicates the importance of tip speed of fans. If two fans are rotated at the same speed, the one of larger diameter will have the greatest tip speed. In order to change some of this tip speed velocity into useful static pressure, engineers have designed the housing in a scroll shape; the distance of the tip of the fan to the housing is not uniform and increases in the direction of rotation.

The earlier types of centrifugal fans had comparatively few and broad vanes, now many centrifugal fans are called multi-blade, or multi-vane, fans because of the greater number of narrower vanes. The multi-blade fan is more efficient; generally it can be operated at higher speed and requires less space all of which indicates that it is a good fan for ventilating purposes. The blades of the multi-blade fans may be straight curved forward or curved backward. Of these three types of blades, either of the first two are recommended for theatre ventilation work; the backward curved blade develops a very high static head, and consequently a low velocity head, making it more suitable for forced draft on boilers than for ventilating purposes.

BASIC GUIDES

Following are three interesting laws which hold true for any installation:

Rule 1—The capacity varies directly as the fan speed. If the speed is doubled the capacity is doubled, if the speed is reduced to one-half the capacity is cut in two.

Rule 2—The static pressure varies as the square of the fan speed. By doubling the fan speed the static pressure is increased four times.

Rule 3—The horsepower varies as the cube of the fan speed (horsepower used here

AIR CONDITIONING

Kooler-Aire

• A system for general ventilation and air-purification for the theatre which also provides facilities for summer cooling, is represented in the new Kooler-Aire equipment developed by the United States Air Conditioning Corporation of Minneapolis. In the East the company is represented by Sperry Products, Inc., of Brooklyn.

The Kooler-Aire system of ventilation is founded upon the basic principles, the cooling of air by use of an air washer utilizing the heat of vaporization of the water to cool the air, and the cooling effect caused by maximum air velocity and air volume. Kooler-Aire use fans of the multivane type designed to handle large volumes of air noiselessly. A patented hydraulic clutch speed regulator can be applied to the fan regardless of whether it is a.c. or d.c. current; within a reasonable distance it can be manipulated as remote control; it permits any adjustment of speed practically from no speed to maximum speed. Another feature of Kooler-Aire is a patented two-directional, adjustable delivery louver, which permits accurate adjustment for uniform distribution.

Kooler-Aire ventilation is fundamentally ventilation by displacement, not by diffusion or recirculation. With this system a positive pressure is built up in the theatre, which results in the air being forced out through doors or other openings (exfiltration), instead of seeping into the theatre through all openings (infiltration).

Magic-Weather System

• Air-Washing, cooling, filtering, purifying and ventilation are included in the air conditioning equipment marketed by the Scott Ballantyne Company of Omaha, under the name of "Magic-Weather." The fans are entirely of metal construction. Air passage through an impellor is not constricted, and the impellor is electrically welded throughout. Air intake of fan is from both sides.

Fan shafts are of shaft steel and are equipped with self-aligning heavy-duty bearings. Fans can be installed in various positions as desired for proper air direction. Variable-speed controls and motors are supplied when specified. All fans are treated with rust-proof aluminum.

Air washers are equipped with self-cleaning nozzles. Capacity is from 5,000 to 40,000 cubic feet of air per minute, and from 30 to 150 gallons of water per minute. Air washers are supplied complete with motor and recirculating pump, and are made in sizes to accommodate various sizes of blower type fans. These air washers may be purchased with or without fans made by this manufacturer.

Supreme Equipment

• Blowers, air washers, diffusers and heater units are offered by the Supreme Heater and Ventilating Corporation of St. Louis, for cooling systems, ventilating systems and combinations to include heating. The blower is of slow-speed type equipped with a variable-speed motor having either a V-belt or endless flat belt drive. The air diffuser may be of either stationary or oscillating type. The air washer is of recirculated-water type.

The heating unit includes a heavy-duty steel furnace, a heater housing insulated with mineral rock wool, air filters, humidifier and thermostatic and humidistatic controls. Distribution is through the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers Association.

Sirocco Ventilation

• A theatre ventilating system combining air washing and distribution facilities is available under the trade name of Sirocco from the National Theatre Supply Company. The units are manufactured by the American Blower Corporation of Detroit. The system is designed especially for theatre ventilating and cooling and may be compactly installed on any level at the forward end of the auditorium (stage or screen area).

Provided are intake facilities from the outside leading to an air washer and to the blower mechanism for distribution. The washer is constructed of galvanized iron with a tank of heavy blue annealed steel plate welded at the seams. Eliminator plates are used for both wet plate cleaning and to bring the air into contact with the water. Each sheet is provided with double extension hooks on the air-emission edge for the purpose of catching entrained moisture. The spray manifold consists in a header of galvanized iron pipe fitted with brass nozzles, the latter located to keep the scrubber plates continuously awash. Water supply is regulated by a bronze float valve. The washer is designed to function with the Sirocco theatre fan, but may be adapted to fan systems already installed.

Ilg Air Distribution

• For ventilation of theatres, a system of fresh-air distribution without washing or dehumidification has been developed by the Ilg Electric Ventilating Company of Chicago. An installation of this type ordinarily includes one or more Ilg ventilators of capacity to change the air once in every period of from one to two minutes.

The air is drawn from the rear of the auditorium over the audience and through attic space. The principle is that the air drawn into the theatre and distributed over the audience carries the heat generated by the patrons away from them, and that drawing the air into the attic space permits the heat usually collected there to be drawn out of the theatre.

Mechanical Refrigeration

• Complete air conditioning equipment developed for theatres by the York Ice Machinery Corporation of York, Pa., consists in air washer and fans, carbon dioxide refrigerating equipment, duct system, exhaust system for projection room and lounges and heating facilities. Installations vary in detail according to the type and location of the theatre, but a recent installation indicates the basic method.

This installation was designed to give a comfort condition in the auditorium of 80 degrees dry bulb, and not over 44% relative humidity when the outside dry bulb did not exceed 95 degrees with a 75 degree wet bulb (condition for 2,200 occupied seats). A maximum of 13,200 cubic feet of outside air per minute is provided for ventilation purposes.

The washer has the usual spray nozzles, inlet deflectors and eliminators, with carbon dioxide evaporator coils.

The fan has a capacity of 66,000 cubic feet of air per minute. The motor is 30 horsepower, variable speed. Refrigerating equipment consists in a two-cylinder, vertical compressor directly connected to a 100-horsepower synchronous motor having flywheel effect in rotor; a shell-and-tube carbon dioxide condenser, evaporator coils of low-resistance type adapted to operation on flooded, recirculation principle, and the necessary suction and discharge traps.

The remainder of the installation consists in the duct system (supply through galvanized ducts to upper area of auditorium, return through concrete ducts under the auditorium with mushroom intakes); exhaust system for projection and lounge areas, heating equipment, thermometers recording temperature of air at various points in system, and control devices.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE CONDUCTED BY PETER M. HULSKEN, A. I. A.

The Question:

I AM THINKING of building a theatre on a lot 50x120 feet, with stores on the ground floor at each side of the lobby. We have a population of nearly 8,000, and are serviced by a very rundown theatre. The surrounding district is good.

I have in mind erecting a house with 500 seats—nothing elaborate about the finish—and according to the experience of others, I feel that $25,000 would build and equip such a house.

The stage would be built to accommodate local talent shows—one 18x30 feet would be large enough. Brick and tile is the construction I had in mind, with a sloping floor.—S. E. N.

The Answer:

I SINCERELY believe that your city of 8,000 inhabitants easily can support another new theatre, the more since you state that the existing theatre is in a very rundown condition. Even if this condition did not exist, the percentage would be still in your favor, as I do not think that 900 seats are too many for a city of that size and its surrounding communities. The lot, being 50x120 feet, is large enough for a 500-seat capacity, provided there is an alley or court in the rear for exit purposes.

The width of the entrance should not be less than 16 feet, leaving a space of 15 feet, 6 inches for the width of the stores on each side of the lobby. Make the depth of the stores 25 feet. The lobby would then be 16x22 feet inside. Plan for a foyer 12 feet wide, with toilet rooms on each end.

The best plan for the seating layout would be to place 12 seats in a center section, with an aisle on each side, and two wall sections of 6 seats each across. This would require 22 rows and leave ample space for a stage of 18 feet in depth.

I do not believe that $25,000 would be quite sufficient to build and fully equip such a theatre. For instance, the projection and sound equipment alone would cost about $4,500 even if you bought rebuilt apparatus. The seats would cost at least $3,500, so with other items, such as carpets, drapes, lighting fixtures, etc., you would have to spend around $10,000, which would hardly leave enough for the building proper. My advice is to raise your budget to $30,000, and you will not be disappointed when the actual bids come in.

As to the source of plans and working blueprints, these would have to come from an architect, and preferably from one who has had experience in designing motion picture theatres.

NOTE:

IN THIS department Better Theatres will be glad to answer questions pertaining to the preliminary consideration involved in the planning of a new theatre or in the remodeling of an existing one. Only requests for ideas will be answered, since this department cannot assume the practical functions of an architect. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to "Better Theatres," 1790 Broadway, New York. They will be answered in this department. None will be answered by mail. Although only initials will be used in signing the questions published, it is a requirement that all letters bear the signature and address of their writers. The replies will be prepared personally by Mr. Hulsken, who is a practical architect and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

The Question:

I HAVE a lot 40 feet wide by 100 feet long that I wish to erect a theatre on. I want this theatre to seat approximately 375 on the lower floor, and a balcony to seat approximately 150. Want a small stage and separate entrance for balcony from side of building. This building is to be constructed of brick, and would appreciate you advising me the minimum amount it will cost to construct such a building, including material and cost of labor. Also advise approximate height of ceiling necessary, and where you would advise having my plans drawn and at what cost.—M. A.

The Answer:

YOUR LOT, being 100 feet long and 40 feet wide, is not any too large for the erection of a theatre of the seating capacity you are planning, but I believe it can be accomplished. Make the lobby 14 feet deep, and the foyer 8 feet wide. The maximum number of seats obtainable across the width of the auditorium will be 18, so to accommodate 375 seats on the lower floor will require 22 rows, or 55 feet. If you make the stage 10 feet deep and allow for wall thickness, there will be 10 feet left for the space between stage and front row of seats, and that certainly is not too much.

For an auditorium with a balcony, the ceiling height at the high point of the lower floor should not be less than 25 feet. The minimum cost of such a building of fireproof construction and exclusive of nearly all equipment would approximate $24,000.

The Question:

I HAVE a small theatre seating 209 in this town, which has a population of 1,030. Also this town happens to have the only show in an area of 40 miles.

Would be forced to build as cheap as possible, but at the same time would want to erect a substantial, plain, small-town showhouse that would seat about 325 or 350 people.

There are several building lots any size desired available at a very reasonable figure and I would like to know what is considered the ideal or model plan for a house of this size.—J. M. O.

The Answer:

I ADVISE you to have your architect design an interior that will look large and roomy without wasting any cubical contents, and to do away with all resemblance to a store-room picture show. The smaller the span between the side walls the less the construction cost, but the proportion between the width and length of the seating capacity should be proper.

I never advise the use of a center aisle if it can be avoided, as it takes the space for the best seats in the theatre. Therefore I recommend for a 350 seating capacity the plan of a center section with 13 or 14 seats across the width of the auditorium with a wall aisle on each side. This will establish the width of the building at 32 feet, and it will require a length of 126 feet.

Should you desire a shorter building, you could make the auditorium wider by planning wall sections of from two to four seats across, but I do not think it advisable. Plan for a nice lobby about 14 feet wide, with an outside ticket booth and an 8-foot foyer across the width of the auditorium.

Do not make the ceiling height in the auditorium less than 18 feet, and 9 feet in lobby. Such a theatre can be made very attractive at very moderate costs.

means input to the fan). By doubling the fan speed the horsepower is increased eight times.

INCREASING FAN SPEED

Summarizing these laws with an example: Take a ventilating system which has a complicated system of ducts, much internal resistance and too many curves and bends, and a sufficient quantity of air is not reaching the auditorium. By changing pulleys on the motor and the fan the speed of the fan is to be doubled. Then the capacity becomes doubled, the static pressure becomes four times greater, and these two conditions will overcome the resistance in the ducts to a greater extent and give more air in the auditorium is certain. Now according to the third law it is going to cost eight times more to operate that fan. The input horsepower has been increased eight times. In the case of a large fan this represents a substantial increase in cost. It naturally follows that there are a number of things to consider before rushing into a speeding-up process. A few are mentioned here as a warning:

ADDED FACTORS

1. Increasing the static pressure by four may produce a loud roaring noise in the ducts.

2. Doubling the capacity due to faulty distribution within the auditorium or badly located delivery points may produce drafty conditions far more objectionable than the original situation cited above.

3. The fan may be of very old design, with worn bearings or a scored shaft which will cause loud mechanical noises when the speed is doubled.

4. It is very likely that the present motor won't carry the load, because the load is increasing eight times.

All details such as these must be checked carefully before pulleys are changed to increase fan speeds.

There are several other types of fans, but as none of them are recommended for theatre ventilation a description of them is omitted here.

FAN DRIVE

The next important consideration is the method of driving the fan. Of course in all theatre ventilating the electric motor supplies the driving power. It is perhaps more general practice to use a belt-connected motor than direct-connected motor. Where belts are used those of the multi-V type are to be recommended.

To meet the varying conditions resulting from seasonable changes it is very convenient to have a method of adjusting the speed of the fan without the trouble of changing pulleys. This is generally accomplished by using two or three speeds—variable speed motors. If the theatre is located in a direct current zone, the problem of various speeds of the motor is greatly simplified. Direct current motors can be operated at most any ordinary fan speed. Direct current motors are more adaptable to direct connection to the fan than to alternating current motors.

Small fans may be driven by single-phase motors, but in cases where 3 horsepower or more is required, three-phase motors are more generally specified. Slow-speed, alternating current motors are much more expensive than high-speed motors, and they make much more noise. In selecting a motor for driving a fan, choose one with a horsepower rating at least 25% greater than the requirements of the fan as furnished by the fan manufacturer; this reserve capacity often comes in very handy.

The term ventilating is often heard coupled with the term heating—heating and ventilating. They really go hand in hand. Remarks in connection with heating have been deliberately omitted from this article. This has been presented primarily to aid in the approach and solution of the problems to be met with this coming summer. A careful re-reading of this article, and the one in the March 10th issue of BETTER THEATRES, plus the reviewing of the four charts and descriptive matter which appeared last summer in this same publication, should give the owner or manager a ground work in ventilation and air conditioning sufficient to be of great help in planning improvements in the present equipment and lay-out, or in the selection of new equipment.

It is sincerely hoped that the detail included herein will be helpful, not only from the standpoint of improvements or new installations, but also in getting the most out of the equipment at hand. A sincere interest in ventilation or air conditioning on the part of the manager will inspire the engineer to constant effort to find ways and means to improve conditions in the theatre. On the other hand, an attitude on the part of the manager of "let well enough alone" is not conducive to extra effort or progressive application on the part of any of the theatre staff.

A few thermometers, including some wet bulb thermometers, the careful overhauling of equipment, a few minor changes, or the installation of dampers or directional louvers or baffles, with the intelligent application of the principles set forth herein, may improve the conditions in the auditorium 100%.

Outside atmospheric conditions are changing continuously; such changes must be met by adjustment of the ventilating equipment, therefore the proper ventilating of a theatre is a continuous job, from before the opening of the box office until the last patron leaves in the evening.

DETERMINING YOUR OWN NEEDS

AN ANALYSIS of the summer conditions that existed in New York City in 1933 should be helpful at this time to all managers. It will serve to show the data which should be compiled by all theatres. The accompanying tabulation is of course outside conditions and was obtained from the Weather Bureau.

A comparison of inside conditions in any theatre with outside conditions at approximately the same time will show exactly what is being accomplished by the ventilating system. It is desirable to point out that summer weather is not necessarily uncomfortable weather, and that if ventilating plants could maintain conditions inside the theatre equal at all times to outside conditions there would then be only about one out of five days that the theatre would suffer from atmospheric conditions.

The air in a theatre is of course confined and shut off from the effects of the air currents and agitation that takes place in the free air of the open outdoors. It is reasonable to believe that the more rapid the rate of air change within the theatre the more nearly will outside conditions be maintained in the theatre. This conclusion is arrived at without consideration of the cooling effect of an air washer or mechanical or ice refrigeration.

So from another point of view it is possible to appreciate the great value in ventilation of volume of air and rate of air change.

CAPACITY FACTORS

It is important to call attention to this fact. The use of the principle of rapid air change based upon say 60 cubic feet per minute per seat to large theatres of 2,000 seats and over, is almost impossible. There are limiting factors in fan sizes and duct sizes, and available space for fans and duct work necessary to handle such large quantities of air. A 2,000-seat house would require 120,000 cubic feet of air per minute, a 3,000-seat house 180,000, and a 4,000-seat house would require 240,000 cubic feet per minute.

The accompanying tabulation is from data furnished by the Weather Bureau. All readings were taken at 3 p.m. each day. This hour was selected because it represented approximately the time of matinee peak business, and also the reading, if not representing the actual maximum conditions for the day, were very close. All readings were taken in the shade and about 6½ feet above ground level.

WHAT TABLE SHOWS

Now follow down the effective temperature columns for each month in the accompanying tabulation, and note all effective temperatures of 78 or higher. There are two days in May, nine days in June, eleven days in July, seven days in August, and four days in September: a total of 33 days throughout the whole summer. It is interesting to note that on the great majority of these 33 days the relative humidity was comparatively very low, which would indicate that an air washer (without refrigeration) would undoubtedly have brought the effective temperature well within the comfort zone.

Of the entire season, June 29 and 30, August 13, and September 9 and 17 present the greatest problem in the theatre. This is a total of five days in five months when refrigeration could have been used to excellent advantage. In the light of these facts, how could the owner of a theatre of less than 2,000 seats be justified in making an investment in refrigerated air conditioning with its contingent heavy operating costs?

SELECTING EQUIPMENT

In theatres of less than 2,000 seats, refrigerated air conditioning will cost from $12 to $18 per seat to install and will probably cost from $8 to $12 per day to operate (not figuring labor, but only power, water and maintenance). Ventilation with an air washer for a theatre of less than 2,000 seats will probably cost from $3 to $6 per seat to install, and probably from $3 to $6 a day to operate.

These figures in both cases can probably be reduced somewhat in the actual installation of a job in a particular theatre, and they are only given here for what help they might be to the owner who is trying to make up his mind what to do.

The suggestion is made that if theatre managers will keep tabulations simlar to the one reproduced here for conditions outside (at the fresh air intake), and the resulting conditions inside the theatre, at approximately the time of peak business each day (when conditions are at their worst), such information will be invaluable in arriving at a decision to make major changes in the ventilating system. Such data will remove much of the guessing and speculation from the question, "Shall it be ventilation, or refrigerated air conditioning?"

proximately 10 feet of height for the entrance effect.

The roof could be completely framed with wood members resting on a light steel frame (See Figure 2). This type of construction tends to eliminate large-span, heavy steel across the auditorium and reduces side wall masonry height. Ordinary roofing materials are thereby substituted for the otherwise additional side wall masonry height.

INTERIOR FINISH

THE BROKEN sectional form (See Figure 2) gives a good architectural line to the interior besides having its practical uses. No more than a simple plaster finish on metal lath over the wood framing supports, and a simple indirect light treatment is necessary to obtain an effective interior.

Acoustical wall finish is usually necessary only on the rear walls receiving the direct sound from the horns in the smaller theatre. The side walls above the break will not need special acoustic treatment if they are made at slightly converging angles toward the screen. These angles destroy the possibility of parallel reflection. The ceiling should be kept flat and simple, with only one or two flat breaks in the plaster to relieve the mass. Ornamental plaster and false beam effects should by all means be avoided. Wood mouldings forming panels are also of no real decorative value and should likewise be avoided.

No painting is necessary in the auditorium interior (other than a painted dark wainscot 4 feet in height to prevent smearing or defacing of walls, and a portion of the walls and ceiling near the screen to minimize reflection from the screen). A surprisingly good effect can be obtained with a little colored light on white plaster walls, and considerable money can be saved thereby. Ornamental painting is only necessary to cover up the faults of the basic forms. The well proportioned and functionally designed interior needs only an appropriate lighting effect for an effective scheme of decoration.

henna. To save expense, all ceilings throughout the building were decorated with water colors, all other decorations being executed in oil.

EXIT CORRIDORS

Exit corridors to the alley, 5 feet in width, were provided at either side of the stage. Over the corridor on one side a fan room, equipped with a blower fan already owned by Brown, provided summer ventilation, and on the opposite side an air shaft ascended from the basement heating plant to the auditorium for use in both summer ventilation and winter heating. Vertical blades or diffusers were installed in the openings above the exit corridor doors, these being decorated in a neat manner to form an ornamental treatment. This did away with the expense of grilles, and removed all obstacles to the proper flow of air.

PROSCENIUM

The proscenium opening [see accompanying cross section] was 26 feet in width by 17 feet in height, opening on to a stage 12 feet in depth. The screen was set about 4 feet from the rear stage wall, which allowed space for acts or announcements without disturbing the screen or sound equipment.

HEATING PLANT

The space under the stage accommodated a hot air heating system using a fan of sufficient size to serve as an auxiliary for summer ventilation.

EQUIPMENT

Six weeks after the first mechanic began work on the original building, Brown commenced moving his equipment into the new structure. Screen, sound equipment, seating, carpets, draperies and fans were transferred from the leased house to the one he was entering as owner.

Eight weeks from the beginning of construction found the new theatre's doors open to the public, with a loss of only two weeks in which Brown failed to show his regularly scheduled pictures.

Since Brown had financially interested a good-sized cross section of the town's population in his new undertaking, they naturally patronized the show in his remodeled theatre rather than that in his competitor's house, feeling a personal interest in seeing him succeed in his investment.

In the year just past Brown has made steady inroads into the load of debt under which he opened his enterprise and is proving that his townsmen's faith in him was fully justified. He finds that in adding up his total costs, in addition to the $8,000 paid for the original building, he has spent only $14,700. He entered on this most recent phase of his career as a theatre operator in the face of a lost lease, a severe winter, and the worst depression in history, and has come out of the experiment a successful theatre owner, with an attractive and up-to-date building, erected at a time when labor and materials had hit rock bottom.

He also reckons among his assets the continuing goodwill of the merchants, mechanics and material men of the town.

In closing this true story of one exhibitor's ingenuity and grit in the face of many obstacles, it might be pointed out that where any exhibitor owns or has a long lease on a theatre building which has walls and roof in good condition, with considerable salvage material such as plumbing, wiring, and various other materials which can be reused to good advantage, there is no reason why he may not accomplish the same results which Brown obtained with the old garage.

uses a double-stage air washer supplied by 45 deg. well water from a 500-g.p.m. deep well pump. Humidity and temperature control are provided automatically.

It is probably the only theatre of its kind in the country as to its unusual lighting facilities. The entire theatre, including the foyer, is illuminated by indirect neon trough lighting. No tubing is visible to the eye. (See accompanying detail.) The intensity of the light was carefully studied under test panels until the right amperage was arrived at in the transformer sizes. The pilasters are constructed of ordinary galvanized iron lacquered to preserve their luster. The reflecting neon light makes for a most unusual effect as a running light during the picture. Whether by accident or pre-determination, we have obtained a daylight picture in this house which leaves the patron at perfect ease during the performance. The house is well lighted without apparent loss of brilliance as to picture screen luminosity. With further experimentation the possibilities of this type of "running light" should make a radical change in theatre projection illumination and patron comfort. As to its economy of operating cost, the total wattage consumed does not exceed 500 watts for the entire auditorium.

As to its acoustics, a wall treatment of decorated acoustic celotex panelling was employed, which resulted in a very effective color scheme also. From a decorative point of view the Architects exercised restraint in the application of ornament, with the result that mass, proportion and wall surface became the dominant features of the design. There is a certain sense of comfort when the eye is treated to a quiet restful design as compared to the highly gilded and over-lacquered, cubistic-grotesqueness of the so-called "modernistic" motifs, too often employed in our theatres. Good taste, good proportion and good color, still holds good whether the architect chooses to express his design in the modern functional forms, or whether he resorts to the older traditional styles based on reason and restraint.

The lobby and foyer walls are treated in patterned Japanese Balsa wood veneer, which is waxed or varnished and presents a very durable wall finish. The ceiling illumination is enhanced by the warm colorings of the walls. The general lounge is carried out in a series of modern wall murals.

A rather unusual marquee was developed for this theatre. The changeable letters are band-sawed of wood and illuminated by indirect neon trough tubing (see detail) making possible a two-color effect on each letter. The letters, on account of their deep shadows, are visible to a great distance.

Although the marquee is 66 feet long at the outer edge, and the illumination is visible to a great distance, the total electrical energy consumed is not over 20 kilowatts, including all exterior lighting. This is an extremely low consumption of current considering the effects obtained.

The complete reconstruction, in spite of a rising building market, unusual features of plan and building conditions, was accomplished for about $35,000, exclusive of seating and projection equipment. The entire project was completed in seventy working days, using two shifts of workmen in order to spread employment to the greatest number under NRA. The owner is Joseph Friedman of St. Paul.

picture cameras worked out in terrazzo shooting rays of light directed toward each of the wall display cases. All hardware and electric fixtures in the theatre are chromium-plated.

The foyer as shown on the floor plan is an entirely new addition to the theatre, extending across the entire width of the auditorium. It is decorated in salmon pink and silver. The wall treatment consists of horizontal bands of solid color, full deep salmon at the floor grading into light pink at the ceiling. The adjacent bands of color are separated by narrow strips of silver. The cornice between the ceiling and walls is silver and green. The furniture is of chromium plated tubular metal with tan tweed upholstery.

The circulation in the auditorium has been changed and new seats have been installed. Acoustical tile was applied to the rear wall, increasing the acoustical efficiency so that the sound is excellent. The side walls are decorated with a scene in a poplar grove done in the modern manner, with greens and burnt sienna shades predominating. The ceiling is decorated to represent a sky.

The toilets have tile walls and terrazzo floors harmonizing in color and design. The men's washroom is finished in green and black, and the women's restroom is in green and white. All plumbing fixtures are of a color to match the decorative scheme.

Money was spent only for essentials. Decorative effects were attained, not through lavish expenditures on applied ornament, but by well studied functional design and the use of color and light.

to the buyer that it is his duty to make a full disclosure."

However, this rule of the law never is applicable, unless it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that silence on the part of the seller or his authorized agent actually induced the theatre owner to make the sales contract and, further, that the latter was deceived by the seller's silence.

Generally, an implied warranty is valid if the buyer relied upon the manufacturer's good judgment to furnish something which would fulfill the special purpose. A very recent higher court case (140 S. E. 653), explained the law on the subject, as follows:

"When one contracts to supply an article, in which he deals, to be applied to a particular purpose, so that the buyer necessarily trusts to the judgment or skill of the vendor, there is an implied warranty that it shall be reasonably fit for the purpose to which it is to be applied, and the better doctrine is that this rule applies to dealers as well as to manufacturers, and not to manufacturers alone."

WHEN CONTRACT MAY BE CANCELLED

THE PRINCIPLE of the law is firmly established that both a theatre owner and a seller are bound to fulfill the precise terms of a sales agreement. In other words, the instant one party breaches any part of the contract the other party is privileged to cancel the contract and he has choice of doing either of these three things: (1) He may refuse to continue on the contract and sue the other party for damages equal to his financial loss resulting from the breach; or (2) he may file suit and compel the other party to fulfill the exact terms of the agreement; or (3) he may notify the other of latter's breach and agree to make a supplementary con-

Also, it is interesting to observe that as previously mentioned, various courts have held that a theatre owner is privileged to cancel a straight order given a salesman at any time up to the moment the seller sends a letter or telegram acknowledging the order. In other words, an order given a salesman for merchandise is merely an offer on the part of the theatre owner.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 115, No. 3 April 14, 1934

DEMAND IN CENSOR'S MASK

THE motion picture industry, more specifically the production sector of this industry, is confronted today with two major and impressively important expressions of a great unsatisfied market for screen merchandise.

Those manifestations are embodied in the movement represented by the Motion Picture Research Council, and the Catholic movement for screen decency now making itself manifest from pulpits across the nation and presently to take other aggressive forms of effort.

It is the characteristic, and perhaps natural, reaction of the motion picture industry always to resent and endeavor to fend off such external pressures, invariably interpreting them as interference. But that is not necessarily an accurate measure of their real meaning.

These movements, like many that have gone before and many others that the years to come will doubtless bring, take what real strength they may have or muster out of representation of customers, of buying power.

The real reason that so many women have always been so readily enlisted in drives for film censorship, "white lists," "film selection" groups and the like is that women are mothers and all mothers want the whole world made safe for children.

If some workable method could be found of supplying the demand for pictures for youth to those who demand them and to collect a fair return for the effort, a very large part of the perennial censorship agitation would be ended. Unhappily, it now costs too much to make, distribute and exhibit pictures solely for children. But the motion picture industry has never devoted itself to the problem. It might pay quite as well as some other experiments in showmanship.

In addition to the impulses and interests of motherhood there are other realms of unserved demand. There are, for instance, a great many thousands of persons who have no burning objection to any sort of high-spiced dramatic wares, but who do not consider them as the backbone of their amusement diet. There are a great many more ways to spend a rainy Sunday than have ever been revealed to Hollywood.

It is clear, painfully clear, that if there could be a reasonably consistent supply of motion pictures satisfactory to these people there would be a slackening of their pressures, through the leadership of agitators, against the production machine. If any consumer gets what he wants he is much less likely to give a hoot about what else may be in the market.

Hollywood assumes too absolutely that the human race is controlled entirely by glands. In some portions of it, portions with buying power, the glands are in some degree under the controls of mind, culture and convention. Stories can be found, had and exploited in that area—also.

ASLEEP AT THE DESK

IN the course of a pungent discussion of the current state of affairs among the newsreels, Mr. Don Hancock of Film Daily observes with considerable pith and point, that:

> . . . . . No one is doing anything to elevate any one newsreel to such heights that it will stand head and shoulders above all competitors. . . . Competition among newsreels seems to be an inside secret. Something that the editorial offices smugly claim but something that fails to be evident in practice or profit. . . .

Mr. Hancock's observations are accurate enough as to the surface of the status quo, but, as this writer has pointed out before, the newsreels were really put to sleep by the time trading contract jugglers of the Broadway circuit buyers' offices and the distributors' sales managers. A newsreel sold alone and on its merits would possibly be encouraged to develop some. Newsreels today sell approximately in the ratio of the features with which they travel. Under current methods of distribution and selling a newsreel fifty per cent the best in the field would not enjoy a two per cent advantage.

In spite of this the newsreels have created a large share, perhaps the largest share, of such good will as the screen enjoys among audiences of intelligence.

EXCITED NOTHINGS

THE corybantic excitements of the microphone maestros covering sports events for the radio cause the New York Times to complain that they are "something worse than comic . . . robbing the event of its inherent drama which imagination supplies." And that goes too for the talk strip commentators and expositors of the eternally talking news and sport reels, for a large part of the audience. Even Mae West leaves something to the imagination.

THE addition of Mr. Richard Rowland to the production forces of RKO is a step likely to receive the general approbation of showmen and likely to prove a considerable reinforcement to that organization of aggressive adventuring young picture makers. It hardly need be observed that Mr. Rowland is and long has been a considerable adventurer himself with several high marks along the production career that began with the first Metro.

THIS WEEK----

U. S. IN CHICAGO

The federal government stepped into the Chicago theatre situation this week when two Federal Trade Commission operatives heard numerous complaints cited by members of the newly formed Independent Theatre Owners' Association at the Stevens hotel. The operatives' attention is being directed especially toward the circumstances which led up to the elimination of double bills. Exchanges must show material relative to circuit protection. . . .

On first run theatres of Delaware will fall the larger share of a new tax, if a bill introduced into the legislature at Wilmington, calling for a levy of 10 cents per hundred feet of film or fraction thereof, becomes law. With the tax to be paid but once on each reel, first runs naturally will be hit first—and hardest. . . .

PARAMOUNT IN REICH

As long as German trade conditions continue as they are Paramount will not withdraw from the country, it was indicated last week following conferences between John W. Hicks, Paramount International head, and Adolph Zukor, Paramount head. The company may withdraw, however, if conditions become more difficult. . . .

QUITTNER APPEAL

Finally winning a point, Joseph Quittner, former Middletown, N. Y., exhibitor, this week was granted the right, by the U. BROADCASTERS ORGANIZE RAID ON HOLLYWOOD FILM TALENT

By FRED AYER

The radio broadcasting industry is organizing its resources to establish Hollywood as an important center for talent for commercial radio productions.

Two new steps taken this week by the leading air chains and pointing in that direction were these:

Columbia Broadcasting System launched a west coast division, with headquarters in Los Angeles, to build, service and organize programs.

RKO formed a stock company of motion picture players for regular featuring in broadcasts.

The Columbia System has just transferred Peter deLima, former executive of its Artists' Bureau, to Los Angeles, where he will assist in building, servicing and organizing radio programs, planned for nationwide broadcasts to originate over station KHJ, Los Angeles.

COMPLETE COMMERCIAL SERVICE WITH HOLLYWOOD STARS IS AIM

"With increasing frequency the Columbia Broadcasting System seeks to apply Hollywood star power and its tremendous latent audience appeal to commercial treatment," said Julien Field, director of the Columbia commercial program division in New York. "It will be the function of the West Coast division to establish availability, to ascertain contractual obligations, to make available a reliable source of information—in short, to provide a complete commercial service in this richly talented community."

Mr. Field said that while he did not believe Hollywood would take precedence over New York as the center of all broadcasting activity, its potentialities as a talent center no longer could be disregarded by the broadcasters and the advertising agencies. Public demand also has had considerable to do with Columbia's project, he said, pointing out that mail from listeners during the past year had emphasized the fact that they wanted more than occasional interviews with film stars and that regular dramatic programs featuring film stars were desired.

RKO FORMS STUDIO STOCK COMPANY FOR "HOLLYWOOD ON AIR" PROGRAM

"This indicates," Mr. Field said, "that people are fed up with the 'hello, momma' and 'hello, poppa' type of broadcast from Hollywood luminaries. They want more than just to hear a voice. They want dyed-in-the-wool action, and a few commercial programs with film people during the past two years have demonstrated that this is entirely feasible and should be popular."

In addition to the Columbia project, the National Broadcasting Company is paving the way for organization of commercial film star broadcasts with its own studio on the RKO Radio lot in Hollywood. RKO this week announced formation of a stock company composed of RKO players to be featured regularly each week on the "Hollywood on the Air" program, a sustaining feature of the entire network. Thus film exhibitors are to

Sponsored Programs

Regularly sponsored programs — not including those commercials which feature interviews only—on which motion picture stars appear, include Bing Crosby, Woodbury facial soap; Dick Powell and Ted Fiorito, Old Gold cigarets, and Groucho and Chico Marx, American Oil Company. All these are on the Columbia network.

On the NBC chain Irene Rich is appearing for Welch's Grape Juice; Eddie Cantor and Jimmie Durante for Chase & Sanborn coffee; Will Rogers and George M. Cohan on the Good Gulf gasoline hour.

In addition to these there are several "interview" programs which are sponsored, most widely known among them being the Charis Corset Company's program, on which Louella Parsons interviews celebrities each week, over the Columbia network; Borden Milk Company's "45 Minutes in Hollywood."

Pathe Holders to Act on Webb Plan

Pathe Exchange, Inc., stockholders will be asked at the annual meeting April 24, to consider and take action on a proposal of the board of directors that Stuart W. Webb, president, can purchase shares of common stock not exceeding 12,500 at $2 per share each year over a four-year period, and not exceeding 3,000 shares of Class A preference stock at $12 per share in each over a three-year period. In addition to this, the annual election of officers and company directors will take place.

The company's annual report, made public last week, stated that a plan of reorganization, equitable to all classes of stockholders, is to be worked out during this year and that, with this in view, a registration application under the Securties Act of 1933 is now in course of preparation for filing with the Federal Trade Commission.

ADVERTISING AGENCIES EXPAND UNITS

face further elaboration of the radio competition of which they have been complaining for two and one-half years. To date there have been comparatively few regularly sponsored radio programs featuring film players, the majority of such "appearances" having been confined to interviews, with occasional dramatic performances on such commercial broadcasts as the Rudy Vallee-Fleischman's Yeast hour on Thursday evenings.

PLAYERS' CONTRACTS NOW MORE FLEXIBLE

Commercial sponsors have been wary of Hollywood, insofar as the establishment of stars on regular commercial programs was concerned, factors being contractual complications and the ever-present necessity for avoiding all semblance of "raiding."

However, despite widespread exhibitor agitation against radio appearances, the contracts of many stars and players are now more flexible. A great many have specific clauses in their contracts which permit them to work for a certain number of months each year on the New York stage; still others have definite arrangements which permit of radio broadcasts, and added to these is the fact that there are more important freelance players in Hollywood today not under contract than ever before.

SPONSORED PROGRAMS FOUGHT BY EXHIBITORS

Exhibitors have been fighting advertised radio appearances of film stars for several years, protesting that such broadcasts kept prospective patrons from the theatres, even in instances where the program was only an interview. Sponsored appearances have been few and far between, but those which have been regular features of the air have added further to the exhibitors' complaints.

Such broadcasts as the Eddie Cantor-Chase & Sanborn program at 8 o'clock on Sunday nights have been the target of exhibitor opposition for some time, as have the Will Rogers broadcast, the Bing Crosby program and a few others, all of which are regularly commercial broadcast features.

Organized commercial competition as now is being projected, however, had been considered only a remote possibility.

RKO RADIO STARS IN NEW STOCK COMPANY

The National Broadcasting Company—a subsidiary of Radio Corporation of America—and RKO Radio Pictures, also an RCA subsidiary, have broken the ice in cooperation on a regular basis between the broadcasters and the screen with their announcement that 12 screen stars and featured players are being banded together on the Radio Pictures' lot to form the nucleus of a radio-film stock company.

REGULAR FEATURE OF WEEKLY PROGRAM

The work of this stock company will be a regular feature of the "Hollywood On the Air" program broadcast each Monday night over the NBC network and on station WEAF, New York. Included in the stock company, the organization of which probably marks the first complete partnership between the broadcasters and the screen for entertainment purposes, are William Collier, Jr., Chick Chandler, Tom Brown, Thelma White, Dorothy Grainger and others. From time to time it is expected that stars of the first magnitude will appear with this group.

NBC is known to have been "interested" in the possibilities of Hollywood as a potential talent source for some time and RKO Radio stars have figured more prominently on broadcasts than those of any other company. For many months the RKO Theatre of the Air was a popular program over the NBC links, and M. H. Aylesworth on more than one occasion has said that as time went on both amusement corporations—NBC and RKO Radio—would be developed with the ultimate goal of each one helping the other in all possible ways.

NBC has an extensive organization in Los Angeles and in San Francisco, but it has been indicated from time to time by NBC executives in New York that all of the company's extra-organization insofar as film broadcasting is concerned will be strictly within RKO.

ADVERTISING AGENCIES ALSO EXPANDING UNITS

In addition to the Coast activities of the two major networks, such leading advertising agencies as J. Walter Thompson, one of the largest buyers of radio time, are expanding their organizations to Los Angeles, in much the same manner as is Columbia Broadcasting Company.

Another problem being faced by exhibitors is the attitude of the large film distributors themselves. For a long time the exploitation departments of the distributors have been utilizing the facilities of the networks for publicity purposes and have promoted radio appearances of their stars at the same time that exhibitors in the field were protesting against the practice. Sequences from pictures have been enacted over the air by the stars of the picture and these always have been widely publicized in advance in newspaper radio columns. Interviews with players on their latest pictures have swept the air from coast to coast.

ALL-STAR BROADCAST BY UNITED ARTISTS

The newest of these programs is the all-star broadcast planned by United Artists for April 14, at which time, on a nationwide hook-up, George Arliss, Constance Bennett, Ronald Colman, Jackie Cooper and Spencer Tracy will participate in an anniversary broadcast celebration for 20th Century Pictures. This program is to run a full hour. Mr. Arliss will re-enact a scene from his latest film, "The House of Rothschild," and Miss Bennett, Mr. Colman and Jackie Cooper will give bits from 20th Century pictures in which they have appeared. Fifty-nine stations will carry the one-hour broadcast.

Evidence that exhibitors will not "give up without a struggle" became apparent last week in Memphis when Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, told the Tri-State convention that the entire MPTOA membership, which he placed at between 7,000 and 8,000 theatres, had contemplated banning any film star who participated in radio broadcasts of any sort.

SMPE NUMBER WILL APPEAR APRIL 21

Celebrating the great contribution of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers to the development of the film art and business, the April 21st issue of Motion Picture Herald will be especially devoted to the activities of that organization. This SMPE Number will be current with the society's convention in Atlantic City, April 23-26.

Among special features of this issue will be articles by Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, president of the society, and Terry Ramsaye, editor of the Herald, also a Fellow of the Society and a member of various active committees, on the relationship of the organization to the practical affairs of the industry, and new plans for amplifying this relationship in the immediate future.

Next issue of Motion Picture Herald, the SMPE Number—dated April 21, out April 19. Forms close April 17.

CODE WILL BE ADJUSTED, ROSENBLATT TELLS MPTOA

Division Administrator, in Wire to Convention, Says Imperfections Will Be Corrected; Kuykendall Reelected President

By VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

Official admission by the Administration at Washington that the motion picture code contains imperfections, and a promise that these will be adjusted, were voiced on Wednesday by Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA Division Administrator, in a telegram from Capitol Hill to some 400 motion picture theatre owners assembled in the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles for the 14th annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Ed Kuykendall was re-elected president of the MPTOA in the quiet of an executive committee session, and then the convention was brought to the open floor where—"fireworks" ruled out—some of the representative exhibitors, distributors and producers delivered prepared discourses on timely motion picture topics.

Decision was made late Wednesday to extend the sessions through Friday and possibly into Saturday.

The net results of private committee hearings on individual complaints about this and that in exhibitor operations were not to be made public until late Thursday afternoon, when the determinations of the resolutions committee were to be placed before the convention as a whole for its rejection or approval.

Rosenblatt Wires Appreciation

Mr. Rosenblatt had been invited to attend, but wired regrets, expressing appreciation to the MPTOA for its support of the motion picture code. He said that the code improved relations between buyer and seller.

Mr. Kuykendall predicted that production and distribution will be divorced in the not too distant future. He intimated that the present relationship is impeding the progress of the exhibitor.

Parliamentary procedure was invoked in order to assure an orderly convention, devoid of the bickering which frequently has marked exhibitor conventions in the past. Seven committees held individual hearings daily in separate chambers on the most important problems of the exhibitor: labor, public relations, trade practices, legislation and taxes, community affairs, and the like.

Hollywood as a whole went exhibitor-minded for the week, wining and dining the buyers of their product and opening wide the studio gates so that these owners of theatres from California to New York might see at first hand how a motion picture is put together.

Deviating somewhat from the programs of previous exhibitor meetings, this week's convention witnessed a round-table discussion between producers, distributors and exhibitors. Each branch was heard from the convention floor.

Of importance to all theatre owners was the information given on Wednesday morning by Edward G. Levy, of New Haven, attorney and general counsel to the MPTOA, who outlined a legal catechism for exhibitors to be used in their everyday business. Mr. Levy warned exhibitors of various decisions which have established the theatre ticket as a revocable license, but one which does not permit of any discrimination by the owner against race, creed or color.

"The general legal rule with almost no dissent appears to be that the owner of a theatre is required to use reasonable care to keep his premises, appliances and amusement devices in a reasonably safe condition for persons attending the theatre," he said. "This applies to the following: falling rails of balconies, tripping over an umbrella placed in an aisle by a patron, tripping over carpets, slipping in toilet rooms, and the like.

"There is of recent origin a rule of law which holds the owner of the theatre responsible in damages for injuries arising from that which he might reasonably have anticipated."

Regarding accident responsibility, Mr. Levy said that the landlord—and many in the business lease their houses to others—is liable for accident damages secured against the tenant, unless a specific clause in the lease fixes the responsibility on the lessee.

Mr. Kuykendall, on Wednesday, in introducing Mr. Lawrence Cobb, chairman of the ways and means committee of the California legislature, said that trade publications should cease publishing box office receipts. He urged a "strong" resolution to eliminate the practice.

Closer Contacts Urged

Mr. Cobb spoke of the demands being made on state legislatures by outside forces to further tax all branches of the motion picture business as a result of information gleaned from published box office reports. Exhibitors everywhere should form closer contacts with state legislative branches for their own protection, Mr. Cobb said.

"No single phase of motion picture merchandising is so provocative to public ill will as the wrong kind of advertising," said Joseph I. Breen, of the Hollywood office of the MPPDA, in an address to the delegates Wednesday.

The industry's advertising code is the "Magna Charta" of motion picture advertisers, said Mr. Breen, who pointed out that the Advertising Advisory Council, headed by J. J. McCarthy, is reporting encouraging progress. "The Council recognizes that forceful ads are necessary, but they must be in good taste. You can't flaunt indecency and hope to get away with it," he said.

Mr. Breen told the exhibitors that the work of the Council "is right and important to the whole industry." He asked the exhibitors' cooperation by using as much as possible of the specially created ads of the larger companies which, he said, have been prepared by experts and "have been tested and found to be wholesome and free from offense." Mr. Breen concluded with the advice that each exhibitor's ad writer confer with another if doubt exists as to the propriety of copy.

Mayer Answers Exhibitors

Louis B. Mayer of MGM followed Mr. Breen, and severely chastised the exhibitors for criticizing Hollywood because, he said, they know nothing about the problems with which the studios are faced. He said it is impossible for all studios combined to deliver one hit every week.

"If you really wanted to see production you would have appointed rotating committees to visit the studios," he said. "Then

DEMAND "DECENCY" IN MOTION PICTURES

Appeals for "decency" in motion pictures came from several speakers on the floor of the MPTOA convention. Among them were these:

"It is not the function of the screen to moralize but we must adhere to the fundamentals of common decency. Injecting obscenities into what would otherwise be a clean picture must be stopped."—Ed Kuykendall, M. P. T. O. A. president.

"We women cannot keep interpreting the motion picture problem largely in terms of child life, though, personally, I believe that greater danger lies with the adolescent." — Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, studio relations department of the MPPDA.

"If coming to Hollywood to mingle with producers and players in an effort to impress them and bring about better pictures with less dirt is to be characterized as mingling with producers, then we are doing exactly that."—Fred S. Meyer, of Milwaukee, Chairman of Trade Practices Committee.

Mayer Says Exhibitors Forced Producers into Theatre Field; Breen Asks Cooperation of Showmen in Advertising Ethics

the right to criticism would have been yours."

Double and triple bills will wreck the business, he added.

Mr. Mayer covered a wider variety of subjects, ranging from his opinion that local autonomy should prevail in theatre operation to a defense of Hollywood and a discussion of the code.

"Make fine pictures and forget the code," said Mr. Mayer. "'The code and its restrictions are hurting the business' was what a well known director told me at the Academy one night. Because I respected his opinion I hired him and then asked how many millions he would require to supply a formula for producing only great attractions." He added that the producers were improving and were trying new ideas.

Deplores Dissension

"We don't understand each other," he said. "How else could there be dissension." He excoriated exhibitors for trying to beat down prices; he blamed them for forcing producers into theatres, saying it was either that "or the ocean, and they elected theatres." He charged exhibitors with "sitting around awaiting springtime and trade paper inserts in color to govern their buying" and with "deciding what they'll pay distributors in rentals."

When he said, "You decide you'll pay Paramount $7.50 and Metro $6.50," the laughter drowned out his next words.

Cecil B. DeMille talked next on how a picture is made. "You exhibitors," he said, "have heard it said that Hollywood is crowded. Hollywood is a desert when you're looking for brains. The brains are here, but they are all tied up."

Milwaukee was selected for the 1935 convention, to be held in May.

Comerford First Vice-President

Mr. Kuykendall's reelection came late Monday night at the annual meeting of the directors, preceding the opening of the convention. M. E. Comerford, of Pennsylvania, was reelected first vice-president; W. S. Butterfield, Michigan, was elected second vice president, succeeding Joseph Denniston, also of Michigan; M. A. Lightman is the new third vice-president, in place of Walter Vincent, of New York, who was elected treasurer; Ben Berinstein of California succeeded Love B. Harrell, of Georgia, as fourth vice-president, and A. Julian Brylawski of Washington, D. C., was reelected fifth vice-president; Fred Meyer, Wisconsin, continues as secretary; Edward G. Levy, Connecticut, was reelected general counsel, and Fred Wehrenberg, Missouri, again was named chairman of the board.

Mr. Kuykendall's election became apparent last week when no opposition slate developed.

The directors named Jules H. Michael, of Buffalo, as chairman of the grievance committee, succeeding Lewen Pizor, of Pennsylvania, who remained home because of illness.

Each of six national zones will elect their representatives to the governing board on Thursday. Each representative must be an unaffiliated exhibitor. Affiliated circuits as a whole elect one representative. The president and the secretary complete the roster.

Also scheduled for election on Thursday are the 27 members of the directorate, representing the 27 state and local MPTOA affiliates.

Arriving in special cars and a long special train, the delegates converged on Los Angeles early Monday morning, and spent the day getting acquainted and inspecting that part of southern California from which about 90 per cent of their screen product emanates. The only convention business of the day was the directors' meeting, which did not adjourn until nearly midnight, after electing officers and naming committees to hear complaints of exhibitor delegates.

Some 400 theatre owners, their friends and families, and representatives of producers, distributors and the public were at the Ambassador hotel.

Indorse Roosevelt Program

Ben Berinstein, head of southern California exhibitors, and convention chairman, opened the convention at about 10:30 Tuesday morning. Colonel Carlos Huntington, representing Governor Rolph, officially welcomed the delegates. He was followed by Mayor Shaw, of Los Angeles, who said that the industry had spent $135,000,000 and employed 30,000 Californians last year. M. A. Lightman, elected a vice-president and former national president, responded. M. E. Comerford then introduced Fred Meyer, of Milwaukee, who sponsored the first piece of convention business, a unanimous resolution indorsing the President's recovery program.

Mr. Kuykendall, president, and Secretary Meyer then read their reports for the year, which were followed by a general discourse of convention events, by Mr. Berinstein, and announcement of committees.

Tuesday at noon the delegates were luncheon guests of Warner Brothers at the Burbank studios, and later they inspected the plant. All studios were open throughout the week for inspection by delegates. Tuesday evening Carl Laemmle had the theatre owners out to Universal City for a dance and buffet supper.

Open Forum Follows Addresses

Mr. Kuykendall reopened the convention early on Wednesday, with the schedule calling for an address on "The Theatre's Liability to its Patrons," by Edward G. Levy; some comment on "What's the Matter with Exhibition from the Point of View of a Producer," by Louis B. Mayer, MGM. Mr. Mayer was to be answered by Walter Vincent, of New York on "What's the Matter with Production from the Point of View of an Exhibitor." Also on the speaker list were: "The Public's Attitude Towards Motion Pictures," by Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, Studio Relations Committee; "How Pictures Are Put Together," by Cecil Blount De Mille; "Meeting Exhibitors Half Way," by Carl Laemmle, and "Self Regulation in Advertising Motion Pictures," by Joseph I. Breen, of the producers' association.

An open forum followed, with various discourses on timely topics of production, distribution and exhibition.

Organized studio trips on Wesdnesday afternoon were followed in the evening by a combined producers' party, held at Metro's Culver City plant.

Thursday the principal topic was to be the code. W. L. Ainsworth, Wisconsin, was to start the discussion with an address on "What the Code Means to the Country Town Exhibitor," followed by Morgan Walsh's remarks on "What the Code Means to the Metropolitan Exhibitor," and then an open forum on all code matters conducted by Mr. Kuykendall. The report of the MPTOA code labor committee, was expected to be the most important subject, accompanied by the following:

Cut Rate Competition.
Zoning and Clearance.
Premiums.
Overbuying.
Rejection Privileges.
Double Features.
Labor, Jack Miller presiding and including: Two Operators in the Booth, Minimum Wage Scales, Maximum Hours, Conditions of Employment, Racketeering and Intimidation by Labor Organizers.

The resolutions committee was then to take the convention floor. Following were to come reports by other convention committees, then the installation of officers, and adjournment sine die.

Final trips to the studios will be made Thursday afternoon, and in the evening the convention will be climaxed by a banquet and speeches by leading film, civic, governmental and business leaders, including Will H. Hays, Ed Kuykendall, O. O. McIntyre, Mayor Rossi, Marie Dressler, Dr. A. H. Giannini and others. On the original speakers' schedule the following also were named: Senator Hiram Johnson and Senator William McAdoo, both of California; Hon. Frank C. Walker, head of the President's Emergency Council; General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA Administrator, Will Rogers and Sol Rosenblatt, NRA Division Administrator.

Centralized Operation Attacked

Putting himself on record as being definitel opposed to any policy of centralized theatre operation from New York, Ed Kuykendall, president, told the 14th annual convention that theatres in all the states cannot be operated today by one "master mind" in New York.

Scoring the apparent apathy of small and medium-sized town exhibitors, Mr. Kuykendall said that in his travels into almost every state he had found that these exhibitors are careless of, and, in many instances, indifferent to the general appearance of their theatres. In many situations, he said, exhibitors do not bother with any type of exploitation tieups and are content with small-type advertisements in the local newspapers and two or three sheets on the front.

"Part of this is due to the terrible business nightmare of the past few years, and part is due to laziness," he declared.

Touching on exhibitor-distributor relations,

HAYS HAS DONE GOOD JOB: MAYER

"Mr. Hays has done an enormously good job. I don't know where we would be without him. This is not personal with me. We don't get along so well, but I respect the job he is doing."—Louis B. Mayer to the convention.

'WOULD MAKE A GREAT PICTURE'

Says DeCasseres of "The Shatter'd Lamp," Third Broadway Play on Hitler's Germany; Four Other Productions Discussed in Light of Screen Possibilities

By BENJAMIN DeCASSERES

THE SHATTER'D LAMP

"The Shatter'd Lamp," by Leslie Reade, presented by Hyman Adler, is the third of the plays dealing with Hitler's Germany. The other two were poor compared to this play.

Here is a superb drama. Here is a simple play. Here is a play that in the third act touches one of the highest spots in genuine pathos. And here is a play that makes you grind the teeth of your soul in rage if you really believe there is something in the world worth fighting for outside of booze, money and skirts.

And, lastly (and most important), here is a play that would make a great picture. It cries for a great cast. Propaganda aside, it has all the elements of gripping, breathless entertainment, and when entertainment is matched with a titanic smash in the face something is achieved.

The action is laid in the home of the Opal family in a small university town in South Germany. Professor Fritz Opal (played superbly by Guy Bates Post) is married to a Jewish woman. He has lost a son in the war. They have another son.

There are fine scenes planting the friendship between a typical German family, the Müllers, and the Opals. Young Opal is in love with the daughter, Louisa Müller.

Comes the advent of Hitler. Mrs. Opal (Effie Shannon) is the target of the Storm-Troopers. We see before us the gradual but relentless destruction of a family.

The great scene is the suicide of Mrs. Opal to free her husband from the stigma, and the murder of Opal himself by a Storm-Trooper for his astoundingly-worded curse on Hitler's Germany over his wife's dead body.

"The Shatter'd Lamp" would be in my opinion, a perfect followup on "The House of Rothschild."

GENTLEWOMAN

This second play in one week by John Howard Lawson contains a little more picture material than his "The Pure in Heart."

It is no great shakes as a play because while Mr. Lawson has an idea that does come out of the murk and befuddled symbolism in which he works, he can't get it into his head that talk, talk, talk on war, strikes, cancer, life and death and all points east is not drama, is not entertainment, and isn't worth $2.20 a seat, not to speak of the tip for the coat-boy.

Mr. Lawson the prophet is full of garbage. Mr. Lawson the play-plumber may some day do a big job.

The idea here is: Can a bored rich lady find her happiness (or what have you) with a radical rough-neck?

Gwynn Ballantine is High Ritzy. Furs. Classics bound in ornithorhynchus skin. Gowns by Madame Diphthong-Acute E. Gwynn is introspective, bored and is psychically Looking 'Round.

Ballantine himself has com. sui. in the latest Wall Street manner.

A Lady's Ripe Moment—eh, wot? So in blows Rudy Flannigan, who, like Walt Whitman, keeps his hat on in the house.

Rudy (Lloyd Nolan) is a tough bird, Cagnified and Raftated to his heels. He's that kind of a snob known as a Communist.

So you see the situation: Young Stalin facing a Marie Antoinette in her Park avenue shooting-lodge.

But that's all, boys. After that they do nothing but quarrel and talk about all the things that Arthur Brisbane and Pop Broun wheeze about. (Oh, yes—Rudy is "unfaithful" to Gwynn—sumpin' new!)

Maybe Nunnally Johnson can do something with this idea.

Play Ratings For the Screen

Stage plays discussed by Mr. DeCasseres in this issue are rated by him as follows as to screen potentialities:

The Shatter'd Lamp—100 per cent.
Gentlewoman—30 per cent.
The Pure in Heart—15 per cent.
Another Love—zero.
New Faces—zero.

THE PURE IN HEART

"An attempt to achieve a mood quite foreign to the realistic theatre, a mood of which the words spoken, the method of acting, the setting and the music are all integral parts"———and so on ad bolonеyum.

In fact, whenever you see this sort of thing on a program or as the prologue of a play you can make up your mind you are going to get a big gob of antediluvian tripe seasoned with pulverized pumpernickel.

And so 'twas with John Howard Lawson's "The Pure in Heart."

The "pure in heart" here are a crook just out of jail and a New York-struck up-State girl who meets the ex-con. on a stage during a rehearsal. They fall in love. It is over these two "punks" that Mr. Lawson exudes his tears.

He would further impress on us that these two, as bad as they are, are superior to actresses, producers, Broadway "angels" and playwrights. All of which reminds me of what Julius Caesar said to Cleopatra, but which cannot be repeated in the pages of a solid home-and-hearth magazine.

The big scene is the killing by the police of the ex-con. and his goil in their hideaway. That's the only real action in this gahbage.

If this is new picture stuff, make the most of it.

The play flopped as quickly as "Othello" in Mississippi.

ANOTHER LOVE

It is somehow difficult to transplant a Parisian play to Broadway and put it into the hands of American and English actors and actresses. Its atmosphere goes wet. It was done with some success in the case of Jacques Duval's "Her Cardboard Lover" and "Mademoiselle"; but this latest play of Duval's, adapted by George Oppenheimer, went flop-flat. It might be built into picture-trade possibilities by a change of venue to New York or Boston—and another story substituted.

Here are the angles:

Fernand du Bois (the roguish Raymond Walburn), head of a department in a large store, is a necker de luxe. The wife (Mary Servoss) suffers in silence, as my aunt Miriam used to say.

The son Etienne, a bad boy in a mischievous way, is strong for the mother ——even stronger than he ought to be, maybe. But he is really ashamed for his mother's sake of his father's high-jinks.

So the boy takes on as a sweetheart one of his father's gals. Thus he shunts the old man back to proper conjugal ways and is blessed by mamma.

As it stands now it is too decayed for pictures, I say——so

NEW FACES

Charles Dillingham lit out of his retirement long enough to present to New York what looked to me like some Hollywood tryouts for the musical talkers.

It was an "intimate revue" called "New Faces." Produced under the supervision of Elsie Janis, conceived and directed by Leonard Sillman, with lyrics, music and scenery by almost everybody on Broadway except Larry of the Brass Rail. I must record the minimum number of laughs ever heard by an audience of a revue and no more applause and encores than regard for Mr. Dillingham requires.

The production is frightfully amateurish (for a Dillingham show). And if Mr. Dillingham intended just that so that motion picture executives could find a half-dozen girls and boys for tests, I must also record the fact, with a melancholy sigh, that I saw no originality among these "new faces." Mr. Sillman himself is about the most promising of the bunch.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS GET JUMP ON COMPANIES ON MUSIC COPYRIGHT

Association Meets Royalty Demand With Own Offer of Records; Next Plan Is to Register Exhibitors as Retailers

By BERNARD CHARMAN
London Correspondent

The question of music copyright is by way of being an international problem these days, and British exhibitors lately have had a drastic reminder of it in the demands of the united gramophone companies for royalties in respect of performance in their theatres of records manufactured by the companies. It was a blow, especially as the fees proposed ranged between five and fifty dollars a week.

It was a blow of such magnitude, in fact, that the exhibitors rose in revolt against the threatened imposition.

They refused to pay.

They tried, through the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, to compromise with the disc concerns; these companies proved insistent in their demands, the CEA refused to pay even a modified fee, and the negotiations broke down.

Exhibitor Association Steps In

That left the average exhibitor on a hot spot. Most of the theatres, since the coming of talkies, had dispensed entirely with orchestra or piano. Some of the halls with small organs have even been obliged by reason of financial duress to forego the services of their organist. They all came to rely on the ubiquitous gramophone record and the non-synchronous equipment.

So it seemed that from March 15—set by the gramophone concerns as zero hour—the theatres were to be without music in their intermissions, and the prospect was one to cause some concern to many of them.

It was here the CEA stepped in and showed it had not been idle and that it had something up its sleeve all the time.

A day before the inception of the ban on discs, the Association came out at its annual meeting with a plan whereby it offered all exhibitors a supply of records which could be played without fee or license (apart from the owner's copyright fee paid as a matter of course by all theatres), and to be available from that day onwards.

The conditions of sale were not stringent, demanding only that each exhibitor should contract to use not less than thirty a year, and the supplies were ready for immediate shipment and delivery.

Exhibitors seized on the proposal with remarkable decision, more than a thousand orders were received on the first day, and in a week about half the members on the register of the Association had contracted to use the official records. There was no hitch, and no theatre found itself music-less.

Other sources of supply were available at the same time, but owing to the underground ramifications of the gramophone combines, the CEA advised its members to make use of only the official records which were guaranteed harmless. Nevertheless, a few small disc companies outside the combine took the chance to make some ready cash, while one or two enterprising film organizations put out lengths of sound track with the bare music recorded on them.

Having made one effective reply to the gramophone companies, the CEA decided to go a step further and carry the war into the enemy camp by outlining a plan whereby exhibitors may register as retailers of the records, obtaining them at wholesale price and advertising them on their screens.

The next move, one anticipates, is up to the gramophone group.

Record Figures

If ever proof was wanted of the strides made by good British films, it is provided in the statement just issued by London Films regarding their two outstanding subjects, "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great." No other pictures ever produced in an English studio have achieved the whirlwind world-wide success of these productions.

Amazing figures are revealed for both productions. By the end of March, "The Private Life of Henry VIII" had run as follows:

London, 14 weeks; Paris, 25 weeks unfinished; Berlin, 11 weeks unfinished; Vienna, 6 weeks unfinished; Prague, 4 weeks; Budapest, 8 weeks unfinished; Rome, 3 weeks; Milan, 2 weeks; Brussels, 14 weeks unfinished; Madrid, 3 weeks; Barcelona, 2 weeks; Copenhagen, 6 weeks; Stockholm, 5 weeks; Oslo, 2 weeks; Riga, 2 weeks; Cairo, 2 weeks; Buenos Aires, 5 weeks unfinished; while in America the film has been running strong for more than five months.

The picture has booked to over 2,000 theatres in the British Isles, 2,000 in Germany, 1,000 in France, 600 in Italy and 400 in Spain. Figures for the United States show the picture to have been booked in more than 5,800 theatres, and London Films claims there is no country in the world except Russia which has not booked the film.

The triumphant story is continued with "Catherine the Great." After 8 weeks at the Leicester Square Theatre, London, it shifts to the Marble Arch Pavilion, from which it will go on to concurrent runs at the Dominion and New Victoria houses, both among the largest in the English capital; at the end of March it had also had six weeks on Broadway and 11 in Paris, with corresponding runs in most of the other capitals—except Berlin, where racial prejudice led to its banning.

"Catherine the Great" is reported to have booked so far to more than 6,000 theatres in the United States, 1,200 in France, 645 in Italy and 500 in Spain.

Theatre Circuit Points Way

Whatever may be the plight of the small independent exhibitor, the annual report of Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, theatre operating associate of Gaumont-British, shows there is still money to be made in the business.

For the seventh year in succession the board declared a dividend of 15 per cent.

The actual profit was £459,489, a decrease of a mere £49,158 on the record profit of £508,647 declared in the previous year.

For a company operating about 140 halls this is not bad going.

Rothafel Return To Roxy Seen

Negotiations are in progress for the return of S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel to the original Roxy theatre in New York as its managing director at some time in the near future, Mr. Rothafel said Wednesday.

"I cannot make any sort of a statement until the 'thing' is signed," Roxy told the HERALD. "You know as well as I that something is going on and when the final arrangements are made I will talk. But I'm not going to talk now because I'd be making a fool of myself if I did. Is'nt that so? There's been more damn fuss over this business."

Howard S. Cullman, operating receiver of the Roxy, declared that to the best of his knowledge, "no sort of a deal in which 'Roxy' figures is in progress, and in spite of the fact that he and Herbert Lubin are giving press interviews every day indicating that there is."

Under the reported arrangement whereby Mr. Rothafel would return to the Roxy, with Mr. Lubin in charge of administration, finances would be supplied through a new first mortgage which is said to have been arranged.

Mr. Cullman's term as operating receiver of the Roxy expires in June.

William Fox Sued for $2,011,000 by Inventor

Supreme Court Justice Albert Conway at St. George, Staten Island, N. Y., on Wednesday reserved decision on the application of John D. Elms for an order requiring William Fox to submit to an examination before trial in the Elms suit to recover $2,011,000 from Mr. Fox. Mr. Fox did not oppose the motion, but submitted through counsel a petition that the order require the examination be made at his home in Woodmere, L. I.

Mr. Elms charges that he invented a device which would give to films the full scope of the screen in any theatre and in addition would give the illusion of depth and perspective. Mr. Fox, he alleges, agreed to finance and develop the invention, paid him $50,000, agreed to organize the Revo Film Corporation, and to give him 49 per cent of the stock. The contract was not carried out, the Elms affidavit states.

KAO Lost $642,293 in 1933

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation spent $12,208,000 to operate its theatres during 1933 and took in $13,612,000 in admissions and rents during that period. Net loss for the year was $642,293.

CONVENTION URGES 'FAMILY' FILMS

the MPTOA president termed this problem one of the greatest handicaps imposed upon the film industry as a whole, due to the constant "bickering" between the two groups.

"In no other business of comparable size does this exist," he said.

"The common interest is poorly served by those who, either through misunderstanding or selfish interests, foster internal warfare within the industry. The time is here when we as an industry must rid ourselves of defeatist policies and their proponents who are obstructionists to public good will and government cooperation. Fortunately they are in an insignificant minority, but unfortunately, at this time, while the code is still in its infancy, their remarks cause the uninformed much trouble.

"There is one organization now in existence, though its membership is dwindling, whose leaders are mostly professional organizers who have no theatre interests and depend solely on the misfortunes of the small exhibitor for their existence. This organization," he said, "capitalized on the code and took thousands of dollars from exhibitors everywhere, for which they gave nothing. The moment there appears to be an agreement on anything, they run out on some pretext and wire for more money. If they are to survive, there must be strife."

Attacks Indecencies in Films

Speaking briefly of the Code Authority, of which he is a member, Mr. Kuykendall pointed out that its members are serving without compensation.

"Their task is no easy one at best, but is doubly hard when irresponsibles and others continually try by criticism and other methods to discredit them and create lack of confidence in the code, because," he declared, "of the fact that the members of the Code Authority are the appointees of the President of the United States and are charged with the sacred obligation of rendering fair and impartial decisions in matters pertaining to trade practices in the motion picture industry, regardless of who might be involved, whether they be a small exhibitor or a producer."

Of motion pictures themselves, the MPTOA president said he could not refrain from protesting as to the many "little indecencies" that have been permitted to creep into pictures of late.

"Most of these have nothing to do with the continuity and are in many instances plain, crude, ordinary vulgarity," he asserted. "They are doing us tremendous damage with the sane-thinking decent men and women who patronize our theatres. It is not so much the regular socalled "sex" pictures that do us damage; it is the vulgar sayings and scenes that are injected into what the public has reason to believe is wholesome entertainment.

"The sacred matter of childbirth must be dealt with in a finer, more wholesome way. There has been an increased tendency on the part of irresponsible directors to treat this delicate subject in a coarse and vulgar manner."

Complaints Aired in Committees

It appeared obvious late Monday, when a number of committees were named to handle delegates' complaints, that the convention hall would not resound to the usual heated charges and counter-charges that have marked so many exhibitor conventions in the past. The committees were meeting each afternoon to listen to any and all complaints or discussions on labor and the code, legislation, public relations, resolutions, community affairs, trade practices and the code, and general grievances.

Members of the credentials and rules committee consisted of M. E. Comerford, chairman, James J. McGuinness, Benjamin Pitts, Nat Williams, A. F. Baker.

Reports from all committees were to be submitted to the convention late Thursday.

Fred S. Meyer, of Wisconsin, declared that the MPTOA and Allied were both heading for the same goal, although their paths differed.

He said more teamwork was required in the effort to regulate trade practices, and that there is needed "wider vision than our immediate personal gain and an attitude that shows a willingness to work together so that the benefits derived by all will be but a reflection of the benefits secured by the individual."

Giving the MPTOA full credit for having obtained the ten per cent cancellation privilege in the code, Mr. Meyer declared that the long record of the MPTOA proved progress although it had not reached its highest objective.

Earlier, Mr. Meyer, in answering anonymous charges that the organization had determined on Hollywood as the convention city because the producers are the dominant factors, declared, "If coming to Hollywood to mingle with producers and players in an effort to impress them and bring about better pictures with less dirt is to be characterized as mingling with producers, then we are doing exactly that."

Mr. Meyer criticized Allied States' activities in connection with the code, and said that a majority of the reforms now embodied in the code were first adopted by the MPTOA.

Seated at the speakers' table almost throughout the convention were Ben Berinstein, Edward G. Levey, M. E. Comerford, Fred S. Meyer, Walter Vincent, Ed Kuykendall, Fred Wehrenberg and Jack Miller.

Behind these leaders, strung across the convention hall, were two banners, one reading: "If you would put as much thought and energy back of the family type picture as you do sophisticated pictures, the box-office appeal would be greater." The second, also addressed to Hollywood producers, called upon the studios to make more pictures suitable for the entire family.

American mothers are as much at fault with respect to the quality of motion pictures seen by their children as are the producers themselves, said Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, of the Studio Relations department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

Basing her statement on a recent survey in Chicago, where, of 10,052 children questioned, only 155 reported that their motion picture attendance had any guidance from their parents, Mrs. Winter said she could "hardly imagine a more scathing indictment of American mothers than these mere bald figures.

"While we recognize the tremendous adult mass as the major audience—the audience for whom the pictures are made and the audience that must be satisfied—we women cannot help interpreting the motion picture problem largely in terms of child life, though, personally, I believe that greater danger lies with the adolescent than with the child, but," she said, "everywhere, and particularly in crowded cities where the child is tempted indoors for his recreations, everywhere children are flocking in great numbers to the theatre. Where home life is sordid and crowded and monotonous, children go sometimes four and five times a week, trying to find an outlet."

As to who is responsible for the quality of

COSMETIC THEATRE OUT, SCHUTZ TELLS MPTOA

Effective Completion of Technical Processes Is Needed, Not Coney Island Decorations, Declares Better Theatres' Editor

The motion picture theatre has been "trying to fool the public with sheer cosmetics" when the modern theatre essentially should be "one that permits the motion picture to be presented in the most effective manner to the public of today," declared George Schutz, editor of Better Theatres, in a paper prepared for the MPTOA convention in Hollywood this week.

"I am not minimizing the importance of good looks," Mr. Schutz pointed out. "It is part of the theatre's selling job to be attractive. But I do think we have been trying to fool the public with sheer cosmetics. And there is little doubt that we have arrived unto that inevitable morning after the night before."

Inquisition Overdone Too

Mr. Schutz warned of the misleading nature of the word "modern," explaining:

"The theatre owner tells the architect, 'Draw me up something modern.' And the architect immediately studies the latest decorative schemes for skyscraper office buildings and penthouse apartments. I recall a set of completed theatre plans in which the projection room was left out! I suppose the ports could not be fitted into the geometrical patterns on the rear wall.

"Decoration—that is, a pleasing optical effect—is desirable, of course. But even in decoration what is called modern is all too often about as modern as the Inquisition—and just as overdone."

"The architectural glorifications of recent years had a most constructive psychological effect. They swept from the public mind, by the sheer audacity of a gilded splendor, all memory of the nickelodeon.

"I know there are some theatre owners and managers who think there should still be a great deal of gaudy ornamentation and dazzling display about a theatre, but it seems to me they are merely finding it difficult to apply other terms than those common to them in the arts of showmanship. I should not give the theatre the personality of a bank—especially in these days. Neither do I think that an establishment selling such stable, habitually consumed goods as motion picture entertainment should look like a sideshow slapped up in Coney Island just for the season."

Must Complete Technical Processes

Effective completion of the technical processes of creation is what the motion picture now needs most from the theatre, he said, and this "involves all that the theatre can contribute toward the patron's enjoyment of the show on the screen." The shape of the auditorium and the seating arrangement should be such that the screen image is not distorted. The projection room should be so located that the angle of projection is as small as possible.

"Seating, in placement and construction, and the facilities for the control of inside atmospheric conditions, should assure perfect comfort. Our standards have been too low. We have achieved little more than approximate comfort in most theatres. Angles of vision have been grossly neglected. Air conditioning has been hit or miss. And the largest theatres in the country are just as faulty in these respects as the small.

"The advancements in theatre designing in recent years point the way for further improvements. Our attention has been definitely turned from decoration to technical efficiency. And at the same time the architecture of the theatre has been vastly improved. Marquees that hang onto a theatre building as though borrowed from a trainshed are now actually out of style. Signs and display elements have become integral parts of the architecture. Interior decoration, although still refusing to acknowledge that the theatre is much different from a dime-a-dance ballroom, has nevertheless come to admit that the theatre is not a mere museum."

Would Eliminate Proscenium Arch

Of possibilities of further improvements in design, Mr. Schutz said there may be an attempt to eliminate the proscenium arch, which he called an absolute detriment.

"All the tricks yet devised have failed to make the screen anything except a flat sheet that is rigidly circumscribed optically," he declared. "The illusion-strengthening possibilities of new forms here have not been seriously considered. Besides elimination of the proscenium arch, there may be, as there should be, experiments in carrying the lines of the auditorium directionally toward the screen and even beyond it. These very lines, determining the shape of the auditorium and worked out in conjunction with studied lighting throughout the auditorium and especially in the screen area, are very likely to give us all the esthetic effect needed—and then we shall be rid of the short-lived, gaudy bric-a-brac forever.

Confusing to Consider Music Hall

"It is very confusing to consider such theatres as Radio City Music Hall—and that is only the largest of a group—as representing the best in motion picture theatres. All theatres of that type lie but on the fringe of the motion picture's magic carpet. Or don't they? . . . That is what must be determined. They do if the motion picture is to be exploited as the great popular means of theatrical entertainment for the whole family in hamlet as well as city. I think this purpose is intrinsic to the character of the motion picture. And if that is so, our theatres must be adjusted to this purpose . . . so constructed that their fixed charges and operating overhead permit a reasonable profit with modest admission prices."

Calls Film Better Than Its Source

pictures, Mrs. Winter said the whole question revolves around the well-worn answer of all purveyors of popular taste in newspapers, radio and in pictures—"that ancient reply—'We give the public what it wants.'

"Inside the studios there are men and women who can provide any type you want and they have their eyes, sometimes with happy anticipation and sometimes with cynical amusement, on us, the public. The box office returns are more than a mere matter of finances. They are a thermometer of the public."

Intimating that the motion picture is "no worse" than any other of the arts, Mrs. Winter pointed out that the great majority of best-selling books, on which many motion pictures are based, are "filled with vicious sex suggestions or with lawlessness.

"Almost all of the plays on the New York stage are filled with dirt," she said. "Modern painting exults in greenish nude bodies. Popular music emphasizes loose sex emotion. Obnoxious as are many of the themes and scenes in the pictures, in almost every case they have had to be cleaned up from their literary source because the many-millioned audience is, after all, largely decent—more decent than the so-called intelligentsia.

Says Law Can't Create

"Naturally, we begin to wonder if law can help the situation. But law never did and never can create. It can lop off objectionable features here and there. It never yet produced morals. If the motion picture, or any other form of expression, is going to serve civilization it needs genius and beauty and idealism and insight and human appeal. None of these comes to order. In fact, they wither as soon as you try to put them under control."

Mrs. Winter said the approximation of the problem of education and the problem of entertainment would be a whole subject to itself, and that the two ought to go hand in hand.

O'Toole Cites Film Evolution

Declaring in his report that the entire motion picture industry is undergoing a process of reorganization, M. J. O'Toole, MPTOA secretary, said that since the organization's last convention, in Washington, the industry has gone through the most complete "evolution" in its history. Mr. O'Toole's report was read.

Mr. O'Toole then said that exhibitors now have the greatest possible opportunities to extend the public service work of the theatres.

"The entire nation is undergoing a radical transformation, and exhibitors can help materially to advance and develop conditions of vital concern to all the people by making sensible use of their theatres and their screens. After all, no exhibitor makes money in depression or what he may call bad times. Such conditions always mean poor business and the most selfish and necessary considerations should impel him to do everything possible to make the community prosperous so his theatre income will always be assured."

Stuber, Lovejoy Named To Head Eastman, Kodak

William J. Stuber was elected chairman of the board of directors and Frank W. Lovejoy president of Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, on Wednesday. Mr. Stuber had been president of the corporation and Mr. Lovejoy senior vice-president.

EXPERIMENT IN MUSIC AND NARRATION

Creation of Illusion That Visible Character Is Feeling and Expressing What the Audience Hears Others Sing Is Aim of Experiment in "Famous Scenes from Pagliacci"

By JOSEPH O'SULLIVAN

A new venture in the handling of music and narration in the talking picture is projected in a film produced and directed by William deMille by arrangement with Audio Productions, for release by Educational and distribution by Fox. In this experiment, employing excerpts of the opera, "I Pagliacci," two casts were employed, one visible and portraying the action of the play, the other invisible and supplying the singing. The results on screen and sound track are discussed herewith by Joseph O'Sullivan, an authority on music of the screen.

While tempus has continued to fugit, the sound motion picture has belied its cognomen in the childhood of its brief existence. It is still an infant in its faculties as audible motion pictures per se.

L'enfant terrible has grown amazingly in physical and emotional proportions since its inception some five years ago, while imaginatively and cerebrally it is still in its swaddling clothes.

Lest this dictum be misinterpreted, let it be understood that this refers strictly to that mythical merging of pictures, action, dramatic situation, sound and music; also scope, dimension, color, and other elements in the realm of the sound screen—a fusion of the arts of which much has been said by visionaries, and little has been done by materialists of picture production.

Now, however, there is evidence that something is going to be done about the education of the infant prodigy that has been running rampant on the audible screen with little rhyme and no reason. A firm hand, a keen mind, and an investigating spirit has taken the youngster in hand to show him the error of his ways and to develop his latent faculties.

When such distinguished protagonists of modern art and modern methods of artistic expression as John Erskine, William C. deMille, Clara Beranger and Alexander Smallens put their respective and collective talents and brains together in a sincere effort to evolve an effective fusion of picture, drama, dialogue and music, with grand opera as the base, something new, interesting and significant is inevitable.

On Thursday of last week, in the private theatre of the Fox Company, was shown the initial venture, "Famous Scenes from Pagliacci," produced and directed by William C. deMille, by arrangement with Audio Productions, Inc., and released by Educational and distributed by Fox.

William deMille Explains

The ideas and purpose of those responsible for this first essay into grand opera for the screen, is set forth in this statement from Mr. deMille: "The general purpose of the technique employed is to get as far away as possible from the traditional conventions of the opera-house, and also to translate the opera as far as possible into true motion picture rather than a mere photograph of a stage performance. The singing is done by singers and the acting by actors. We do not desire to create the impression that the character visible to the audience is actually singing, but rather to create the illusion that the visible character is feeling and expressing what the audience hears."

The manner in which these fragments of "Pagliacci" are presented, left the impression of something that is undoubtedly new and strange in treatment, but interesting and significant only as an adventure into unbeaten paths. What this trail will eventually lead to is more important than the immediate results of this initial venture.

Many Difficulties Presented

While a just evaluation of the methods employed should not be made from detached episodes of a music drama or opera, it is evident that some of the material used for this demonstration offers many difficulties for such treatment as was given.

The first fragment begins with the scene in the opera (see reproduction below) immediately following that where Canio, after upbraiding Nedda for her affair with Silvio, is about to stab her when Tonio and Peppe interfere and try to quiet the jealous, mad clown. The picture shows Tonio and Peppe dragging Canio into a tent, where Tonio tells him that he (Tonio) will watch Nedda and discover who her lover is—that perhaps he will be at the performance later; and Peppe tries to calm him.

with the poignant climax "Ridi Pagliaccio, sul tuo amore infranto!" ("Laugh, O Pagliaccio! for your love that is ruin'd!")

In this scene, the device of having the actor (Henry Hull) give only visual histrionic expression to the emotions expressed in the aria, while a voice (that of Dan Gridley) is heard singing—ghosting, as it were, for the actor—is given a severe test.

Mr. Henry Hull is one of our most distinguished actors and does a fine piece of mimetic work in the scene; but not all of Mr. Hull's artistry and of Mr. deMille's finely conceived direction could create as convincing a portrayal of the heartbreak in this, one of the most poignant of all operatic scena, as does the aria when actually sung by the actor on the stage. Perhaps the fact that the auditor knows the screen actor is not giving vocal utterance—even though it be in an unnatural form (for an operatic aria is a sublimated form of emotional expression)—perhaps it is this unreality—this vocal expression by proxy—that makes it unconvincing.

Paradoxically, this screen interpretation of "Vesti la giubba" asks too little while demanding too much of the imagination of the audience. It gives complete lyric-dramatic expression as the composer conceived it, reinforced with a detached mimetic portrayal, then insists that the auditor discard the integer of the lyric-dramatic medium.

The second episode in this subject is the beginning of Act 2, with Peppe in the street blowing the trumpet and Tonio ballyhooing the play that is about to be given by the troupe (see reproduction below). Here the new medium more nearly approaches a consummation of its purpose. The animation, the hurly-burly, the moving spectacle, with the chorus and the exhortations of Tonio spieling, is sound motion picture stuff of true realism. What matter if the people seen are not actually singing? The spirit is there—they're all talking, their lips move, and the "ghost" chorus that is heard is fitting in tempo and rhythm. Even to the conclusion of the scene, where the audience, finally seated on benches before the little outdoor stage, cry out, viva voce: "Be still! Be quiet! Let the performance begin!"—it moves swiftly, colorfully, on wings of tone with no sense of "absent treatment" in vocal "ghosting."

It is in such scenes that the vitalizing effects of the technique employed by the producers of "Famous Scenes from Pagliacci" are apparent. This is a convincing demonstration that grand opera has certain phases that lend themselves to audible screen treatment—intelligent, imaginative—that enhances and revivifies the original stage presentation.

The voices of Dan Gridley as "Canio," Rose Tentone as "Nedda," Ralph Magelssen as "Silvio," James Montgomery as "Peppe," and Frank Chapman as "Tonio" are excellent and record well.

Mr. deMille, Mr. Erskine, Miss Beranger and Mr. Smallens have, at least, blazed the trail to a vast and rich region of screen tonal material that has too long been neglected by the moguls of moviedom.

Irving Trust Asks $110,000 of Court

An application asking the sum of $110,126 as part allowances for receivership and bankruptcy administration expenses of Publix Enterprises, bankrupt holding company for 320 Paramount theatres in 28 states, was filed by Irving Trust Co. and its counsel with bankruptcy Referee Henry K. Davis this week.

The $110,126 asked by Irving Trust Co., is for services and expenses for the period of the Publix Enterprises' receivership, which ran from January 26, 1933, to February 20, 1933, and for the period of the company's bankruptcy from February 20, 1933 to March 31, 1934. Publix Enterprises, while not yet discharged from bankruptcy, was virtually dissolved when its assets were sold earlier in the year to Famous Theatres Corp. a newly created Paramount subsidiary created for that purpose. Thus additional allowances may be applied for later by both the trustee and its counsel for the period from March 31 to the actual termination of the Publix Enterprises bankruptcy.

Irving Trust is asking $35,000 as an allowance, while its counsel, Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts, asks $75,000 for professional services, plus $125 for expenses.

Allowance Hearing April 17

Equity receivers for Paramount Publix recently filed an application for allowances aggregating $291,000, which subsequently was reduced by Referee Davis to $220,000. This allowance was opposed by several groups of Paramount creditors and a ruling on their objections by Judge John Woolsey of the U. S. district court in New York now is being awaited. Mr. Davis has set April 17 as the date for a hearing on the Publix Enterprises application for allowances.

In conjunction with its allowances application, Irving Trust also submitted an intermediate report detailing the work and accomplishments of the trustee to date. Its services were described as "related to the preservation of the bankrupt's assets by corporate reorganization and rehabilitation; the disposition of claims against the bankrupt estate and the sale, as trustee, of the rights, title and interest of Publix Enterprises' assets and properties."

The report said that the Publix Enterprises financial difficulties were due to the "excessive rentals" paid on theatre leases, and declared that the most difficult task of the reorganization process was the readjustment of theatre leases. "The result," it said, "is that the deadwood has been eliminated and the theatres which have been retained have been placed on a basis where expectation of earnings is now reasonable and possible."

$16,555,283 Claims Cut in Third

Among the principal Publix Enterprises' circuits singled out by the report as having been reorganized and rehabilitated are: Southern Enterprises of Texas, operating 20 houses in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, now under the management of Karl Hoblitzelle; the A. H. Blank Circuit, operating 75 houses in Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois, now under the management of A. H. Blank; the Virginia-Tennessee Theatres, Publix Virginia and Publix Newport News, operating eight houses in Virginia and Tennessee; Associated Amusements of Florida, a realty holding company; Augusta Enterprises, operating three houses in Georgia; Publix Salt Lake, operating seven houses in Utah and Idaho, and Tennessee Enterprises, operating seven in Tennessee.

The report concludes with the statement that 54 claims totaling $16,555,283, were filed against Publix Enterprises, and that this amount ultimately was reduced to a total of $5,133,214, which were "presumably provable." The reductions were obtained through compromises, amendments, re-leases, agreements and the expunging of claims by the referee in bankruptcy after hearings.

On Saturday, Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantyne, counsel for the Paramount Publix trustees, filed a petition for payment of $18,266 with Mr. Davis for expenses and disbursements incurred from April 19, 1933, to March 31, 1934, in connection with their work in the Paramount Publix bankruptcy. The same law firm filed a request some time ago for $125,000 for services rendered in connection with the corporation's equity receivership, which preceded the bankruptcy by nearly three months. That petition was reduced to $100,000.

The appellate division of the New York supreme court on Saturday denied the motion for leave to appeal to the Court of Appeals in an action brought against Paramount Publix by Robert Levy, a bondholder. Samuel Zirn, counsel for Mr. Levy, had made the motion.

Included in the original Levy action was an attempt to have set aside the Paramount bank transaction of $13,200,000 in 1932.

Favoring definite delay in the reorganization of Paramount Publix, a company official said Tuesday that any organized plan of reclamation at this time would be "disastrous" to the favorable earnings accumulated by operations of subsidiaries in recent months.

"The company still needs the protection of a trusteeship and will continue to require it until every large claim against the company has been settled," he said. Approximately $200,000,000 in claims remain unsettled against the company.

Price Cuts Cause Kansas City Fight

The suburban theatre listing in the Kansas City Star on Tuesday of any week furnishes striking indication of the reason first runs have declared "war" on the neighborhood theatres.

Practically all of the 41 theatres in the suburban calendar, the great majority of the city's houses, announce cut prices for Tuesday and most of them also on Wednesday. Ten-cent admissions are the rule at a majority of the neighborhoods on these nights, with many double billing, and at some premiums are used. The normal scale is 15 or 20 cents. Theatres which do not cut prices for Tuesday and Wednesday usually do so on other nights, as a rule Thursday and Friday.

Only two suburbans, both Fox houses, maintain a rate of 25 cents. One of these, the Isis, cuts to 15 cents for Tuesday and Wednesday and double bills, which is a recent development at that house. The Plaza, Fox Midwest's de luxe suburban, is the only subsequent which has refused to cut scales or show more than one feature.

The downtown first runs' battle with suburban houses has developed into a fight among themselves. Three of the four downtown first runs charge 25 cents top, and one double bills. Another adds occasional vaudeville. At the other two, only the night price is more than 25 cents. A sixth first run, the Pantages, renamed the Tower, set for opening April 13, will have first run pictures and a stage show at the predominating 25-cent top.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Many years ago a fat youngster of 12, one Paul Dresser, peddled candy on a short-run midwestern train. Frequently protecting him from rowdy coal-throwing, tantalizing trainmen was W. L. ("Billy") Kerlin, a locomotive engineer of the old school. Paul was the brother of Theodore Drieser, changing his family name to accord with the pronunciation of it as he was accustomed to hear in his home town. Billy was the father of Louise Kerlin, now Louise Dresser of the movies.

Louise left her native Terre Haute one morning for Chicago, looking for an opening on the stage. That was in 1899. She was introduced to Paul Dresser, then in the music publishing business and quite well known in Chicago. Upon hearing that the young lady was the daughter of the man who had stood between him and his tormenters, he turned in his swivel chair, took the telephone receiver down and called the city editor of the Chicago Tribune.

"Just wanted to tell you," he said, "that my kid sister, Louise Dresser, is appearing on the Masonic Temple roof Sunday night. See that she gets a break." And she did.

To this day people ask Louise Dresser what her brother, Theodore, is writing.

Tom Mix, 54-year-old hard-riding cowboy, circus stunt galloper and ex-screen star, must stand trial on charges of having irregularly acquired a horse back in 1908. The complaint was filed in 1909 by George L. Miller, who then owned the famous "101 Ranch." Miller has died since, but the court records show that Tom waived preliminary hearing on Oct. 31, 1919, and was released under a $1,000 bond posted by Clyde Sharp, Kaw City, Oklahoma cattleman.

The case was revived last week when Colonel Zack Miller, who now heads the "101 Ranch," called it to the attention of Oklahoma officials.

The horse was named Boloney.

This Fast-Moving Age, and the Press

Motion picture theatre owners speeding westward in a long, comfortable special "Golden State Limited," to sunny California and the 14th annual MPTOA convention, received at breakfast each morning during the entire trip across the continent, an exclusive, individual Western Union telegram flashing the important motion picture news headlines of the moment.

The news was wired to the principal stops along the Southern Pacific route, just a few minutes before train time. Extra dispatchers hurriedly keyed the headlines into individual copies for the delegates, and they were rushed aboard hardly a second before the wheels of the Iron Horse started grinding westward.

Last Saturday morning, for instance, while breakfasting at Kansas City, they learned the identities of the New York and Philadelphia local code boards, hours before the folks back home had reached their offices on Broadway or Vine Street.

There's a touch of stark realism from the rolling prairies of the western Indian country in this cinema review of Greta Garbo's "Queen Christina," which appeared the other day in the Vinita, Oklahoma, newspaper:

Twenty-six years a contented newspaper writer, living in a furnished room, third-floor, rear. One successful motion picture story and fame—that is not wanted.

Mr. George Hembert Westley, quiet, gray little recluse in his sixties, has been writing a daily column of humorous notes and anecdotes for the Boston Transcript for 26 years. He has not been in the newspaper's office since he was hired, in 1908, his unvarying daily routine taking him from the rooming house to a nearby cafeteria, then to the Boston Public Library, where he putters around all day with clippings, finally back to the cafeteria and his room.

The mailman arrived one morning in 1931 at the doorstep of Mr. George Arliss, carrying a summary of a play by Mr. Westley, about the House of Rothschild. Arliss was interested, wrote for the complete play, and accepted it, Warners sending a check.

Two years elapsed. Mr. Westley continued with his clippings, forgot about his play. Meanwhile, Mr. Arliss moved over to Darryl Zanuck's Twentieth Century Pictures, which bought the rights from Harry Warner's company, and then set Nunnally Johnson to writing the scenario. Mr. Westley was finally persuaded to drop in at a matinee, the other day, to witness the screen version of his first manuscript. He liked it, started another one, "The Belle of Baltimore."

"SIMPLICITY"

The other night the idle adventurer-on-the-air, for the first time in a blue moon, might have come across something that was being said about the motion picture worth hearing. Mr. Laurence Stallings, known best within this industry perhaps for his share in "What Price Glory," was speaking a piece on the Borden Hour, about motion pictures and their content and technique. It chances incidentally that Mr. Stallings is engaged in the editing of a motion picture version of "The First World War," which was also the title of his amazing pictorial opus, published so effectively a while back by Simon & Schuster. This screen version is to be presented by the Fox Film Corporation, and is scheduled for release several months hence. Mr. Stallings presents with considerable clarity the important difference between motion picture and drama, a difference rarely appreciated by the makers, purveyors or consumers.

The last great film from Hollywood was "All Quiet on the Western Front." It was also the last simple film. I want to talk about simplicity in films. I don't think, for example, that "Little Women" is simple. Despite George Cukor's direction, it is a complex effort . . . a play, not a movie. I think Walt Disney's is nearer the movie in "Three Little Pigs." Disney had the great advantage of simple actors. His hero, the third little pig, had a tough role to play. For he had to seem superior to every other pig in the show. He was a great builder, a man who honored his parents, a fellow afraid of nothing, and a lad who suffered straw-brained fools gladly. You'll agree the little pig played it to the hilt, without making a hog of himself. Most actors, given that fat part, would have made pigs of themselves. But the little pig communicated a quality of simplicity. Any film, to reach greatness, must do the same.

I suppose Clark Gable is the most accepted type of the strong, simple man. Last winter Gable was quite ill. The writer, who shall be nameless, was also quite ill, across the hall. Gable and the writer had the same doctor, who said that the stronger and more simply organized a man was, the higher his temperatures. One afternoon the writer sent Gable his thermometer. He had proudly batted one hundred and five. Mr. Gable sent back his averages. He had just knocked out one hundred and six and four-tenths. Is it any wonder American audiences accept him for the part? For the pictorial representation of strength and simplicity? It is a gift of fortune, a thing few films, organically, can achieve.

Why He Wasn't Bored

Last summer, at Paris, Alfred Savior, the dramatist, told of taking his little boy to Renee Clair's film, "Under the Roofs of Paris." It is a simple story, but told in a beautifully complicated manner. The little boy was bored. "I can't believe in it," he said. "It doesn't happen to people." I wanted to know what he liked. He had seen an American film, "Tarzan of the Apes." "Now that," he said, "is real. A child is stolen by monkeys and taught to speak their language. Yes, I believe in that. It is a simple thing. It could happen to a little French boy like me."

A film needs simplicity, in order that it may be understood all over the world. Censorship does not aid the film in achieving it. Censorship merely steeps the film in trickery.

Let me illustrate. My friend is a writer of force and talent. His wife is an actress of magnificent gifts. Her first film was going badly. The writer dropped his own work and plunged into her film. It was hard, distracting work, for the story had suddenly turned upon complications. He told me one night, talking it over, that he must return the story to simplicity, to simple situations, which the actress would bring to life with her talents. "A play," he said, "fails in a little town. Seventeen people see it, and forget it. But a film, good or bad, goes everywhere. If we don't pull this film together, in four weeks from now six hundred Chinamen a thousand miles up the Yangste will all walk out of a bamboo shack holding their noses and saying, "Boys, it's terrible."

King George Steals the Show

I've just edited thousands of feet of historical film. From nineteen hundred until now. I tried to be impartial among the captains and kings, the tumult and the shouting. But a gentle little man, without a gesture, stole the picture from thousands of guns and glittering uniforms. When next an actor wishes to play the part of a king with simplicity, he should study this new Fox film on the World War—and watch His Majesty, King George the Fifth of England, steal the show from the Kaiser without trying.

Last summer in London, Lewis Milestone and I went to Elstree to review Alexander Korda's film, "Henry the Eighth." Korda was directing on the set when we got there. Milestone stopped to speak to a friend. I went on to watch Korda shoot a scene. On the sidelines, out of the lights, was a young girl . . . not a raving beauty . . . oh—pretty enough—I wanted to ask Milestone about the possibility of using her in our own film.

As soon as Milestone arrived on the set, he said to me, "The young girl over there, if she likes, can play that part in our picture." He said this at once, though the girl was still on the sidelines, and not in the lights. Korda finished his scene and came over. "Who's the girl?" Milestone asked, without indicating which girl. "Oh," Korda smiled, looking over to the sidelines. . . . "Simple little thing, isn't she? I've just put her under five years' contract." You would like to know the girl? Why, you've already talked about her. She is seen briefly as Anne Boleyn in "Henry the Eighth." Yes, you remember her perfectly. Dark and comely, going to die in her court finery. Merle Oberon is her name. No raving beauty . . . but she has simplicity. It is a gift of fortune. And few films ever achieve it."

Pettijohn Refutes Critics of Present Distribution Plan

Declaring that practically all current agitation against the motion picture industry is directed "at and toward our distribution system," Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., this week challenged any industry in the world to show a distribution plan "as economical, as mechanically perfect, as humane, as helpful to the 'little fellow' in the business, as the present distribution plan of the motion picture business."

"Let us analyze our distribution system and see how it compares with other distribution systems," he said. "We have approximately 13,500 theatres in the United States to be supplied each day with a complete picture program. To do that, we handle approximately 25,000 miles of film. During each year these 13,500 theatres contract for a total of almost ten million pictures—features, newsreels, travelogues and comedies. They contract for all that film probably on about one million separate contracts, or separate pieces of paper.

Good Mechanical Service

"It is estimated that with all of this complex machinery operating in 32 distributing centers, we have reached such a perfection in our physical handling of film that we do not average as high as 20 'miss-outs' a day in the entire United States. That would seem to be pretty good mechanical service."

Mr. Pettijohn declared that the selling, billing, distributing, repairing and other physical handling of motion picture film costs today about 27 per cent on the average.

"Confining this argument solely to the necessities of life," he continued, "where distribution costs should be kept down, I suggest it is a crime for cantaloups to be sold at one cent each in California, and the same cantaloups in Cleveland, Chicago and New York, for 15 to 20 cents each. The cattle-raiser may get for his steer four or five cents per pound, but by the time that meat reaches the ultimate consumer—the working man—in our large cities, we know that the price has gone up at least 500 per cent.

Treatment of "Little Fellow"

"It would seem that instead of attacking distribution of motion pictures, our critics could more humanely agitate a reduction in the costs of distribution of the absolute necessities of life, whose distribution costs compare most unfavorably with ours in the picture business.

"Show me another industry in America that is half as good to the 'little fellow' as we are in the motion picture business," Mr. Pettijohn concluded. "The same, identical motion picture for which $30,000 may be paid for the first-run in Radio City—or $3,000 to $10,000 that is paid for the first-run in practically every state in the Union—that same identical picture is eventually delivered in less than one year, and generally in the current season, to the smallest, humblest, poorest little theatre in the United States at a price the owner can afford to pay, and as low as $6 or $10."

John F. Dillon, Noted Director, Dies in Hollywood

John Francis Dillon, leading motion picture director, died in Hollywood last week of a heart attack. He had directed numerous pictures, some of them outstanding, over a period of many years, particularly for First National. He was 47 years old.

Born in New York City in 1887, Mr. Dillon started as an usher in the old New York theatre, now Loew's New York. Following a number of appearances on the stage, the last in "Officer 666" he met Carlyle Blackwell in California, the latter hiring Mr. Dillon to direct him. Later, for three years, he directed for Al Christie, where, he declared, he received his real training as a director.

His most recent productions were: "Humanity" and "Call Her Savage" for Fox, "The Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood" for Universal, "The Man Who Dared" for Columbia. His earlier work included the direction of Mary Pickford in "Suds," Jack Pickford in "A Burglar by Proxy," Colleen Moore in "Flaming Youth" and "The Perfect Flapper," Corrine Griffith in "Lillies of the Field."

Villa's Daughter in Town To See MGM's "Viva Villa"

Celia Villa, 19-year-old daughter of the late Pancho Villa, Mexico's famous bandit chieftain, came to New York this week to attend the opening at the Criterion of the MGM feature, "Viva Villa," starring Wallace Beery and recounting on the screen the story of her father.

Miss Villa came from a cafe at Juarez, where she is employed as a hat check girl, at the invitation of MGM. Seven years old when her father was assassinated, Celia went to a boarding school, then a convent, came under the protection of her aunts, and finally arrived at the home of Mrs. Charles Lawrence of El Paso, Texas, where she was a household employee. The government deported her, and she landed behind the hat checking counter in the Juarez cafe. Mrs. Lawrence accompanied the girl as chaperon and interpreter.

New York Theatre Patrons Queried on Ticket Source

Checking on the sale and distribution of tickets to New York legitimate theatres, particularly with respect to business done by agencies and brokers, the local Consumers Advisory Board of the National Recovery Administration last week distributed a questionnaire to patrons of all legitimate theatres.

A rapid check of 1,000 replies collected revealed that nearly half of those answering had purchased their tickets through agencies. The majority were answered by out-of-towners. Brock Pemberton, chairman of the committee on ticket distribution of the Legitimate Theatre Code Authority, said a hasty summary indicated abuses by ticket brokers.

CODE AUTHORITY OPENS THEATRE LABOR SURVEY

Studios and M.P.P.D.A. Asked to Make Analyses; President of Union Denies Paying $7,500 to Lindbergh Intermediary

Two hundred theatre circuit leaders and exhibitor organization officials this week were asked by the Code Authority to make an exacting survey of their individual territories on every phase of labor and wage conditions. The request followed President Roosevelt's recent recommendation for still shorter hours and higher wage scales.

Questions in the Code Authority questionnaire are these:

1. Are as many persons employed in theatres, exclusive of artists, at the present time as were employed in the same theatres in 1929?

2. Is the standard of wage scales paid to employees in theatres at the present time in excess of, or less than, the standard of wage scales paid for the same kind of service in 1929?

3. Are total weekly payrolls at present in excess of, or less than, in 1929?

Harold S. Bareford, Warner attorney and alternate for Harry M. Warner on the Code Authority, already has asked studio executives for an analysis on the production situation and George J. Schaefer of Paramount has asked the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., for a summary on distribution.

Labor problems will be turned over to industrial relations boards in New York and regional branches in Hollywood and other cities.

$7,500 to Spitale Charged

In Washington, testimony that Harry Sherman, president of Local 306 of the IATSE, New York, had paid $7,500 to Salvatore Spitale, intermediary in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, was given by Nathaniel Doragoff, member of the local, to the United States Senate Labor Committee.

Mr. Doragoff asked that provisions be incorporated in the Wagner labor bill to prevent union members from being "exploited by ruthless and unscrupulous labor leaders." Mr. Doragoff declared Harry Sherman had "been forced on Local 306 by the IATSE." He testified that $1,017,000 was turned over to Sherman between Feb. 11, 1933, and Jan. 31, 1934, but that the money remaining at the end of January amounted to only about $100,000. He said the Spitale payment was "inadvertently" disclosed last November.

Sums ranging as high as $158,000 were listed by Mr. Sherman as having "gone for rehabilitation," and Mr. Doragoff added that the local's president said he would be sent to jail if the details became known.

Sherman Accuses Exhibitors

Mr. Sherman said in New York that every dollar had been duly accounted for. He denied he had paid $7,500 to Spitale and charged that Doragoff's Washington testimony was "given at the instigation of Sam Kaplan," deposed head of Local 306.

"Kaplan has associated himself through his company, the Sam Kaplan Manufacturing and Supply Co., with the exhibitors whom Local 306 has been fighting since I became president," Mr. Sherman said. "These exhibitors feel that with Kaplan again in control of Local 306, they will be able to accomplish their purposes."

One of the sights of the week in Washington was that of a group of nationally known industrialists and labor leaders solemnly attempting to solve the problem occasioned by the discharge by Elkhart (Ind.) Amusement Company of nine ushers as a result of their union activities.

One of the ushers, now an official in the union, presented their case. Al Manta, president of the company, testified the question was "whether I am to run my theatre" and pointed out that if he reinstated the boys he would have to discharge 12 usherettes, thereby increasing unemployment.

Amateur statisticians figured it would have been cheaper to pension the ushers. The Indianapolis regional board's order that the boys be reinstated had been appealed. So far the argument has cost the Government, the company and the ushers probably hundreds of dollars.

Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt this week ruled that theatre cleaners, whether employed directly by theatre operators or cleaning contractors, are subject to the labor provisions of the motion picture and legitimate theatre codes and cannot be worked more than 40 hours weekly. American Maintenance Corp., New York, a cleaning contractor, has been charged by the Theatre and Amusement Employees' Union, Local 118, with working theatre cleaners 50 to 80 hours.

Poster Group Considers Making Own Accessories

Following a two-day session at the Coronado Hotel, St. Louis, members of the National Protective Poster Service Association on Tuesday left for their respective territories. While individual members refused to discuss developments, it was understood the bulk of the meeting was devoted to discussions of whether the renters would get out their own posters, stills and other accessories. The plan was to have been approved at the convention, however, before production commenced.

The organization's directors had met in New York prior to their departure for St. Louis to lay plans for poster production. Simon Libros, president, was reelected.

Censor Board Established After Lafayette, La., Drive

The city council of Lafayette, La., has passed an ordinance establishing a board of censors for all amusements, billboards, books, magazines and other publications. The ordinance is the result of a campaign against objectionable films, suggestive billboards and immoral literature begun recently by Bishop Jeanmard.

The Very Reverend A. F. Canon Isenberg, rector of St. John's Cathedral, in Lafayette, led the movement. Also cooperating were the Protestant churches, Parent-Teachers' Association, Knights of Columbus, Catholic Daughters, St. Vincent de Paul Society, the Cathedral Ladies' organization and the sodalities.

Censorship Bill Abandoned; Ohio Fights New Levy

Abandonment in Delaware of a proposed censorship bill; vigorous opposition voiced by Ohio exhibitors against a new film tax, and expected action by the New Jersey lawmakers on a new billboard levy, were the principal developments during the week in state legislative activities as they affect the motion picture business.

Representatitve Hopkins withdrew his bill to create a state censorship board in Delaware, in favor of Representative Elliott's proposed measure calling for a ten-cent tax on each 100 hundred feet of film. This levy, it is understood, would be paid at the time of the first showing in the state, which, obviously, would place the burden on the large theatres.

Exhibitors and the trade at large in Ohio are fighting Representative Gunsett's proposal to tax all films five cents per foot at the time of censoring. The local industry has protested that the levy would be absolutely ruinous to independents, because, in many instances, the aggregate censorship fees that would be collected would exceed the cost of the film to several exhibitors, totaling about $300 on a 6,000-foot feature. Exhibitors now have a ten per cent ticket tax.

Action was expected from the New Jersey state legislative Miscellaneous Business Committee which was considering a revision, upwards, of the tax on billboards throughout the state.

The Gulf State Theatre Owners Association in Louisiana will fight the proposed state bill to license operators.

Blumenthal Loses Suit Based on Fox Stock Deal

Attempts of A. C. Blumenthal of New York to obtain a share of a $300,000 profit which Albert M. Greenfield obtained from the sale of Fox film and theatre stock were unsuccessful when early this week the United States supreme court at Washington refused to review a decision of the Philadelphia circuit court of appeals. The supreme court affirmed the decision of that court, which in turn had reversed a federal district court verdict to the amount of $151,575 in favor of Mr. Blumenthal. Mr. Greenfield defended the appeal action by contending the amount received was indirectly a gift from William Fox.

Columbia Sets Release Deal in France, Belgium

Columbia has closed a deal with Cinematographique Luxemburg, in Europe, whereby that company will distribute Columbia product in France and Belgium for the next two years, according to Joseph H. Seidelman, European manager, just returned from abroad. The new company plans to spend 5,000,000 francs in dubbing Columbia product, he said.

Mr. Seidelman declared Columbia will continue its sales office in Paris under E. Zama. Business in England is exceptionally good, he indicated, and said Columbia plans no personnel changes in the European offices, and will undertake no production abroad. Henri Brunet, conducting a survey there, will return from Europe shortly.

Hector Turnbull Dead at 45; Was Lasky Supervisor

Hector Turnbull, scenario writer, former supervisor of production for Jesse L. Lasky, and once dramatic critic of the New York Tribune, died late last week at his home in New Hope, Pa., following an illness of more than a year. He was 45 years old.

In 1915 Mr. Turnbull left the Tribune to write scenarios and plays for Lasky Productions. Among his first stories was "The Cheat," in which Sessue Hayakawa, Japanese actor, had the leading role. When the Lasky company merged with Famous Players in 1916, Mr. Turnbull went to New York as scenario and story editor. After one year he returned to the Coast to become production supervisor. After the War, during which he saw active service, Mr. Turnbull rejoined Mr. Lasky, then a vice-president of Paramount. When Mr. Lasky resigned to produce independently for Fox, Mr. Turnbull went with him as production chief. In the spring of 1933 he resigned because of poor health.

He had married Miss Blanche Lasky, sister of Mr. Lasky. She died in 1932. Surviving are a daughter, five sisters and a brother, all of New Hope. Another brother, Frank Turnbull, who died several years ago, was president of Rogers Peet Company, New York.

MONOGRAM BUDGET IS $2,500,000 FOR 20 FEATURES IN NEXT SEASON

Production Fund Represents Third Successive Increase in Four Years of Producing; Titles of 18 Films Announced

[Picture in Pictorial Section]

Setting a production budget of $2,500,000 for the twenty features to be produced and distributed during the 1934-35 season, Monogram Pictures Corporation closed its fourth annual sales convention Sunday in Atlantic City.

In addition to the increase of $250,000 in the production budget over last year, the company directors voted a 6 per cent dividend on the company's stock, payable May 1.

The new budget brings the average negative cost of Monogram product for next season up to more than $100,000 and the increase is the third successive one voted by the franchise holders in their four years of production and distribution activity. The new budget is two and one-half times greater than that approved for the first year of Monogram's existence.

Trem Carr, vice-president in charge of Monogram production, said the new budget would enable the studio to employ 200 additional persons in various technical capacities, fulfilling a primary objective of the NRA and the code.

The 1934-35 Stories

The entire 1934-35 program will be produced by Monogram's own production unit and will consist of the following stories:

"Redhead," a best-seller by Vera Brown and published by Grosset & Dunlap.

"Girl of My Dreams," a college story.

"The Big Top," a story of the circus.

"Ten Minute Eggs," a play written by Tay Garnett in collaboration with N. Brewster Morse.

"The Fashion Parade," scheduled to be tied up with a contest in 200 newspapers.

"Sinners in Sing Sing," based on "Sing Sing Nights," by Harry Stephen Keeler, and selected by the Crime Club as a prize winning novel.

"Plunder," an original by Albert J. Meserow and Elynore Dalkhart. (Mr. Meserow is a Chicago attorney and the story is based on receivership "racketeering.")

"Dancing Feet," an original by Tristram Tupper.

"Country Club," an original by Mr. Tupper.

"Honeymoon Limited," by Vida Hurst and published by Grosset & Dunlap.

"Ice Carnival," an ice hockey story written by George Waggner, who wrote "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

"Hotel Register," an original by Tristram Tupper.

"Tomorrow's Youth," by Harry Sauber.

"Woman Against Man," a story of the courts by Frederick and Fanny Hatton.

"The Mystery Man," by Albert Payson Terhune.

"A Successful Failure," by Michael Kane, soon to appear in the Saturday Evening Post under the title "Your Uncle William."

"Million Dollar Baby," by Joseph Santley.

"The Healer," a novel by Robert Herrick.

In addition to those 18 pictures, Monogram will produce two specials, the stories for which are under option. W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president, said this week that the type of material and directorial talent for these two will convince exhibitors that Monogram is "headed toward the big time."

The company also will release eight John Wayne westerns, to be produced by All-Star Productions. (This is not the same All-Star organization as the one headed by Chester Erskin.)

Lionel Atwill has been signed for three pictures and negotiations are under way for other star names, Mr. Johnston said. No outside producers will contribute to the 20-feature program and Monogram's own unit producers will continue to work under Mr. Carr as formerly, with Lou Ostrow continuing as executive producer.

In his annual report to the stockholders, Mr. Johnston said that the net earnings of the company for the past 12 months, from March 1, 1933, to February 28, 1934, showed a net profit more than double the previous year's earnings, and that gross billings of the corporation exceeded those of the previous 12 months by $577,021, while the combined film rentals of the 27 affiliated exchanges for the fiscal year of 1933 amounted to slightly in excess of $4,000,000.

Directors elected for the coming year included Mr. Johnston, Mr. Carr, Robert F. Withers, Irving Mandel, Herman Rifkin, Jack S. Jossey, Floyd St. John, Sam Seplowin, Norton Ritchey and Arthur Bromberg.

The convention came officially to a close Saturday night with a banquet at the Ambassador hotel. The banquet meeting was addressed by Nathan Yamins, unaffiliated exhibitor representative on the Code Authority; John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the Code Authority; Jacob Schechter, counsel to the Federation of the Motion Picture Industry; Ben Goetz, vice-president of Consolidated Film Industries; Mr. Johnston, Mr. Carr and Pete Harrison. Edward Golden, Monogram sales director, acted as toastmaster.

Not Dropping First Division Tieup

Mr. Johnston denied this week a report that the expanding activities of First Division Exchanges, Inc., might result in the dropping of First Division's distribution tieup with Monogram.

"The report is entirely erroneous and without foundation," Mr. Johnston said. "Furthermore, First Division owns the New York City, Southern New Jersey, Southern Pennsylvania and Delaware franchise on Monogram and the franchise is a permanent franchise which cannot be broken except by mutual consent.

"These two territories involve the biggest territories and to indicate that the permanent affiliation is just about to be dissolved is unfair to both interests and creates confusion in the minds of the exhibitors in those territories."

Paramount Promotes Gluck

Morris Gluck, formerly handling non-theatrical accounts at the Paramount New York exchange, is now in charge of the ad sales department. Morris Volk, who has been in the booking department, succeeds Mr. Gluck in his former post. C. J. Rossiter has replaced F. C. Bernard as ad sales manager of the Fox exchange in San Francisco. W. C. Hallwachs has succeeded N. E. Kassell in Chicago.

1,000 Sign For AMPA Dinner

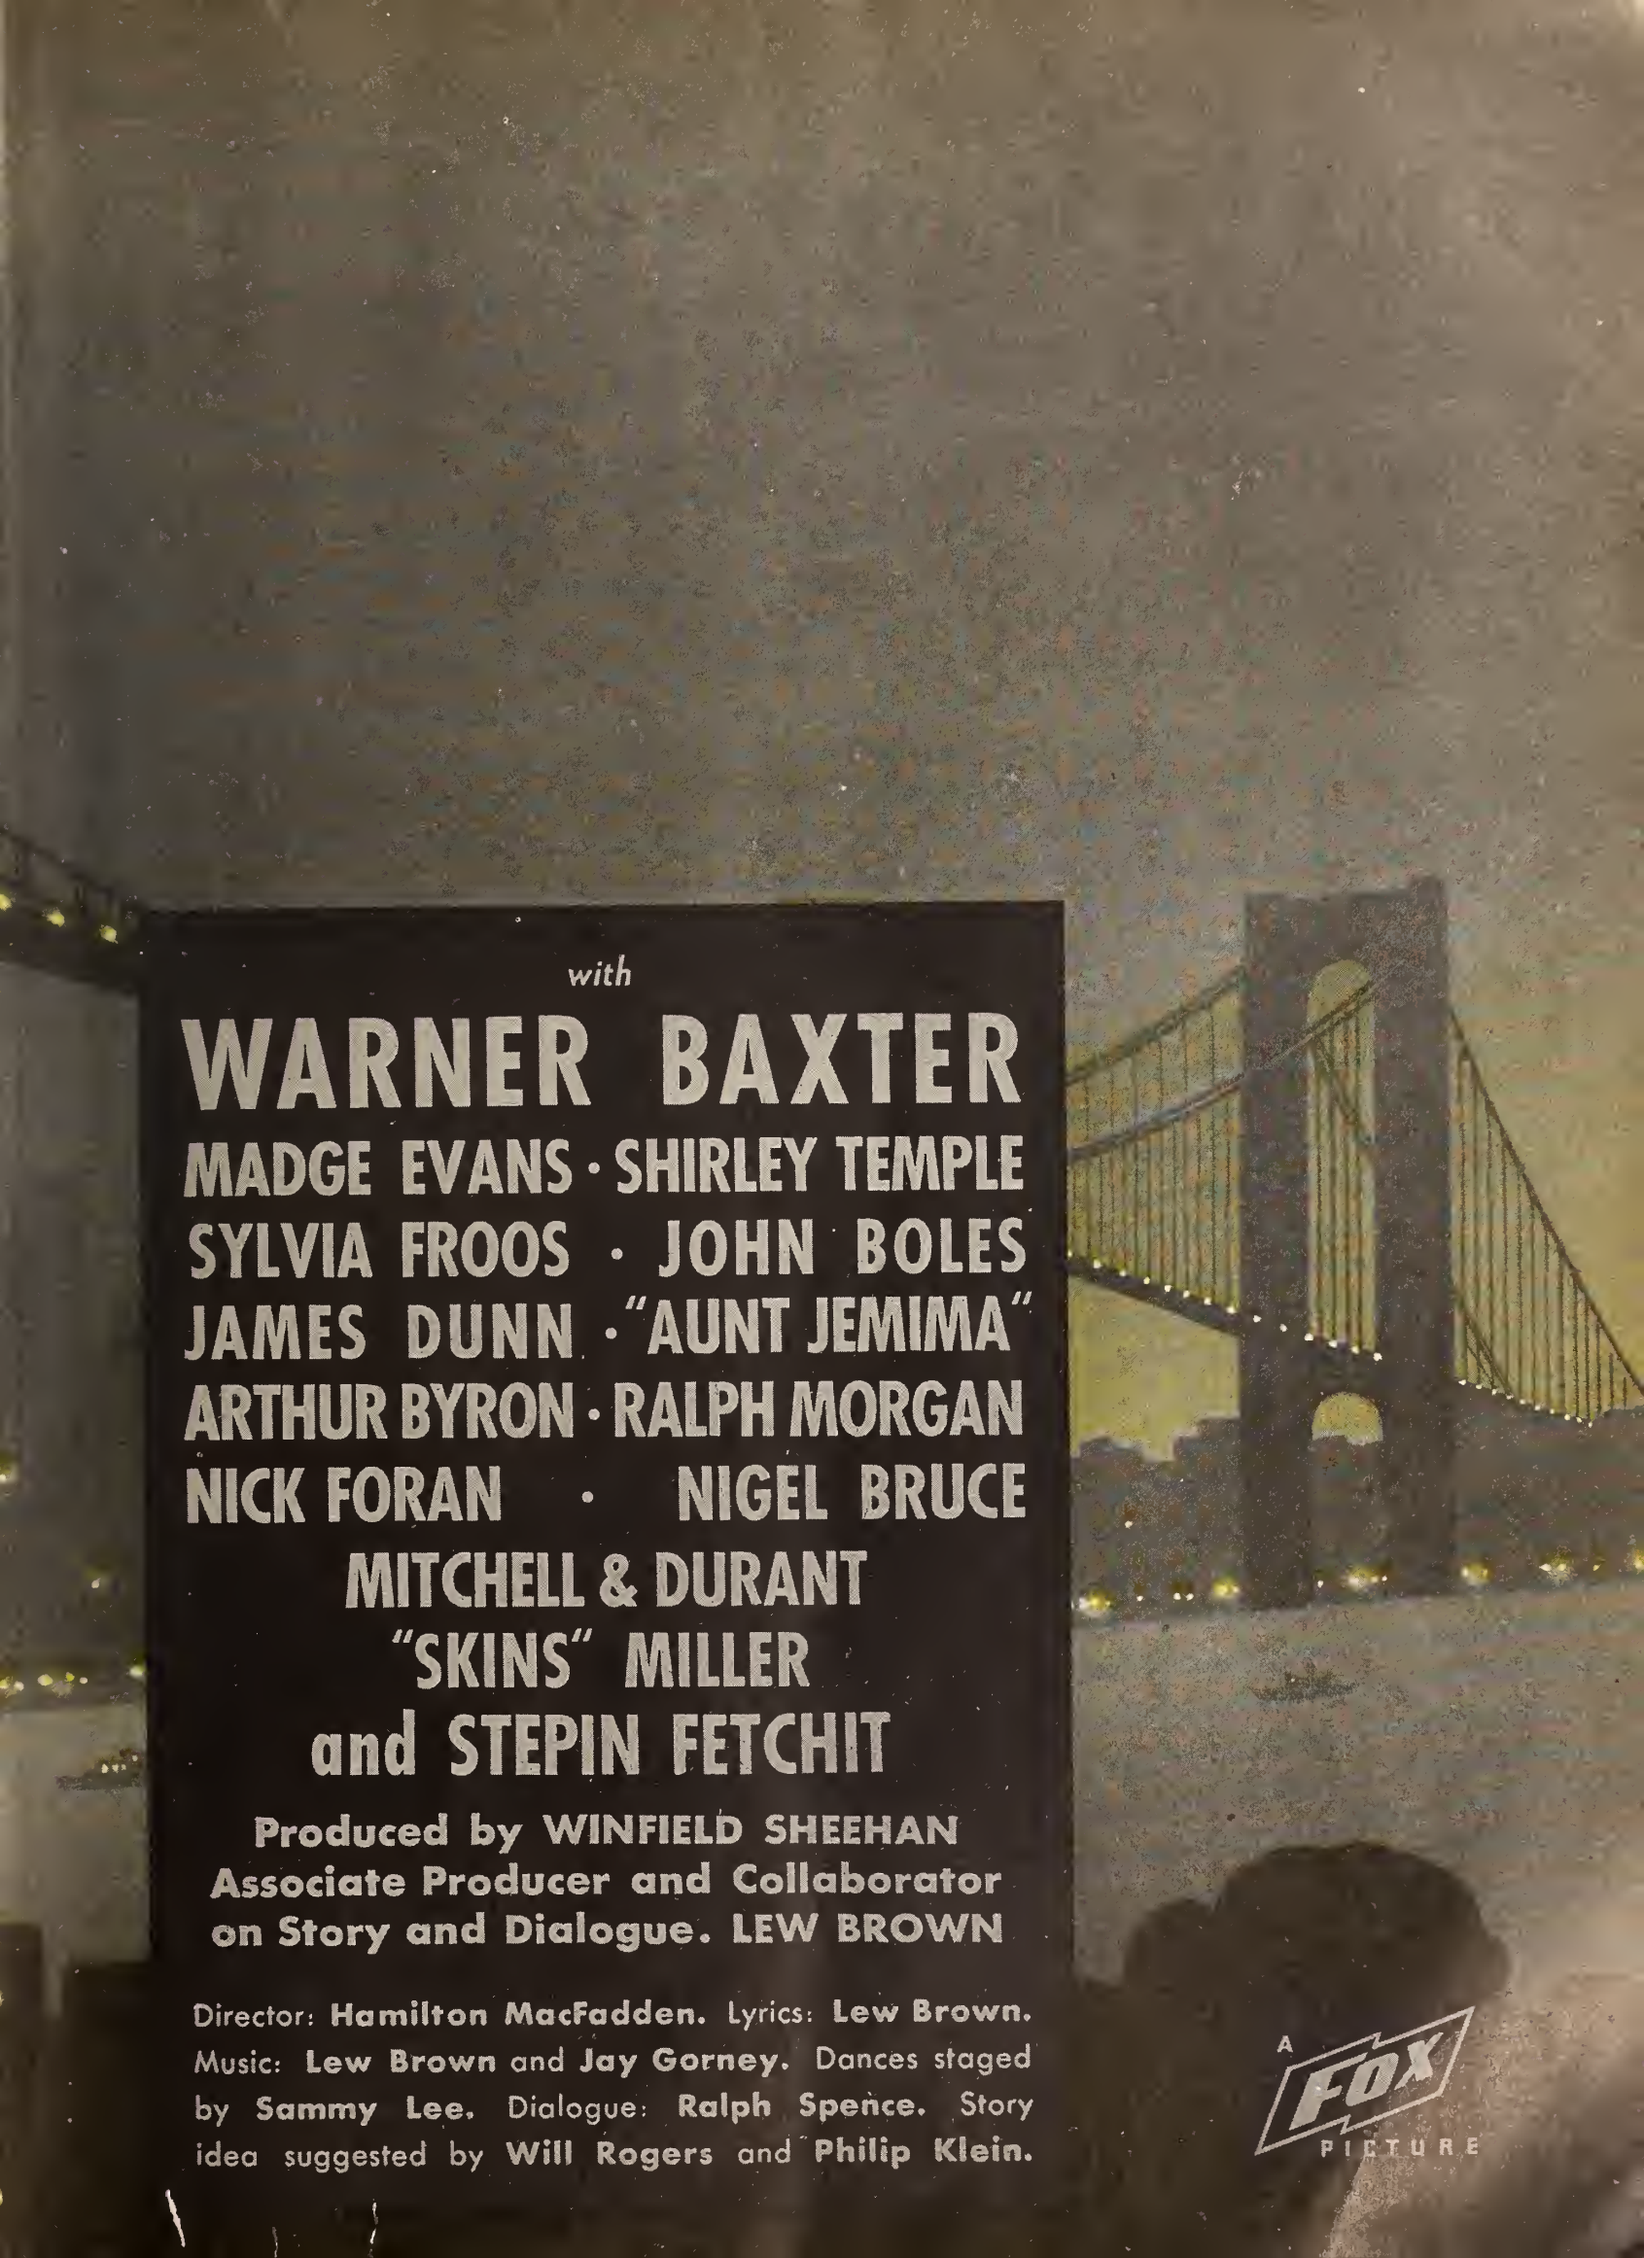
Committees in charge of the "Naked Truth Dinner" of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers reported Wednesday that reservations for the event, to be held Saturday evening, April 21, at the Astor Hotel in Times Square, had exceeded 1,000. The New York Film Board of Trade and its exhibitor and exchange members sent in a blanket order for 20 tables, seating 200, and practically all the large companies were on the reservation list.

Any returns exceeding expenses will be divided evenly between the Motion Picture Relief Fund in the East and the Film Daily Relief Fund.

The dinner-dance also will serve for the induction into office of the new AMPA executive slate for 1934-35, which probably will be headed by Colonel William R. Ferguson, of Howard Dietz's staff at MGM.

In charge is Paul Benjamin, of National Screen Service. Handling the annual souvenir journal are Walter Eberhardt, of Erpi; Ed Finney, Monogram, and James P. Cunningham, of Motion Picture Herald. Members of the entertainment committee, which has been at work lining up principal screen and stage stars, include: Ray Gallagher, Arnold Van Leer, Don Hancock, Charles Alicoate, Harry Blair, Eli Sugarman, Marvin Kirsch, and Ed Finney.

One of the scheduled dinner speakers is Mrs. August Belmont, of Rev. William Harrison Short's Motion Picture Research Council.



Research Council Names Mrs. Sabin

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, socially prominent New Yorker, and noted as national chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform up to the time of Prohibition repeal, has been named a member of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Research Council, according to an announcement by Mrs. August Belmont, president.

Mrs. Sabin has been prominent in politics, having been president of the Women's National Republican Club and a member of the Republican National Committee. Mrs. Sabin will take part in the Council's national membership drive.

The membership campaign is to be carried into New England, Mrs. Belmont announced, with an opening conference luncheon scheduled for the Hotel Somerset, Boston, April 14. Dr. A. THE PARTY'S OVER

Columbia

A domestic comedy, this story deals with characters and situations intimately familiar to almost every one. The yarn was adapted from the Daniel Kusell stage play by S. K. Lauren, author of "Blonde Venus" and scenarist of "Evenings for Sale," "Pick Up," "Jennie Gerhardt" and the atmospherically similar "Three Cornered Moon." Walter Lang, director of "Warrier's Husband," "No More Orchids" and "Meet the Baron," directed.

The cast is exclusively an all picture name affair. Stuart Irwin, now in "Viva Villa," is the hero. Supporting him are Ann Sothern, currently featured in "Melody in Spring;" Arline Judge, Chick Chandler, who appeared in "Melody Cruise" and "Blood Money;" Patsy Kelly of short subject fame and also currently in "Countess of Monte Cristo;" Catherine Doucet, Marjorie Lytell, one of the girls in "Finishing School;" Henry Travers, William Bakewell, Esther Muir and Rollo Lloyd.

Geared to a hectic pace, the script dialogue calls for plenty of rapidfire action. Modern in every phase, with the title having more than usual showmanship significance, the story, merging vivid realism with ludicrous satire, takes a healthy sock at a broad section of present-day Americana. A poor, honest, loyal soul is the sole support of his giddy trigger-brained family, while his own career and romance withers. Everybody's troubles are his, but no one except his sweetheart bothers about his. But when things get too tough, the boy blows up; the party's over as far as he's concerned, and the queer melange is left to work out its own salvation.

It has the looks of being an audience picture, plus the advantage of intimate present-day psychology, familiar to millions, which readily can be adapted to pungent, unique showmanship.

THE LAST GENTLEMAN

U. A.-20th Century

Basically a family character drama, this story is in direct contrast to the current Arliss picture, "House of Rothschild." The story is adapted from an original play by Katherine Clugston, with Leonard Praskins applying to the scenario a story telling technique similar to that of "Emma." Sidney Lanfield, previously associated with more youthfully atmosphered pictures, such as "Dance Team," "Hat Check Girl" and "Broadway Bad," will have opportunity to handle a more serious theme as director.

As Arliss is starred, the cast comprises a group of well-known screen names in roles all subordinate to the principal's, but nevertheless important in the story narration. With each character treated in semi-episodic fashion, the members of the Arliss family who await the reading of the considered-eccentric old gentleman's will prior to his demise are: Edna May Oliver; Janet Beecher, last seen with Ann Harding in "Gallant Lady"; Charlotte Henry, the little girl of "Alice in Wonderland"; Ralph Morgan, recently in several Fox pictures, principally "Power and Glory" and "Dr. Bull"; Edward Ellis, Frank Albertson, Rafaela Ottiano, outstanding in "Bondage"; Donald Meek, Joseph Cawthorn and Harry Bradley.

The story, modern in atmosphere, has a New England homestead locale. A favorite niece reported killed by Chinese bandits, Arliss summons the others of the family to a memorial service. Each one, wondering how he will fare in the gentleman's will when he dies, is put to tests that mirror their conniving to win the old fellow's favor. As romance develops between Charlotte Henry and Albertson, Arliss, knowing that he will die soon, has a talking picture made of his property distribution which takes splendid care of the young pair and gives the others their just desserts.

Everything considered, George Arliss, because of "Rothschild," is the dominating showmanship asset.

SUE OF FURY

Warner

Melodramatic romance, portrayed against an exciting action background which imparts an unusual twist to the standby triangle premise, is the entertainment essence of this story. Based on a stage play by R. Gore-Browne and J. L. Hardy, the scenario was written by Laird Doyle, remembered for his adaptation of "Hell Below." Michael Curtiz, recently credited with "Female" and "The Kennel Murder Case," directed.

With the exception of the leading woman, all important members of the cast are familiar players. William Powell, whose last picture is "Fashions of 1934" and who will soon be seen in "The Thin Man," heads the cast. Edna Best, popular British actress, seen in American film theatres in "William and Mary," has the principal feminine role. They, together with Colin Clive, who was featured in "Christopher Strong" and "Looking Forward," constitute the triangle. Others in the cast are Halliwell Hobbes, now in "All Men Are Enemies;" Donald Crisp, J. M. Kerrigan, Maxine Doyle, Hobart Cavanaugh, Arthur Treacher, Henry O'Neill and Philip Regan.

Located in Dublin, its time immediately following the Irish Revolution when the Black and Tan depredations terrorized the country, a gripping atmospheric background is provided for the three-party love affair which is both grimly realistic and tenderly sentimental. As the story runs the range of theatre assets in its elements, it aims to tell a powerful story of desire and disappointment in novel thrilling style. It brings an almost forgotten lover between husband and wife. With the thrill of Sinn Fein activities serving as the action background, the motivating story precipitates heroism, intrigue, sacrifice and weird personal conflict that packs a punch in almost every sequence.

The novel atmosphere in which the story is told suggests fresh showmanship angles which, properly applied, should be more potent than either cast names or title significance in exciting curiosity.

OF HUMAN BONDAGE

(Title to be changed)

RKO Radio

This drama is the emotional story of a fine man's tragic love for a faithless woman. The original is by W. Somerset Maugham, whose novels and short stories have been widely read. He lists among his screen credits the authorship of "Rain," "Our Betters" and "Narrow Corner." The screen play is by Lester Cohen, who recently functioned in a like capacity on "Sweepings" and "One Man's Journey." The director, whose adaptability to this type of story is demonstrated by "Ann Vickers," "Silver Cord" and "Double Harness," is John Cromwell.

The cast is headed by Leslie Howard, making his first screen appearance since "Berkeley Square." Bette Davis, featured in many Warner pictures, has the principal feminine role. The small supporting cast includes Frances Dee, lately in "Coming Out Party" and "Finishing School"; Kay Johnson, the girls' counsellor in "Eight Girls in a Boat"; Reginald Denny and Alan Hale, both of whom were in "Lost Patrol"; Reginald Owen, remembered for his part in "Queen Christina," and Reginald Sheffield, young British actor who has been seen in several George Arliss pictures.

Attuned to the Howard talents, the story, which should attain the entertainment standards expected of that star, apparently is aimed to play forcefully on feminine heartstrings. It narrates the bitter experiences of a sensitive and artistic student, Howard, whose love for Bette Davis impels him to take her back, no matter how soul-searing her many philanderings. It tells of a man who, despite the sincere warnings of his friends, stuck to his strange love, forgiving her sins, until her death makes clear the way to true happiness with Frances Dee.

A tragic love story, in which cast personnel reflects the character of Somerset Maugham's fictionary persons, it seems that showmen have in it a unique opportunity to construct a ticket-selling campaign along the 'Bring the handkerchief along" idea.

SADIE McKEE

MGM

This is the kind of story for Joan Crawford in which the modernes' idol always has appeared to best advantage. So much flash showmanship is available in cast, author, director and production credits, as well as theme value, that picking the most commercially potent seems the most difficult task. The story by Vina Delmar, author of "Bad Girl," "Pick Up" and "Woman Accused," ran serially in Liberty about six months ago. The screen play is by John Meehan, associated recently with such features as "Prizefighter and the Lady," "When Ladies Meet" and "Hell Below." Clarence Brown, whose screen accomplishments include two previous Joan Crawford pictures, "Letty Lynton" and "Possessed," as well as "A Free Soul," "Looking Forward" and "Night Flight," is the director.

Supporting Miss Crawford are Franchot Tone, previously with her in "Dancing Lady" and "Today We Live"; Esther Ralston, Edward Arnold, Gene Raymond, Jean Dixon, Leo Carroll, Earl Oxford and Gene Austin, with Candy and Coco as cafe entertainers.

Modernly timed with rapid fire dialogue provoking equally fast action, the story is both the romantic and dramatic career of Sadie McKee, a girl whose driving ambition for fame and love carried her from calico to ermine with many amazing interludes.

Produced in a spirit akin to the story punch, this picture seems to have all the latest showmanship essentials to meet the patron demand for Joan Crawford entertainment, reborn in all its glamour in "Dancing Lady."

Hollywood production activities paused at one time or another this week to entertain the delegates of the 14th annual convention of the MPTOA, which opened Monday with a board of directors' meeting and continuing on until Thursday night's gala banquet in the Fiesta Room of the Ambassador Hotel.

On Tuesday afternoon Warner entertained with a buffet lunch and studio trip. In the evening, showmen moved over to Universal for a dinner dance. Wednesday they visited Fox and RKO in the afternoon and at night were guests at a banquet—music—dance extravaganda staged by all the major producing organizations at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Thursday, the final day, conventioneers were to visit Paramount and Columbia studios.

Producers spared no expense in giving the boys a big show Wednesday night, with acts from ten studios. The top line players were to appear at the Thursday night show.

Among the guest speakers at morning business sessions were Carl Laemmle, who talked on "Meeting the Exhibitor Half Way," L. B. Mayer on production, Cecil B. DeMille on "How Pictures Are Put Together," and Joseph Breen talked on "Self Regulation in Advertising Motion Pictures."

Independents Active

Independent production is looking up.

Mickey Neilan is in town working on a production idea, soon to be announced.

Derr and Sullivan are still in a huddle with plans crystalizing and daily conferences.

Ben Jacksen is working on a feature unit, but undecided whether he will produce in Hollywood or New York.

Phil Goldstone is back and shooting.

Ben Pivar is setting six.

Willis Kent has just finished one and the Alexander Brothers are about to launch a six-picture program.

Sid Grauman, in his advertisement on "The House of Rothschild," said the production will not be shown in Southern California during 1934, which gives the Chinese nine months' protection in this zone.

At the first press preview of "Viva Villa," the opening title informed the audience, "You are about to see the world's premier of 'Viva Villa.'"

During the week the film was previewed in five different Fox West Coast theatres, some of which were running double features, which, with "Viva," made triple bills. Protests from independent exhibitors brought assurance from Fox Westco that it wouldn't happen again.

The Hays office, acting under the Production Code, is now suggesting to producers list of books and plays not to purchase, on the grounds their contents may not be filmable under the provisions of the Code.

In the case of the purchase of "The Postman Rings Twice," by MGM, the Code chief deemed it advisable that portions of the novel be rewritten. MGM is acquiescing.

Hal Roach has closed down for three weeks, as is his custom each year. This season's close coincides with Stan Laurel's voluntary leave of absence without pay.

When Mr. Roach reopens his studio, he has elaborate plans to produce "Lysistrata," torrid sex play, penned by Aristophanes, the ancient Greek philosopher, in a weak moment.

Hollywood is conjecturing whether Hal will film his feature as was written, modernize it, or burlesque it.

ERPI's President Speaks

Here to visit his son, an art director at Fox Studio, and to view the Hollywood scene after an absence of five years, John E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., whose realm is more in the field of quiet action than that of forensic verbiage, in exclusive interview told something of his ideas of the industry and the objectives of his company.

"Erpi has no intention of engaging in production," he declared. "Our endeavors concern themselves with sound, with our research laboratories interested in the perfection of the recording and the reproduction of sound.

"True, we were forced to take over some studio plant properties here, but they are being administered only as Service Studios, where the physical conveniences of production activity are made available to producers.

"At various times there were 183 different companies in the recording and reproducing business. Today I believe there are three.

"The latest development since wide range and noiseless recording is the 'phase shift,' another refinement which we are hopeful will give even greater clarity to tone shift."

In discussing curtailment of production and its relation to the overseating problem in theatres, Otterson parried question with question.

"We weren't overseated in 1929, were we? It seems to me that the problem is not one of over or under-seating as much as it is getting the seats used. From the economic viewpoint it is not a question of production, but one of consumption. Getting more money into the hands of the consumer will help the seating problem solve itself as it did before.

"Conditions in the automobile industry presage better times," he said.

Mr. Otterson's stay in Hollywood will be for two weeks.

Project That Didn't Project

A Hollywood legitimate theatre was about to launch the spoken drama in direct competition with picture houses when the project struck a snag.

The Hollywood Playhouse, with E. E. Clive sponsoring "Journey's End," with the original New York cast, had announced the opening at prices keyed equal to movie admissions.

After advertising the opening, the local Actors' Equity ruled that Colin Clive, the leading man, was ineligible to play the part, six months not having elapsed since he played opposite Katharine Hepburn in "The Lake." The six months' clause applied to all foreign actors of the legitimate.

Hollywood, therefore, will not see "Journey's End" at film prices, and the house has been temporarily closed.

MISS EXTRA GETS HER TURN AT "MIKE"

Cecil B. DeMille tells this one on himself:

Directing a mob scene via microphone, Cecilbee asked for complete silence while he explained the action to the leading characters. All complied except two bold little extra girls in the rear. Repeated blasts from De Mille had no effect.

"Say," he called, "if what you're saying is so important come down here and say it over the mocrophone so the whole company can hear it."

Without batting an eyelash, Miss Courageous made her way to the director's stand, took the mike, and calmly announced:

"I was just asking my friend when that baldheaded director was going to call lunch."

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Martin Manton, last week, ruled that monies expended for legitimate entertainment were deductible from actors' income tax returns as being necessary to the conduct of their craft, if not reimbursed by employers.

Immediately Hollywood artists hereofore not permitted to make entertainment deductions, sought expert advice as to whether Judge Manton's decision was retroactive.

Lucky 13 Baby Stars

Thirteen lucky Wampas Baby Stars, elected last week, will make their debut in Ben Schulberg's production, "Kiss and Make Up."

Mr. Schulberg, who was a press agent once himself and one of the keenest, is guaranteeing all the lassies a minimum of two weeks' work at $50 a week.

Three of the thirteen will be further chosen by him for more important roles in the picture.

After this appearance Paramount has the option of selecting three of the thirteen for term contracts.

Broadcasting, Yes or No

Jules Levy, sales manager of RKO, visiting the western front, is in favor of broadcasting songs of musicals in advance of film showings.

"It helps the box-office," said Mr. Levy. "Hearing the songs creates a desire to see the picture."

Fox Studio, on the other hand, contends that broadcasting songs in advance of film showings detracts from entertainment value, blending its idea with the policy of producers of Broadway stage musicals who do not permit advance radio plugging.

Hollywood, a check-up among musicians, executives and advertising men reveals, is divided on this phase of showmanship.

Production

With 41 features actually in production, Hollywood celebrated the first post-Lenten week by starting 15 new pictures, while 11 were finished.

Radio Studio, after a few weeks of comparative quietness, became intensely active as work started on six. Fox and Paramount each put two pictures before the cameras; Columbia, MGM, Warner, Batcheller, and the newly formed Viking Productions, each with one, round out the total.

Eleven completed productions include three from Universal, a similar trio from Paramount, two from Warner and one each from Twentieth Century, Fox and Monogram.

Radio's half dozen just started embrace a wide variety of entertainment. Heading the list is "Murder on the Blackboard," comedy thriller, with James Gleason, Bruce Cabot, Edgar Kennedy and Regis Toomey. Next is "Arabelle," William Seiter directing, which stars Billie Burke and features Edna May Oliver. "Down To Their Last Yacht" is a Lou Brock comedy, music, girl glamour production which Paul Sloane is directing. "Virgie Winters" co-stars Ann Harding and John Boles with Al Santell directing, and "Sour Grapes," which Worthington Minor is directing, will have Diana Wynyard, Clive Brook, Bruce Cabot, Steffi Duna and Ada Cavell. "Family Man" features Richard Dix and Shirley Grey.

The pair starting at Fox are "Grand Canary," presenting Warner Baxter, Marjorie Rambeau, John Halliday and Zita Johann under Irving Cummings direction, and a Spanish picture titled "Don Cossack." Paramount started "Kiss and Make Up," a B. P. Schulberg production in which Cary Grant, Genevieve Tobin, Helen Mack, Edward Everett Horton and Lucien Littlefield head an extensive cast which includes the 1934 Baby Stars. "Thank Your Stars," is a topical comedy being directed by Wesley Ruggles with Jack Oakie, Dorothy Dell, Roscoe Karns, Arline Judge, Ben Bernie and Alison Skipworth.

"Merry Widow" Shooting

Shooting began on "The Merry Widow" at MGM, with Ernst Lubitsch directing Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier. "Fire Patrol," Columbia contribution, is an original Harold Shumate story for Tim McCoy, which D. Ross Lederman is directing. The Warner new activity is "Hey, Sailor," with James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Gloria Stuart and Frank HcHugh, under Lloyd Bacon's direction.

King Vidor started directing "Our Daily Bread" for Viking Productions, with Tom Keene, Karen Morley, John T. Qualen, Barbara Pepper and Addison Richards the principals. "City Park," Batcheller production, lists Sally Blane, Henry B. Walthall, Hale Hamilton, Edmund Breese and Johnny Harron in the cast.

With three pictures completed, Universal became quiet. The finished trio include "Embarrassing Moments," a William Anthony McGuire comedy, directed by Edward Laemmle and featuring Chester Morris with Marian Nixon; "The Humbug," an adapted stage play, written, scenarized and directed by Max Marcin, in which Nils Asther and Gloria Stuart have the leads, and "Little Man, What Now," produced and directed by Frank Borzage with Margaret Sullavan, Douglass Montgomery, Alan Hale and Mae Marsh in the top spots.

"Dark Tower" Completed

At Warner, "Dark Tower" was finished. Based on a play by George S. Kaufman and Alexander Woollcott and directed by Archie Mayo, this picture stars Edward G. Robinson with Mary Astor, Ricardo Cortez, Louis Calhern, Mae Clarke, Virginia Sale and David Landau in support. Likewise finished is "Old Doll's House," a Damon Runyon story, directed by Alan Crosland, the cast including Dick Barthelmess, Helen Chandler, Ann Dvorak, Helen Lowell, Robert Barrat and Paul Hurst.

"The Last Gentleman," a George Arliss picture, was finished by Twentieth Century. Fox contributed "Now I'll Tell," a screen biography of Arnold Rothstein, famous gambler, in which Spencer Tracy, Alice Faye and Helen Twelvetrees are the principals. Monogram's "The Man from Utah," a western, concludes the list of completed pictures.

Pictures shooting for some time include "The World Moves On" and "Change of Heart," Fox; "Thirty Day Princess" and "Half Way Decent," Paramount; and "Bull Dog Drummond Strikes Back," Twentieth Century.

Out of the Notebook

Zazu Pitts goes to Paramount for the lead in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." W. C. Fields and Charlotte Henry are also in the cast.

"Samson and Delilah" is announced as Cecil B. De Mille's next work after "Cleopatra."

Wallace Beery goes into another modern sea-story following "Treasure Island." The picture will be adapted from the Guy Gilpatric magazine yarns.

"Viva Villa" is being cut since the preview. What can they cut without spoiling it?

Radio adds Steffi Duna to the "Sour Grapes" troupe. Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook head the cast.

Phil Gersdorf wins the Wampas presidency over Sam W. B. Cohen.

George Ade's story, "County Chairman," is the next for Will Rogers following completion of "Merry Andrew."

Is MGM serious about the "Undressed Parade" title for Joan Crawford's next?

Finding room for writers at Paramount is tough. Fifty are struggling for elbow space.

Warner is undecided whether Paul Muni or Edward G. Robinson shall be spotted in "The Country Boy." The yarn was a popular stage play about fifteen years ago.

Warner Baxter and Spencer Tracy have been elevated to full fledged stardom by Fox.

Strange but true. At the Pasadena United Artists Theatre, a considerable portion of the audience, which had come expressly to see "David Harum," besieged the manager, Terry McDaniel, and demanded a refund when a "sneak" preview" was flashed on the screen.

Columbia is enthusiastic over the just-finished "Twentieth Century." John Barrymore and Carole Lombard were equally complimentary.

I'll Tell the World

(Universal)

Comedy Drama

In this picture more than the usual quota of exploitation possibilities are available. That it is a legitimate tieup with the United Press, world news gathering organization, which cooperated extensively with the producers in making the picture, opens the door to unusually effective contacts.

Differing pointedly from the ordinary newspaper inspired picture, it takes punchy advantage of the dramatic excitement surrounding the news gathering and dissemination atmosphere. Against this background, it portrays an imaginative story, rich in standby amusement values. As the hectic comedy element, strongly associated with the Lee Tracy screen character, predominates, there's a novel twist to the romance, drama, personal intrigue, thrill and suspense. Marked by rapid dialogue and fast moving action, it embraces entertainment appeal for both men and women and for juvenile audiences.

Excitement is generated as the story opens. As a famous dirigible is wrecked in the Arctic, Hardwick turns the town upside down looking for his star reporter, Brown, who eventually is found in the company of a fair charmer. On the job, he ingeniously scoops the world. Then, cocky, confident, he is assigned to find out the reason for all the shooting in a mythical European kingdom. Accidentally meeting Princess Helen, aliased as Jane, Brown gets the jump on his rival Briggs and immediately is in the vortex of exciting world moving events.

The girl, slated for the throne but placed on the spot by a gang of conspirators, has more excitement added to her life as Brown falls in love with her. Between his desire to scoop Briggs and his yen for the girl, Brown, still in the dark as to her actual identity, becomes involved in the murder plot. Together with Briggs, he is kidnaped, as the killers set out. A trick by Briggs frees his rival. Brown escapes from the dungeon just in time to frustrate the plot, score a sensational scoop and win the queen.

There's plenty with which to work in selling this picture. The title has a unique and catchy swing. Cast names are strong enough to meet most any demands. Both can be effectively combined in publicizing the interesting and novel entertainment the picture affords. And cooperation from papers subscribing to the United Press service should be worked to the limit.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

I Hate Women

(Goldsmith)

Romantic Drama

Geared to appease the entertainment appetite of the folk who go to theatres to be amused, "I Hate Women" has audience and showmanship values without being pretentious. The story has many varying twists applied to a standby formula, one of which the box office value oftentimes has been demonstrated. It's presented and acted in the spirit of family entertainment; real but not too sentimental romance for the women, action and drama for the men, comedy and semi-mystery for both.

As preliminary identities are established, Scoops, ace reporter, after imbibing about a dozen toasts to the sex he hates, is bundled into a taxi by his pal, Cookie. A girl hops into the cab, much to the befuddled woman hater's amazement, but any way he takes her to his apartment. A big murder has been committed—a big story. As police ransack the town for Anne Meredith, Scoops discovers she's the girl he's harboring. Convinced that Anne is innocent, Scoops connives with a couple of show girls to change her appearance and get her to another hideaway. That done, Scoops would fall in love, but hesitates, remembering all the dirty tricks women have played on him. However, he has two jobs. The first is to outwit the rival reporter, Powell, as to the identity of the girl in his house. The second is to dig up the real killer. With the assistance of Cookie, the first is taken care of, and the pair, working together in true newspaperman-sleuth fashion, eventually discover the real killer as the cops are shown up in the accepted blundering fashion and Powell is made out a regular sucker, a technique that usually starts the gallery gang cheering. As a dying confession is obtained from the murderess, the way is open for love between Anne and Scoop.

In addition to offering a title of strong commercial value, cast names are an asset. The four names of the most potential box office worth are Wallace Ford, June Clyde, Fuzzy Knight and Bradley Page. Use these in combination with the title, together with snappy catchlines accepting the dramatic and romantic character of the show, and accentuate the exciting newspaper atmosphere.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Sisters Under the Skin

Romance

Older folk probably will find this show more interesting than any other class. A romance, it is not a love story as that term commonly is applied. Rather it's the story of a man who in another year will be 50 and no longer young. Other than by suggestion, it ignores youthful zest. Thus a psychological obstacle is present that necessitates thorough understanding of the story idea in creating ingenious showmanship for general audience appeal.

Yates, industrial czar, suddenly becomes aware that youth is slipping by. When he begs his socially ambitious wife to toss everything aside as he would his businesses and go chasing the golden fleece, she thinks he ought to see a doctor. Accidentally attracted to Blossom, show girl, whom Mrs. Yates has engaged as a party entertainer, he sees in her a medium for reliving the lost years. A European hegira sounds heavenly to the girl. But there, as Yates gives her every luxury that money can buy, he finds that she is falling in love with a musician, Zukowski. As youth cannot resist the call of youth, Yates surrenders his siren to the erstwhile piano teacher who once before told him that all his money could never buy the talent of his youthful fingers. Yates phones his wife that he's coming home.

For practical purposes the moral of this story is a more potent showmanship asset than cast personalities or the romantic, light dramatic or comedy contrast values. How to call that most effectively to the attention of the entire potential audience above the adolescent stage is a problem requiring serious consideration.

A sentence credited to George Bernard Shaw and repeated in a recent Brisbane column might prove a unique basis for such an effort. Shaw said: "Youth is the most precious thing in life; it's too bad that it must be wasted on the young folks." If that can be so tricked around that it will serve to reflect the spirit of this picture, it may have a surprising effect.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

age are something of a novelty in western pictures. The Indians even raid a covered wagon caravan, with all the noise and hard riding expected, which should be something the exhibitor may make an extra effort to sell the youngsters.

And then there is the hardy and extremely active Mr. Maynard, who has developed a considerable following among western fans, and is a definitely salable piece of merchandise of his kind. His beautiful white horse, Tarzan, of the many tricks, is not to be overlooked in consideration of the picture's elements.

The film is set in the days of '49, when the cry of "Gold" sent thousands of hardy pioneers scurrying across the plains, into Indian territory and plenty of trouble, in search of the promised land. The picture has good background, and a share of excellent western scenery. The title is valuable, if it is clearly tied in with Maynard and the fact that this is a western picture. In addition to Maynard and Tarzan, the others include several western standby players, and Dorothy Dix as the other half of the romance. Fred Sale, Jr., as her brother, appears an appealing young child performer, and Philo McCullough is the villain of the piece.

Maynard, just in from the gold country of California, undertakes, at the request of an old partner, to be unofficial scout, convoy and leader of the caravan about to start west. Most of the reason he accepts is the partner's sister, Miss Dix, who is aided by the youngster. Before they start, trouble begins when McCullough and his gang attempt to steal the all-important map which indicates the best gold areas. McCullough and his men, who are under suspicion by Maynard, join the train. At a way station, McCullough bets with an old trapper that his horse can run and jump faster and better than the trained steer the trapper is riding. Losing, he precipitates a fight, and he and his gang are ridden out of camp.

Maynard negotiates with the Indian chief through whose territory they must pass, and promises not one buffalo will be shot. The McCullough technique involves stampeding and shooting the herd, setting the Indians to work at a massacre of the train, then taking the map and heading for points west. Maynard is held by the Indians, but Tarzan unties the rope and Maynard reaches the camp ahead of the Indians. The travelers stand off the Indians, set fire to the prairie to stop another Indian rush, and make a dash for the nearest river, and out of the Indian territory. They run into a sharp thunder storm, and there is a real action sequence in which the train of wagons fights its way across the river at night, under a pelting rain, with lightning to illuminate their way. They get across, and McCullough, whose men have been killed by the Indians, meets a like fate when he makes a third attempt to steal the map.

It is an action western, to be sold as such, and preferably in the weekend position.—AARONSON, New York.

Autumn Crocus

Romance

The selling value of this production, from an outstanding stage hit, lies, of course, mainly in the title. The film is effectively put across and has this advantage over the stage show, that the producer was able to get authentic backgrounds from the mountain slopes of the Austrian Tyrol. Its photography is at times sheer beauty, and even the studio shots effectively suggest the picturesque quality of the native "Gasthof." Performance values are high, with Ivor Novello playing the part of the romantic innkeeper, while Fay Compton gives a sensitive study of the pathetic little school teacher to whom love comes too late. Some of your audiences may remember Fay; she did good stuff in those "once upon a time" days of the almost forgotten silent picture.

Most of the story is played out on Alpine slopes. Miss Compton, 35-year-old school marm from dirty Manchester, wanders off into a little Tyrolese village while on a holiday tour, falls in love with the romantic atmosphere of the place, including Novello. She weaves all sorts of dreams around him, and is unconscious of the commonsense warnings of her materially-minded comrade. When she finds Novello is married, the bottom falls out of her little dream, but she tries to persuade herself she can stay there with him in a blissful paradise. Such is the nature of the world, however, that this is impossible, and she allows her friend to convince her it can never be, so back to Manchester she goes, her heart buried among the autumn crocuses.

Sob stuff, but very delicately put over, with acting and direction investing the story with a full weight of sincerity. It's the kind of entertainment that should make its greatest appeal to women patrons, and to the cognoscenti in the high places where a successful stage play is a matter of note. That's why its exploitation lies almost solely in the title.—CHARMAN, London.

The Constant Nymph

(Fox)

Drama

Gaumont-British, English producing company, has translated into terms of the talking screen, under the direction of Basil Dean, the widely read novel of Margaret Kennedy, "The Constant Nymph." Fox is distributing the picture in this country. The exhibitor playing the film here, in particular in the theatres pointing toward the regular run of film patronage, is faced with several selling obstacles, more or less serious, depending upon his type of patron. Mr. Dean was also the producer of the stage version of the novel some time ago.

In the film's favor to a certain extent is its origin. The book cartainly must have been read or at least brought to the attention of some portion of the patronage of almost every theatre. On that basis, the alert exhibitor has an opportunity to go after the women's club and similar groups. He may feel reasonably assured of good technical quality in the production to support his approach.

As for possible selling obstacles, in the first instance the cast is almost completely English, in manner and above all, in speech. Even the leading player, Brian Aherne, though perhaps known by name to a portion of the patronage of certain metropolitan theatres, in general will be almost entirely unfamiliar. The English accented speech, if oft-expressed exhibitor reactions are any criterion, must prove a difficulty in selling the film. Another point to be considered by the exhibitor is the fact that the film has been made to end on stark tragedy, as the heroine, immediately after attaining the happiness in companionship with the hero for which she long suffered, dies in his arms. Could the film be cut a few feet short of its present conclusion, the necessary happy ending could be automatically substituted.

The story revolves about the family of the eccentric composer, Sanger, at whose strange home in the Austrian Tyrole, the film opens, offering an opportunity for beautiful scenic backgrounds. Of the daughters born of his several wives, Victoria Hopper, as Tessa, becomes the story's heroine, the "constant nymph," who never recovers from her first love, as a very young girl, for Aherne, a talented English composer and protege of Sanger. When the latter dies, Aherne sends for the children's only relatives, a cousin, Leonora Corbett, and her father, played by Athole Stewart. Tessa is driven virtually to despair when the straitlaced cousin not only injects a note of stern discipline into their carefree and happy existence, but is the object of an infatuation on the part of Aherne. Miss Corbett and Aherne are married, and Tessa and one of her sisters sent off to school, which they hate, while the couple move to Miss Corbett's London home. There the two young girls come after running away from school. Aherne realizes his mistaken marriage, and after the successful first concert of his new symphony, leaves with Tessa, whose dream is now realized. In a Brussels hotel, stricken by heart disease, the young girl dies in her lover's arms.

It would seem important that the exhibitor make an effort to see the film before playing it, giving him a better opportunity to judge what he may best do and not do with the product.—AARONSON, New York.

Fantomas

(Du World)

Mystery

Produced in France, here is a mystery which loses considerably in effectiveness by reason of the dubbing of English dialogue into what was originally an entirely French picture. There is mystery difficult of solution, and suspense is well sustained. The production lacks explanation of the background of and reason for the murderous depredations of the elusive personage known to the French police and fearsomely to the French population only as Fantomas.

Performers are all equally unknown to American motion picture audiences. While the dubbed dialogue also is something of a sales obstacle, the producers have seen to it that there are comparatively few closeups of the players as they deliver their lines.

Production values are good, the story moving from the typical mystery setting of a castle during a gloomy, storm-swept night to a city apartment, then to a motor racing speedway. The elements of good mystery are all there, and the exhibitor should concentrate on the story.

In the castle, as the film opens, are a group of aristocratic persons. Their conversion turns to the dreaded and mysterious Fantomas, who warns his intended victims, then strikes and disappears. The elderly marquise, owner of the castle, is strangled after a warning has been received that one of the party is to die. The police are brought in and start on the trail of the vanished Fantomas. Under the command of the inspector, the search widens, and it is discovered that the airplane of Lady Beltham has been used by the murderer in his night raid. Also evident is other connection between the two.

Another of the guests, who caught a fleeting glimpse of the marauder, is similarly murdered in her hotel room a few minutes before the police arrive, Fantomas effecting a clever escape. At the race track, where Lord Beltham, another of the castle party, who had seen Fantomas, is driving a racing car, the murderer adds to the toll of death. As Beltham, in the lead, comes tearing around the track, Fantomas pours oil across the track, the car skids and the driver is killed. Eventually Fantomas is trapped in the home of Lady Beltham, he and the inspector fight it out and the murderer is captured. But even then there is no semblance of a connection between the man and his crimes, no background and no motive indicated, the lack of which is decidedly noticeable.

The story, of the mystery variety, is the only feature of the production susceptible of ready selling.—AARONSON, New York.

Your Baby and Mine
(Howard Milton)
Novel

There is considerable novelty and entertainment of a "different" sort in this independently produced subject, made by Howard Milton as one of a series. With Baby Sally Lee, a wholly appealing and naturally performing two-year-old virtually as the only player, the subject recounts with good technical camera work the daily activity of a little girl at home. Mother is indicated by hands, feet and a voice only as she coaxes, remonstrates and orders. The subject may readily be appreciated by adults.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Funny Little Bunnies
(United Artists)
Clever

Unusually clever, highly entertaining, especially for youngsters, but potentially equally enjoyable for adults, this number of the Walt Disney Silly Symphonies pictures in the inimitable Disney cartoon fashion the manner in which the bunnies, in their woodland workshop, carve out chocolate Easter statues of themselves, paint the Easter eggs, with various colors obtained from the end of a rainbow. In this spring season, despite the fact that Easter has passed, the subject is highly appropriate, and cannot fail to meet with the favor of the entire audience, any time, anywhere.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Wolf! Wolf!
(Universal)
Amusing

There is amusement, especially for youngsters, in this Oswald cartoon. The animated hero tells his two young charges, two lambs, to call "Wolf" if the enemy approaches. They fool him twice, but the third time, when the wolf gets them, he does not respond, until it is almost too late. He saves them, of course, from being the chief ingredient of a lamb stew. An average cartoon.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Walking the Dog
Fair

Dog lovers should find a measure of interest in this subject, but it moves rather slowly, and outside of a novel idea, has but little to shout about. One of the series, "As a Dog Thinks," it pictures a young woman strolling with three dogs, a daschund, a terrier and a Scotty. As the dogs nose about here and there, an off screen voice attempts to convey the dogs' conversation, a device which is not especially successful. A bit of byplay among a goose, a rabbit and a dog is amusing.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Strange As it Seems
(Universal)
Interesting

The usual amount of interest is to be found in this, Number 38 of the John Hix series of oddities garnered from various parts of the world. Seen are the Spaniard who makes beautiful figures from the horns of bulls killed by famous matadors, the insidious banyan tree, which winds about other trees, killing them eventually; the pet porcupine fish in Honolulu which answers its master's whistle and feeds on lamb chops; Cal Lipes of Indiana, whose life work is the training of fleas and flea circuses; the remarkable ability of the Mexican Indians in hunting with blowguns. Interesting material.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Pathe Review
(RKO Radio)
Interesting

This, Number 4 of the 1934 series of the review, offers several sequences which should prove of general interest. Leading is Sigmund Spaeth, the "Tune Detective" of radio popularity, who, seated at the piano, explains the art of enjoying music by careful listening. Under the microscope the eye of the common fly becomes an amazing natural phenomenon. Carson Robison and his Buckaroos sing a cowboy number effectively, and the "poetry of motion" is interestingly revealed by the slow motion camera.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Jerusalem, the Holy City
(Vitaphone)
Interesting

There is material of general travelogue interest in this subject of the E. M. Newman series, "Musical World Journeys." With a background of highly effective organ and choir rendition, of religious trend, the subject is chiefly devoted to a picturization of the manner of worship of the Catholic groups of the strangely cosmopolitan city in the Far East. The Jews at the famed Wailing Wall are pictured, as well as some indication of the manner of life and the typical peoples of the city.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Heartburn
(Universal)
Fair Comedy

This is rather another case of a situation where the comedy will be found entertaining if the patrons like the falteringly sheepish Sterling Holloway. If they do not, then it is just another comedy, characterized by its noisiness more than anything else in particular. Holloway, private secretary to Hale Hamilton, is persuaded by his employer to be the triangular menace in order to win back the affection of his wife, who thinks he no longer cares. The complication arises out of Sterling's love for Gloria Shea, Hamilton's sister-in-law. There is considerable excitement, but it is not conducive to many laughs.—Running time, 20 minutes.

How's Crops?
(RKO Radio)
Amusing

There is amusement in this animated cartoon, in which Cubby Bear and his sweetheart set out to trap and fool the possum which has been stealing the crops. In their underground workshop they manufacture growing vegetables, push them up through holes in the ground, and the possum gathers them in. There is novel cleverness in the manufacture of the growing things. Eventually they blow up the possum.—Running time, 7 minutes.

North of Zero
Fair

This rates as only fair comedy material, having little of story value or amusing situation to make it amusing or entertaining. One of the Coronet series, it concerns the owner of a gambling hall in northern Canada, who is willing to take a chance on anything, and is carefully taken in by the big shot from the city. But when the latter tries to take the owner's girl, a Spanish dancer, the big blonde steps into the picture and goes into action. As comedy it is weak and hardly funny.—Running time, 20 minutes.

The Pest
(Universal)
Good

There is highly amusing comedy and good vaudeville material in this subject, a Mentone product, in which James Barton, in an excellent drunk act, barges into a night club, and provides considerably more entertainment and amusement for the screen audience than do the floor show performers themselves. He gets into a row with Joe Wilton and Kathryn Penman, and finally, annoyed by the show, goes into a fast tap routine himself, which is good. An entertaining subject.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Wrong Direction
(Radio)
Comedy

Edgar Kennedy, as the lowly assistant director at the film studio, gets his big chance when the director on a major picture falls ill. Everything is going swimmingly when Kennedy's inevitable family arrive, in the persons of wife Florence Lake, mother-in-law Dot Farley and brother-in-law Billy Eugene. They go to work on him until the star is hysterical, the lover exhausted and Kennedy a wreck. Finally the scene is shot correctly, when it is discovered Eugene had used the camera lens for a hatrack and nothing had been taken. The laugh possibilities are numerous.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Ceiling Whacks
(Universal)
Noisy

Henry Armetta, the Italian-accented comedian who is generally involved in marital difficulties of some sort, is sometimes amusing, but in this case the surrounding subject is much too noisy for comfort. He gets into trouble with his wife, mother-in-law, sister-in-law and the latter's husband, in his own home, and with the upstairs neighbor and the neighbor's wife. When the feminine members of the family leave, the neighbor's wife lands in the bedroom, giving Armetta and his brother-in-law a bad few minutes. It rates as a deafening comedy subject.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Kings Up
(Universal)
Fair Cartoon

A fair number in the Oswald the Rabbit animated cartoon series, wherein Oswald, singing troubadour, entertains the queen, after he gains admittance, and gets into trouble with the villainous duke, who wants to marry the young queen. The battle rages, with the expected animated tricks, until Oswald vanquishes the duke and wins the hand of the queen. Rates on a par with the regular run of cartoon material.—Running time, 7 minutes.

LOCAL CODE BOARDS COMPLETED; DARROW UNIT FINDS QUIZ FUTILE

Review Board Members Call Revision Proposals Useless Unless Economists Support Testimony of "Little Man" Hearings

The Code Authority over the weekend finally completed the nationwide field machinery for administering the motion picture code, appointing the last boards for New York and Philadelphia, and, at the same time, ruled that exhibitors must discontinue "bank nights" and "race nights." The Authority's decision was being awaited with regards the amounts to be assessed individual producers, distributors and exhibitors to make up the $360,000 necessary for the first year of code administration. All field local boards will be operating in two weeks.

In Washington, Chairman Clarence Darrow of the National Recovery Review Board, aided by Charles Edward Russell, Socialist author, was writing his report on the code, following the hearing of complaints voiced by the socalled "little man," other members were preparing to leave on April 15, convinced of the futility of their efforts and determined to sign no reports which might subject them to ridicule.

May Ask Block Booking Ban

Members of the Board were frank in saying that unless the testimony could be adequately supported by economists familiar with the practices complained of, any recommendations that codes be revised would be valueless.

If Chairman Darrow presents a report, however, it will contain specific recommendations for revision to eliminate allegedly onerous burdens upon independent exhibitors by such practices as protection, dating and forcing of shorts. Under the influence of Mr. Russell, it may go so far as to urge block booking elimination.

It was indicated that a permanent body with an adequate staff of properly trained experts will be recommended. Members intimated that if Mr. Darrow attempted to force their hands they would prepare a dissenting report.

There has been disagreement among the members almost from the start. At least one member outlined an organization which would include economic advisers, but his proposal was rejected by Mr. Darrow. It is believed in Washington the President never intended to make the present Board a permanent body.

Members See Close Inquiry Needed

Several members feel that the hearings have shown the need for close examination of codes for removing inequities. They also believe there has been shown a preponderance of representation on Code Authorities by the largest units of industries.

As part of General Hugh Johnson's NRA reorganization plan, the service trades codes have been assigned to Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt, and it is expected he also will be given the banking code. In addition he has charge of the amusement, garment trades, advertising and transportation codes.

Weeks of wrangling between independent and large distributors and independent and circuit exhibitors over the candidates to represent them on the New York and Philadelphia Local Grievance and Local Clearance Boards came to an end Friday evening when the Code Authority announced the personnel structure of the boards for both cities, and also announced it had appointed advisory sub-committees to the main New York Clearance Board. These advisory sub-committees, which will each advise on clearance conditions in specific parts of the Metropolitan area, are to report directly to the Code Authority and are in no way subject to the control of the main Clearance Board.

It was felt that the Code Authority's decision in making the advisory committees subject to the Authority would alleviate the tension caused by the protests of local independents over the advisory committee appointments.

Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, and Mrs. Mabel Kinney, California state labor board, will open a Hollywood Code Authority office immediately, where matters pertaining to studio labor, extras, agencies and freelance players, will be handled.

Appointment by the Code Authority of the New York and Philadelphia boards completes the machinery for administering the code in the field. The personnel of the boards, and the interests which they represent, follows:

Secretaries Must Serve Exclusively

Five local code board secretaries were appointed this week: Emma Abplanalp, Chicago; Love B. Harrell, Atlanta; Robert Klingensmith, Pittsburgh; Jane Holloran, Buffalo; Duke Dunbar, Denver.

Many of the Local Grievance Boards and Local Clearance Boards in the field were awaiting the Code Authority's endorsement of candidates' names forwarded to the Authority last week. Both boards in each town will have one secretary, and, in the majority of cases, it appears that the local Film Board of Trade secretary will be the successful candidate.

However, no code board secretary may hold any other position, and, therefore, acceptance by a secretary of the code board appointment must immediately be followed by his resignation as Film Board secretary.

Exhibitors not signing the code will not be permitted to file complaints under the code with any Local Grievance Board.

Code Budget Set At $360,000

The budget for the first year of administering the code is ready for the final approval of the NRA and the Code Authority, and it is expected that exhibitors, exchanges, producers, distributors, studios and others will learn before the end of the week the amounts they will be compelled to contribute. The total amount needed for the first year is said to approximate $360,000, with exhibition paying half, and production and distribution paying the remainder.

Exhibitors in the future must discontinue the staging of "Bank Nights," and "Race Nights;"

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Immediate reply is being made direct to the many letters which Motion Picture Herald is receiving from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service for all readers. They contain many explanatory points pertinent to the business as its conduct is prescribed by the Code.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

This service is available to everyone. Send questions to the Code Editor, Motion Picture Herald, 1790 Broadway, New York City.

No. 12—NEW YORK

QUESTION—Will you inform me as to what the required salaries are according to the code for projectionists, managers, cashiers, publicity men and other help in towns of 1,800 population?

ANSWER—Projectionists shall receive not less than the minimum wages which were in effect as of August 23, 1933, and shall not work more than the schedule of hours which were in effect on the same date, provided, however, that such working schedule shall not exceed 40 hours per week.

Cashiers, in towns of less than 15,000 population, shall be paid as their minimum weekly wage not less than a 20 per cent increase over the wages which were being paid to them as of August 1, 1933, provided, however, that such 20 per cent increase over the August 1 wage does not require for these employees a wage in excess of 25 cents per hour, or $10 for a 40-hour week.

Managers and publicity men: The code does not stipulate specifically what wages shall be paid to theatre managers or publicity men. However, the code does say that any employee whose wages are not otherwise stipulated in the code shall be paid not less than 40 cents per hour for a 40-hour week. Another clause affecting them, in a general class as "white-collar" workers, says that unless the so-called "white collar" workers receive $35 or more per week, they shall not be made to work more than 40 hours per week. In other words, a manager or publicity man receiving less than $35 per week shall not work more than 40 hours weekly; managers and publicity men receiving $35 or more may work unlimited hours.

No. 13—PENNSYLVANIA

QUESTION—I am engaged in promoting a "Merchants' Day Performance," which consists of renting a theatre for one day a week for four or eight weeks in each town, and tying up with a number of merchants and business men on an advertising program. The merchants receive, in addition to the advertising campaign, a number of tickets to give to their customers for each of these days. These tickets carry a service charge, payable at the box-office, of five cents for children and 10 cents for adults.

I have made it a practice to contract theatres in towns of less than 10,000 population, and where the theatre has no local competition.

How does the code affect me and those with whom I do business?

ANSWER—This merchants' promotion idea may be a violation of the code because it involves the distribution of cut-rate tickets. However, if the performances as described above are not staged in actual competition to another theatre, and if they are given in a theatre that is so thoroughly isolated that the cut-rate tickets cannot be construed to be unfair to a competing exhibitor, then the practice may be permissible. But another matter is obviously involved, and this has to do with the charging of admissions—in this case the so-called "service charges" of five and 10 cents—which are lower than the minimum admissions that are permitted in the distributors' contracts.

The code clause which ordinarily outlaws cut-rate admission tickets is intended to stop such a practice only when it exists in probable or possible competition with another theatre, and when such competition is considered an unfair trade practice. Obviously the practice is not unfair if no other exhibitor is affected.

No. 14—FLORIDA

QUESTION—Will you kindly advise if as yet, and to date, I am allowed picture eliminations on my present contracts in accordance with the code?

I have read pro and con on the code, but film exchanges claim that the code is not yet in effect, and, therefore, they can not give any eliminations.

It is my understanding that the code is now in effect.

ANSWER—The motion picture code is now in effect, and has been since December 7.

The code specifically says that distributors shall give exhibitors the privilege of eliminating 10 per cent of the pictures contracted for, provided the exhibitors are in good contractual standing with the exchange.

Several weeks ago, Sol Rosenblatt, NRA division Administrator, interpreted this clause to mean that the privilege was to be given on pictures released on or after December 7, when the code became effective, even though such pictures were contracted for before December 7.

The large distributors disagreed with Mr. Rosenblatt's interpretation, declaring that the 10 per cent elimination privilege should not be given on pictures released after December 7 when such pictures were contracted before.

However, last week, the Code Authority voted to accept Mr. Rosenblatt's interpretation, making the clause retroactive, and this is binding on the exchanges under the code. The privilege, then, does affect pictures released after December 7, even though they were previously contracted for, but in order to receive this privilege, an exhibitor must be in good standing with the exchange.

No. 15—CALIFORNIA

QUESTION—I am employed as the only projectionist. My employer signed the President's reemployment agreement last year. Since that time my wages have not been raised, but have been lowered $5 per week, to $15 per week. I do not belong to any union. What rights have I under the NRA?

ANSWER—The code says that projectionists shall be paid the same scale of wages as that which prevailed in their locality on August 23. This may be a matter for investigation by the NRA Regional Labor Board. It is up to the individual employee, however, to file a complaint.

Local Code Boards Finally Completed

however, it is assumed that where an exhibitor who uses "Bank Nights" and or "Race Nights" is not operating in competition with another theatre, then either of these practices is permissible.

Administrator Hugh S. Johnson granted a second extension of time for the filing by Mr. Rosenblatt of a report on motion picture salaries, this time until July 7.

Evidence of code violations in each industry hereafter will be sent directly to United States district attorneys, instead of to NRA headquarters at Washington, in a new move by the NRA to effect stricter enforcement and simplication and speeding of compliance methods to end "uncertainty as to enforcement by legal proceedings."

In General Hugh Johnson's new drive ordering NRA code violators to court, Code Authorities of each industry were told that when they find a violation supported by facts warranting court action and reasonable attempts at adjustment have failed, they may then refer the case directly to the United States district attorney through the State NRA Compliance Board.

The Code Authorities also were requested to get in touch with their field boards and inform them of the new procedure.

By this method the NRA hopes to have in the hands of its newly created Litigation Section "a good case for court action in your industry on which immediate action can be taken."

The NRA Decentralizes

Following announcement of new policies assuring speedy prosecution of code violators in all industries, and ending "uncertainty as to enforcement by legal proceedings," General Johnson departed from Washington on Monday for Miami to meet the President on his return from a fishing trip.

At the same time, General Johnson left behind him one of the most sweeping orders issued to date for complete reorganization of the NRA executive structure, intended to "decentralize" authority and enforcement machinery in line with the Administration's previously announced decision to effect transition from problems of the codification of industry to those of enforcing and administering codes.

By the reorganization, personnel and administrative staffs are created and full authority and responsibility for decisions, which up to now have waited on General Johnson for weeks because of the pressure of his many duties, are passed on to a new NRA "cabinet" under General Johnson, which will report directly to him.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 219.—(A) Why is the working distance of a projection lens of large importance to the projectionist? (B) Tell us how you would measure the equivalent focus of a projection lens? I will not count failure against you on this one, as such a measurement is not really expected of a projectionist. It does represent worthwhile information, however. (C) Give us your views as to how far purchase price should be considered as against lens quality, and the reason for those views.

(A) I believe G. E. Doe perhaps answers this one best. He says:

"The interior of the barrel should not be touched so long as it is in good condition. If it be touched with the fingers there might be some slight deposit of oil made, which may do some harm by setting up reflection. It certainly would do no good. On the first Monday of each third month I disassemble my projection lenses, examine the interior of the barrels to see that the paint is in perfect condition, and blow through them with the hand bellows I have for use around the motor generator sets to remove any dust deposit there may be. I do not use the breath by reason of its moisture, also because some of the saliva might be deposited on the barrel walls.

"The interior of a lens barrel should never be wiped with anything. When I have finished I hold them over my small alcohol torch, letting its flame flow up through to dry them thoroughly, assembling the lenses immediately thereafter."

(B) T. M. Orichson and son reply correctly as follows:

"If the lens barrel interior be not kept properly painted, and raw metal is permitted to show, light will be reflected which will, or may, fall outside the screen. If sufficient metal be bare, a ring of light may be set up around the entire screen. Just where the reflected light will go will depend somewhat upon the distance the raw metal is from the real element of the lens. Usually, however, it will be in the form of a more or less pronounced ring of light, as we have said."

(C) Answers to this were almost unanimous to the effect that lampblack ground in japan and thinned with turpentine is the proper paint for lens barrel interiors. G. Tinlin very correctly says: "This paint may be obtained in small tins at any first-class paint store. It is known as 'coach painters' black.' It must be thinned with turpentine."

(D) There were a number of excellent answers, but that of M. Simms and O. L. Daris is perhaps a shade the best. They say:

"In disassembling I mark each individual lens at the front (screen side) of its edge, using a stubpoint pen and preferably red ink. This avoids any chance of getting them reassembled wrong-side-to. I lay them in the barrel in their proper place, with spacing ring between the rear lenses (Ross rear lenses cemented) and start the clamping rings in using care not to get the threads crossed, which may very easily be done. I then screw them in until they fit snugly against the lens, after which I back them off just a little—perhaps one-sixteenth of a turn. I use no tool for this, depending entirely upon my fingers. I have had no trouble with the rings sticking or working hard, for upon first disassembling a set of lenses I rub the threads with powdered graphite, carefully removing all that does not adhere, and blowing through strongly with hand bellows to make sure. With threads treated thus, I have no trouble, except that the graphite may have to be renewed every year or two."

(E) There was a great variety of answers to Section E, but on one point practically all agreed; namely, a dust-covered lens would tend to produce a "dead" picture, also to cause loss of light through reflection in proportion to the amount of dust. As an individual answer I believe that of D. Goldberg and L. Hutch was a shade the best. They say:

"The effect would of course depend upon the amount and kind of dust. Some dust might be light in color and semi-transparent. Other dust might be rather opaque. The first named would cause added reflection loss in proportion to its amount, plus some possible refraction of light. It would therefore reduce screen illumination, and at the same time misdirect light so that the screen shadows would not have their correct values, therefore the picture contrast would be reduced.

"In the second case, screen illumination would of course be reduced in proportion to the amount and degree of opaqueness of the dust; also, there might be some slight amount of refraction involved, which would of course tend to reduce picture contrast.

"But another matter enters, or so it seems to us. If by dust the coating, such as polished glass ordinarily receives from the air, is meant, then it is not really wholly or even mostly true dust, but rather a sort of scum gathered from the atmosphere, which we believe not only sets up large loss through additional reflection, but also alters refraction values and serves to reduce picture contrast by graying the blacks. We would appreciate an expression of opinion from you, 'Dad,' on this point."

This was of sufficient interest and importance to be referred to specialists in optics, so I wrote to the Bausch & Lomb research department. Alan A. Cook of that organization has replied as follows:

"In reply to the question referred to in your letter of March 31, I should say the chief effect of surface dust or scum on the performance of a projection lens is that it reduces the contrast of the projected picture. The second effect is a slight loss of light.

"I do not believe that any refraction effects would be noticeable unless the scum contained oil or grease in a liquid condition."

FOX MEETING MAY 31; UNIVERSAL PICKS JUNE 5

Majestic's Franchise Holders Discuss New Season Budget; Columbia To Maintain Present Schedule of Short Subjects

First indications by several large companies as to when the new season selling would start were given this week when Fox announced its convention would be held on May 31 and Universal set June 5 to 7 for its meeting. United Artists has not yet decided on dates for the annual regional sales sessions but they probably will be in the middle of June.

Several New York sales managers said increased film rentals in 1934-35 are "inevitable," due, they maintain, to increased cost of distribution under the code. Some managers cited the code clause which allows 10 per cent cancellation privileges.

Majestic Pictures' franchise holders in New York, began discussions of the 1934-35 program, following the Monogram convention in Atlantic City.

Actual plans as to the amount of product forthcoming next season was still in the tentative stage.

Deal with Allied Considered

It is understood that Max J. Weisfeldt and Joe Plunkett are conducting negotiations to produce 26 features with an average negative cost of $80,000, under a deal whereby Allied States Association would receive a part of the gross rentals from the pictures. Allied and Tiffany contracted a similar deal a few years ago. Under the present plan members of Allied would agree to play all the pictures of the company. President Sidney E. Samuelson of Allied has held several conferences to line up independent exchanges for handling the product.

With Columbia's 1933-34 short subject schedule of 104 single-reel pictures and 26 two-reelers more than two-thirds completed, the company announced that the 1934-35 short schedule would approximate that of the current season. Currently the single series consists of "March of the Years," "Minute Mysteries," "Krazy Kat," "Scrappy," "World of Sport," and "Laughing With Medbury." The two-reel series are "Mickey McGuire," "Broadway Comedies" and "Musicals."

The latest Columbia two-reel features to be released this month are "Stable Mates," with George Sidney and Charlie Murray; "Mickey's Rescue," "Mickey's Medicine Man," and "Love Detective," with Frank Albertson and Betty Grable. Among the single-reelers ready for release are "Bowery Daze" of the "Krazy Kat" series and "The Toy Shop," a "Scrappy" cartoon.

FitzPatrick To Add Feature

James A. FitzPatrick, short subject producer, plans to supplement his annual featurettes by one feature a year, with production in the East. Having completed the first of a series of 10 Musical Romances, Mr. FitzPatrick shortly begins work on his second, to be based on the life of Ethelbert Nevin, American composer. Mr. Fitzpatrick said many of his travel pictures for 1934-35 will be in color.

Fox Film's sales convention will be held May 31 and June 1 and 2 in New York, John D. Clark, sales director, said, adding that 55 features will comprise the 1934-35 program.

Conferences of Majestic's franchise holders in New York got under way Tuesday. The meetings, scheduled to continue throughout the week, will cover production budget, number of features to be produced in 1934-35 and the number to be completed under the current schedule.

Attending the Majestic sessions are E. H. Goldstein, executive vice-president; Jack Berkowitz, franchise holder for Albany, Buffalo and Detroit; Thomas A. Branon, Atlanta, Charlotte and New Orleans; William D. Shapiro, Boston; Morris Segal, Cincinnati and Cleveland; Lee Goldberg, Louisville and Indianapolis; Robert Clemmons, Dallas; Sam Berkowitz, Los Angeles and San Francisco; Charles Trampe, Milwaukee; Joseph Silverman, Oklahoma City; Max Weintraub, Omaha; A. Burke, Kansas City; A. Lucchese, Philadelphia and Washington; Joseph S. Skirball, Pittsburgh; Gene Marcus, Salt Lake City and Denver; Maurice Cann, Seattle; A. Slater, Portland; Ben Judell, Chicago; A. Dietz, St. Louis; Harry Quinn, Minneapolis; Oscar Hanson, Canada.

Goldwyn Starts May 1

Samuel Goldwyn starts new season production May 1 with "Resurrection," co-starring Anna Sten and Fredric March, for release through United Artists. The new Eddie Cantor picture also will go into production the same date, and is tentatively titled "The Treasure Hunt." Ethel Merman will have the lead opposite Mr. Cantor and Ann Sothern is to be featured. Gloria Swanson will return to Hollywood on June 1 to start "Barbary Coast." The remaining two features on Mr. Goldwyn's 1934-35 schedule are "The Wizard of Oz" and another Anna Sten feature.

Walt Disney will continue to release his Silly Symphonies and Mickey Mouses through United Artists, next season, and while the schedule has not been set it probably will call for 13 of each.

United Newsreel, headed by Pat Garyn and Frank Selzer, contemplates 30 short subjects for 1934-35. Thirteen single reelers are planned for the "Broadway Gossip" series, 20 for the "American Explorers" group.

Forty-five of Warners' schedule of 60 features for next season are definitely set, although titles have not been announced.

Monarch Executives in Midwest on Theatre Deals

Executives of Monarch Theatres left New York for the Middlewest early this week to negotiate a number of deals which would increase the circuit by five or six theatres. Deals for a number of Middlewestern houses have been under way for the past month and are expected to be closed during the current trip.

Universal Signs Jones For First '34-'35 Serial

Universal has signed Buck Jones to a contract to star in the company's first serial of the 1934-35 season, "The Red Rider," a western. Jones led off the current season's serial schedule, starring in "Gordon of Ghost City."

Loew's Declares Regular Dividend

Loew's has declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.62½ on the $6.50 preferred stock, payable May 15 to stockholders of record April 28.

Only Showmanship Behind Paramount Progress: Zukor

Paramount is making marked progress in rehabilitation "by going back to the show business," in the words of Adolph Zukor, president, returning recently from a sojourn in Hollywood. Much of the improvement, in the opinion of the corporation's president, is in internal organization and improved coordination between its many departments.

"For nearly a score of years Paramount forged ahead by adhering to the elemental principles of show business," Mr. Zukor said. "We pioneered in many fields but always with the showman's angle in mind. We got into trouble only when we lost sight of the all-important fact that we were showmen first, last and always.

"In the past twelve months we have rebuilt our several departments to the highest point of efficiency and simultaneously developed an inter-departmental cooperation comparable with the spirit which existed during the best years in the company's history. As a result, our business has during 1933-34 been highly satisfactory from every angle.

"Production has shown a sharp upturn in the quality of the pictures we have made. Distribution has achieved the maximum circulation for this quality product. The foreign activities of the company have more than kept pace with the progress made by the domestic departments. And our theatre department, through a series of reorganization moves, notably in the decentralization of operation and the formation of locally operated partnerships, is rapidly getting back into its original field—practical show business.

"In the final analysis, all of these moves of the past twelve months have been in only one direction—a return to the business of selling the best possible entertainment to the greatest possible number of theatre patrons."

Carillon Theatre Near Completion in Richmond

The Carillon theatre, one of the Venetian Amusement Corporation circuit, is nearing completion in Richmond, Va., close to the Byrd theatre. Another new house is the Patrick Henry, Herman G. Wilson, manager. J. A. Arcaro and F. Stornio, who operated a theatre in Fulton, are preparing to open a new house in South Richmond. The Apollo Theatre Corporation, of Washington, plans to enter the Richmond field by repairing the Strand to be patronized by Negroes.

Child Welfare Organization Passes Eight British Films

Of 41 features currently recommended in Toronto by the Canadian Council on Child Welfare for juvenile and family patronage, eight are the product of English companies. The list, the first to be published in 1934 by the government-subsidized organization, contains more British releases than any previous listing.

Nazi Urge Best Quality in Films

From Berlin last week came news of a vigorous appeal to Germany's motion picture producers from Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels in which he urged leading representatives of the German industry to strive for the best quality and to bring German films "in still closer harmony with the spirit of new young Germany."

German films, Dr. Goebbels explained, must measure up to the highest standards "because throughout the world they are regarded as a cultural product of National Socialism."

The new German film law which became effective last week gives the government complete control over every phase of motion picture activity in Germany. The government is said to consider itself responsible to a great extent for the welfare of the industry since films are considered one of the most excellent media for advancing national ideas and aims as well as an instrument of the present German "kultur."

Until the effective date of the law, film production was completed before the shooting script had been shown to the censors. In cases of total rejection of a film, the entire amount of time, work and capital invested in production was lost. The new law provides for a Federal Film Critic who will work under Dr. Goebbels. The work of this "critic" will consist in assisting the producers in all subjects; providing advice regarding manuscripts and arrangements of film subjects; examining manuscripts and scenarios to determine if they are in accordance with the edicts set up by the Nazi party, and generally keeping a close watch on all questions and subjects involving moral issues.

A tin can filled with high explosives was hurled on the famous Unter Den Linden recently and wrecked a taxi carrying David Oliver, Jewish owner of a Berlin motion picture theatre. It was at Mr. Oliver's theatre recently that anti-Semitic demonstrations resulted in the banning of the British film, "Catherine the Great," starring Elizabeth Bergner, Viennese-born Jewish actress, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Subsequently the Nazis barred "The Prizefighter and the Lady," MGM picture featuring the Jewish contender for the world's heavyweight title, Max Baer.

The Reich League of German Artistry has been formed to coordinate vaudeville and circus work and all singing societies under government auspices, and to which all such performers must belong. Herr Lange, storm trooper and stage director, handled the coordination, and has been named first president of the League, which has been subdivided into four professional organizations.

THE LEADING PICTURES

The following list of recommended pictures, for the period February 15 to March 15, was compiled in the office of Mrs. T. G. Winters, public relations department, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Hollywood office. A foreword said: "These lists do not cover the entire product but mention such pictures as for different reasons may be among those most worth seeing. . . . Go to those you know are of fine type. Stay away from those that you know are trashy or objectionable."

COME ON MARINES. Paramount. Director, Henry Hathaway. Original story by Philip Wylie. Cast: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino, Toby Wing, Roscoe Karns, Monte Blue. The comedy is skillful in a rough way that just avoids vulgarity but depends throughout upon the too frequently exploited sex angle for its fun. Adults.

DEAR HERALD:

A few evenings ago we heard a fellow on the radio singing

"There's an old spinning wheel in the parlor
Spinning dreams of the long, long ago."

And as we listened to his singing it took our mind from counting the flowers on the wallpaper back to the days when we were a boy and used to trap muskrats and mink and shoot ducks and geese on the Kankakee River in northern Indiana.

How well we recalled pushing our boat up on a sunken log in some bayou to steady it, and putting our decoys out, and how the mallards would come drifting down through the swirling snow to the decoys in easy range and we could hear the "splash" as they dropped one by one in the bayou. No matter if we did fall out of the boat and get wet all over, we went home loaded down with ducks and an occasional goose.

And how vivid was the picture of Trapper Smith's camp on "Goose Point," a narrow strip covered with willows that ran out into the Beaver Lake where we used to go every spring and stay a week or 10 days with Trapper Smith and ride in his boat when he was making the rounds of his traps and we would shoot ducks as they would rise from the rushes. And we could still hear the "quack, quack" of the ducks and the "honk, honk" of the geese, and the "tee, tee" of the speckle-breasted brants as they would fly low over the camp of nights amidst the pattering of the rain on the tent. Was that a sweet remembrance? Well, you tell 'em, Mable. And just then the guy changed tunes and started crooning a love song and we woke up and kicked the typewriter over.

From the Estees

We are in receipt of a lovely letter from Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Estee of the S. T. Theatre of Parker, S. D. We remember calling on these delightful people last summer with Sherm Fitch, branch manager for RKO at Sioux Falls. And we remember also the large pitcher of ice cold lemonade Mrs. Estee brought out for us, and Sherm drank so much of it that we were ashamed of him and told him so after we left and he said, "Well, maybe I did, but at that you drank three glasses more than I did." And we replied, "Yes, but what could you expect: we had just came from Nebraska and it was drier than a bone, and it hadn't rained for 15 days." Then Sherm lit a cigar and he didn't drink another thing until we got to Sioux City.

We heard a good story today. A Hollywood policeman saw a star trying to insert a door key into a lamppost. The officer went up to him and said, "Say, stranger, you must be mistaken in the place; there doesn't seem to be anybody at home here." And the star replied, "Mush be, officer, there's a light up stairs."

About the best thing to eat in the way of meat is a roast mallard duck stuffed with dressing flavored with a little sage and onions. If you don't think so, ask Henry B. or Mary Walthall of Hollywood. They know and will tell you. There are some who don't agree with this statement. That's because they don't know anything about it.

A few nights ago we snucked off and went to see "Carolina" with Janet Gaynor, Lionel Barrymore and Robert Young. It's no use to tell you that this is an excellent picture since we have already told you who was playing in it, for you know that when those three play in a picture it has to be good. Janet was a widow who was a tenant on one of Lionel's farms and who wanted to raise tobacco, but Lionel didn't want her to. Robert put in all his time with her on moonlight evenings just as he ought to have done. Lionel was a typical southern planter who lived on the glories of the past even though his present and future were busted.

We don't know whether the picture will suit you or not, but it certainly was plenty good enough for our money.

Sagebrush Rube

We have observed in our travels that the only time the producers recognize the exhibitors as representing one of the branches of the industry is when their agents call upon them to sell them their new product. After he signs the contract he becomes just a Rube from the Sagebrush until the next selling season. We're a Sagebrush Rube ourself.

We know of a good place to colonize some of Hollywood's scandalmongers, and that's about 10 miles due west of Santa Monica, Calif., at any season of the year.

We hear a lot of schemes for balancing the budget. The best method we know of for balancing a budget is not to arrange to pay out more than you have provided to take in. We understand our budget is two and a half billion out of plumb right now. If that is true, it looks like the carpenters would have to get to work and straighten the old shack up or in three years from now this country will be—well, you can make your own guess as to what will become of us.

As to Titles

"Bedside." Could you tell from the title what kind of a picture it was? No, nor could anybody else. We saw it last night and the opinion of it we formed before seeing it was entirely wrong.

From the title you can expect a gangster, a musical comedy, a war drama or a western and you will come as near hitting it.

It's a story of a quack doctor who bought a diploma from a dopehead and made quite a hit as a doctor until he was found out. Played by Warren William. Jean Muir played opposite to him and both did very creditable work with what little they had to work with. Perhaps what made the picture especially interesting to us was because William played a character we used to be very familiar with ourself. Warren made an excellent quack doctor and Jean made an excellent nurse, and between them you will get something out of the picture in spite of its title. The man who thought up that title must have been hit on the head with a rock, for the title has no reference to the picture whatever. It is about as indicative of the picture as it would be of a dogfight. One reviewer gave it three stars. We'd rate it a fair program picture.

Rejected Pictures

We note that out of 343 pictures reviewed last season by the women's organization of Hollywood 55 were rejected mainly because of depiction of "illicit sex relations." Since this has been the chief objection to pictures by the exhibitors and public ever since pictures were made, it would seem that this objection would soak in eventually, since it costs money to make rejected pictures, but there are, and always have been, directors who make pictures to satisfy their own likes and dislikes regardless of a "damphool public."

Europe Now Important in Production, Says Garnett

It is becoming increasingly important for directors, writers and stars to include European production in their plans for the future, in the opinion of Tay Garnett, director, now working on "China Seas," for MGM.

Mr. Garnett plans to make one or two pictures each year in Europe and two in Hollywood. "No longer is the world buying entirely from Hollywood," said the director. "It is able to get good product occasionally from British, Russian and German studios, especially the first named."

Gaumont Stages First Dual Campaign at Springfield

Lou F. Guimond, director of advertising and exploitation for Arthur Lee's Gaumont British Pictures, returned to headquarters in New York late last week, from Springfield, Mass., where, in collaboration with A. H. Goldstein, of the Broadway theatre, they staged an exploitation campaign for the first dual feature first-run on Gaumont product. The pictures were "Orders Is Orders," starring James Gleason, and Boris Karloff's "The Ghoul."

Showmen's Gets Jungle Film

Showmen's Pictures, of which David J. Mountan is president, has acquired world distribution rights to "Beyond Bengal," produced by Harry Schenck in the Malalyan jungle. A Broadway showing is planned.

Chesterfield To Make 12

Chesterfield Motion Pictures Corporation will have 12 Chesterfield productions on its 1934-35 schedule, in addition to an undetermined number of other company product for distribution.

Columbia

BUCK JONES AND TIM McCOY WESTERNS: We find all these very good entertainment and they have pleased our people. We also have found Columbia a nice company to do business with.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

FOG: Mary Brian, Donald Cook—Fair murder mystery for Saturday night. It did not draw well. Played Mar. 10.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—Boys, you have a natural in this and step on it when you play it, as it is going to click for you. Here is one picture that you won't have to hide when your patrons come out, as we have done a few times. Give us more like this, Columbia.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

LET'S FALL IN LOVE: Edmund Lowe, Ann Sothern Just a program picture and terribly monotonous. It did not draw. Played Mar. 11-12.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

LET'S FALL IN LOVE: Ann Sothern, Edmund Lowe—Very pleasing picture that your patrons will like.- A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

MAN'S CASTLE, A: Spencer Tracy, Lorette Young—If this is a special, I'm a plow hand. Very ordinary picture that did not please. Business below average. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Mar. 22-23.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

MAN'S CASTLE, A: Loretta Young, Spencer Tracy—I see some exhibitors mock this picture. My patrons thought it fine. Did a nice business in spite of bad roads and rain.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich.

MAN'S CASTLE, A: Loretta Young, Spencer Tracy—Somehow I could not warm up to this. This has a lot of clever situations. The meeting of Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young and going to live without benefit of clergy as if it was the most natural thing in the world, is not setting a very good example. As a whole there is considerable in it to entertain. Drawing power for me with good weather below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

MY WOMAN: Helen Twelvetrees, Wallace Ford, Victor Jory—Played on guest night to a little better than average business. Picture pleased about 75 per cent. Personally, don't like Twelvetrees, but Wallace Ford saved the show. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 27-28.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

First National

BEDSIDE: Warren William—They did not like this very well. It drew the first night but slipped sadly the second. Played Mar. 8-9.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

CONVENTION CITY: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Mary Astor—This comedy pleased all and drew well. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Mar. 19-20-21.—Boom and Du Rand, Lyrice Theatre, Ellendale, North Dak. Small town patronage.

DARK HAZARD: Edward G. Robinson—Good picture and it drew a good business. Played Mar. 15-16.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

FASHIONS OF 1934: William Powell, Bette Davis—Splendid picture. It pleased 100 per cent, but did not draw well due to bad weather. You can boost this production to the limit. Played Mar. 18-19.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

HAVANA WIDOWS: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—This is the type of picture the small towns cry for. Entertainment 100 per cent. Good business.—Chas. E. Lancaster, Uptown Theatre, Strong City, Kan. Small town patronage.

HAVANA WIDOWS: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Very pleasing entertainment, the kind that moves with zip and pep from start to finish. It won't stand close analysis. It is made solely to entertain and that's what they pay for, entertainment. Drawing power above average.—J. S. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

HAVANA WIDOWS: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Not a strong feature but makes an ideal second one. Good for a lot of laughs, for the girls are really good. Played it to help out a heavy picture on Monday and Tuesday's billing. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Mar. 19-20.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

MANDALAY: Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez—Kay Francis is popular here, but it won't take many like this one to hurt her. Good business the first night but the second night off. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Mar. 15-16. H. M. Johnson, Avon Park Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD: Frankie Darro—A timely story to extra business. A swell trailer on this.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

Fox

BEST OF ENEMIES: Marian Nixon, Frank Morgan—This is old but if you need a picture that will satisfy, book it. We think Fox has the best films for our people. "Last Trail," "My Weakness," "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," "Dr. Bull," "Jimmy and Sally," "Life in the Raw," "Adorable," "State Fair," were all worth playing in any small town. The only Fox picture that we lost money on was "Cavalcade," and that wasn't any fault of the picture. It was simply too great for the general run of our crowd.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor—Good picture, but somehow failed to click as well as some of her other pictures. Opening night to above average business. Not so good last two nights.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOCTOR BULL: Will Rogers—Drew nice business, the best of the three winter months and comments all very nice.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

DOCTOR BULL: Will Rogers—A good picture for Rogers fans. Running time, 76 minutes.—A. D. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, So. Dak. Small town patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: George O'Brien—This western seemed to hit the spot. We don't remember ever to run a western that caused more comment. We were well pleased and so were our customers. Running time, 66 minutes. Played Mar. 24.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town patronage.

HOOPLA: Clara Bow, Preston Foster—Good; the audience went for it in a big way.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

I AM SUZANNE!: Lilian Harvey, Gene Raymond—Very good. Interesting and entertaining. The best offering Lilian has appeared in so far. Played Mar. 23-24.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz General patronage.

I AM SUZANNE!: Lilian Harvey, Gene Raymond—Fair, but not as good as "My Weakness," but it will get by.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

JIMMY AND SALLY: James Dunn, Claire Trevor—Good, but James Dunn should be teamed with Sally Eilers.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

LAST TRAIL, THE: George O'Brien—This has had a lot of fine reports and deserves everything good that has been said about it. Paramount and Fox do not make many westerns, but they are all exceptionally good.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

LAST TRAIL, THE: George O'Brien—A very good western that pleased the kiddies and the western fans. Good scenery and lots of action. Running time, 58 minutes. Played Mar. 14-15.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MY LIPS BETRAY: Lilian Harvey—Rather weak. Poor recording on account of poor voices of some of supporting cast. No drawing card here. Played Mar 16-17.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

OLSEN'S BIG MOMENT: El Brendel—Good comedy. Makes dandy support for some heavy picture. Brendel is good, but Catlett dominates the picture, he fairly steals the limelight and is good for a laugh a minute. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Mar. 21-22.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

PADDY, THE NEXT BEST THING: Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter—Opened with this on St. Patrick's day. Booked for that date thinking it appropriate, and it was. With no opposition from the elements or otherwise, it did not draw expenses. Some of it was rather difficult to understand. These Scandinavians around here are not well acquainted with the Irish brogue. Nice picture with Gaynor well suited in a rather new role.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

PADDY, THE NEXT BEST THING: Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter—An excellent picture that pleased almost all. Drew some additional business. Baxter is good, but it seems they could have found a young man or one that looks younger.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

PILGRIMAGE: Henrietta Crosman, Marian Nixon—This is a good picture but we could not do any business on it. Advertised heavily and long in advance. Pleased the older people and those who only come once in a great while. A large share of regulars did not even come. Acting good, especially Crosman; story O.K., photography good.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

SHANGHAI MADNESS: Spencer Tracy—A good picture with plenty of action. Tracy, however, not as good as he can be.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

SMOKY: Irene Bentley, Victor Jory—Exceptional show I made the mistake of using on Bargain Night. The only objection is the excess off-screen talk. This will do big business on the best nights in most any small community.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

SMOKY: Victor Jory, Irene Bentley—Very, very good. Give us more like this one. It is not just another western but it is great entertainment. Everybody loves a horse.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

WORST WOMAN IN PARIS: Benita Hume, Adolphe Menjou—The title is against this picture. One conjures up a highly sophisticated story with a Mae West heroine doing them all wrong, but it is no such thing. It is a sweet love story, well acted, and really not objectionable in the slightest degree. With this title and played during Lent, not so good. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Mar. 21-22.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

ZOO IN BUDAPEST: Loretta Young, Gene Raymond—This is the first time "What the Picture Did For Me" let me down. I picked this up from last year's group on account of the many good reports, but was very, very sorry. It was the worst flop of the past six months, both from the standpoint of gross and popularity. Too much foreign atmosphere. Not a single favorable comment and many kicks.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

MGM

BOMBSHELL: Lee Tracy, Jean Harlow—Just fair Too much hollering at each other. Running time, 98 minutes.—A. D. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, So. Dak. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY TO HOLLYWOOD: Alice Brady, Frank Morgan—Just a fair picture. Running time, 89 minutes.—A. D. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, So. Dak. Small town patronage.

DANCING LADY: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—This production has rhythm. In fact, it has about everything, woven into a romantic story that holds the interest to the spectacular finale. Joan and Clark in their best performance, with Franchot Tone, May Robson, Winnie Lightner at their best, and Fred Astaire receiving as many compliments as Joan and Clark. Bad roads the first night, but all who came were pleased. Was liked better than "Flying Down to Rio." Some hit for Leo. Running time, 90 minutes. Played Mar. 24-25-26.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DANCING LADY: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—Very excellent picture. Fine story, music and stars, but failed to do above average business here. Pleased all those that came and did a little above average on second night. Played Mar. 11-12.—Dwight Harkins, State Theatre, Tempe, Ariz. General patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: All Star—A splendid production and interest-holding entertainment. Outstanding in drawing power on account of being widely advertised in advance. Played Mar. 4-5-6.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: All Star—A wonderful picture. To my mind one of the best. Brought people in that seldom go to shows. Not a strong story but good stars and swell acting. Did not gross what it should. Running time, 115 minutes. Played Mar. 11-12.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: All Star—Marvelous picture for sophisticated audiences. Beautifully acted, perfectly cast and wonderfully directed. It drew a good business. Am glad I played it. Played Mar. 22-23.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: All Star—A super production with perfect acting but was not so good at the box-office. Just a little too long. Wallace Beery and Jean Harlow almost steal the show. Marie Dressler not so good as in "Her Sweetheart" and "Tugboat Annie." My patrons prefer fewer stars and more action. Think this would go over great in the city but the small towns prefer down to earth entertainment. Running time, 113 minutes. Played Mar. 10-11-12.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ESKIMO: Native Cast—Here is another great picture from Metro, but for some reason failed to do any business. Personally, I think this is one of the best pictures of the year, educational and interesting, as well as scenic. Too bad that the paying public will not go out for a picture of this type. However, I want to thank Metro for a wonderful show. Played two days to only fair business. Running time, 117 minutes. Played Mar. 26-27.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—Nothing big but highly entertaining. It drew better than average business. Played Mar. 4-5.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma La. General patronage.

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—A very nice picture of the bus cycle. Pleased my regulars. Played Mar. 17.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—Good picture full of suspense. Average business.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Marion Davies, Bing Crosby—Here is a wonderful musical that will please all of your patrons. It is a typical musical, full of action, laughs, music, songs, beautiful girls and plenty of romance. Just the type of entertainment that should pack your house and please 100 per cent. Stand back of this one and guarantee excellent performance. We played this only one day to capacity business. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 2.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Bing Crosby, Marion Davies—Another musical with plenty of singing and humor. Good mimic numbers that stole the show. We gave this one plenty of advertising but it didn't bring but a few above average at the box-office. You can boost this show plenty and be safe in doing so. Played Mar. 16-17.—Dwight Harkins, State Theatre, Tempe, Ariz. General patronage.

HER SWEETHEART (CHRISTOPHER BEAN): Marie Dressler—Excellent. As good as they make them and excellent entertainment. Neither the title nor trailer material give this picture what it deserves, consequently it did not draw as well as it should. The press material, too, does not convey the highlights of the picture. Played Mar. 11-12-13.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

HER SWEETHEART (CHRISTOPHER BEAN): Marie Dressler, Lionel Barrymore—We found this picture very good. These two stars always have drawing power at our box-office. However, we have seen both do better. Running time, 87 minutes. Played Mar. 25-26.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town patronage.

MEET THE BARON: Jack Pearl, Jimmy Durante, Zasu Pitts—Terrible! Positively no good. Running time, 89 minutes.—A. D. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, So. Dak. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT MARY: Loretta Young, Ricardo Cortez—Not worth playing these old pictures in a small town. Played in March.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

FIVE MORE JOIN CORPS OF REPORTERS

This week's additions to the steadily growing volunteer corps of reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me" bring in five exhibitors, chiefly from the Middlewest and near Northwest. Read the comment of the following: Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Michigan; A. D. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, South Dakota; J. A. Klink, Primghar Theatre, Primghar, Iowa; Charles E. Lancaster, Uptown Theatre, Strong City, Kansas, and A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kansas.

REUNION IN VIENNA: Diana Wynyard, John Barrymore—Not worth playing these old pictures in a small town. Played in March.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE?: Lionel Barrymore, Alice Brady—This is a splendid picture that will please the average theatre goer, that is, if you can get them in. It is a high comedy, with light drama, and a very good love story. It is good clean entertainment of the family classification, but will not draw business. We played this for a midnight show and did a good business, but on any other time it would have been a prize flop. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 1.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE?: Lionel Barrymore, Alice Brady—Just barely drew film rental on a two-night run. This picture is very good, with good dialogue and wit but appealed rather to the higher class, which there isn't enough of. Good program picture. Running time, nine reels. Played Mar. 13-14.—Dwight Harkins, State Theatre, Tempe, Ariz. General patronage.

SONS OF THE DESERT: Laurel and Hardy—The Laurel and Hardy fans liked it but they evidently didn't spread the good news because the crowd was light the second night. Played Mar. 20-21.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

SONS OF THE DESERT: Laurel and Hardy—Best Laurel and Hardy to date. More story than usual and not so many repeats on the same gag.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

STORM AT DAYBREAK: Kay Francis, Nils Asther—Not worth playing these old pictures in a small town. Played in March.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

THIS SIDE OF HEAVEN: Lionel Barrymore, Fay Bainter—About as nice a picture as could be offered an American family. Clean, wholesome, human and interest-holding entertainment, exceptionally so. Lionel Barrymore is his usual outstanding self and the lady, Fay Bainter, is equally so. Played Mar. 28-29.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

WOMEN IN HIS LIFE, THE: Otto Kruger, Ben Lyon, Una Merkel—This is a fast moving drama that is full of entertainment for all classes of people. It is a story of a successful criminal lawyer, with a purple past, which he cannot forget. This is not entirely a woman's picture as you may gather from the title, but will appeal to the men as well as the ladies. The excellent cast adds considerably to the entertainment value. Played one day to good business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Mar. 30.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Monogram

BROKEN DREAMS: Randolph Scott, Martha Sleeper—We have been getting some mighty bad films from these people, but we want to say with capital letters that this is a nice little program picture. It pleased our patrons 100 per cent. Martha Sleeper did some wonderful acting, as well as the balance. It don't get started so very well, but it gains all along. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Mar. 29.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town patronage.

BROKEN DREAMS: Randolph Scott, Martha Sleeper—Good picture.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

HE COULDN'T TAKE IT: Ray Walker, Virginia Cherrill—Pretty good, but Walker is not very well known.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

HE COULDN'T TAKE IT: Ray Walker, Virginia Cherrill—Here is a good comedy-drama that is lively and amusing. Another good picture on the Monogram contract. If they continue this way, they will be among the best of the year. Here's hoping they will show the major producers how to make good product and give the public what they want. Step on it, Monogram, you are doing swell. Played one day to good business and pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 63 minutes. Played Mar. 28.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LUCKY TEXAN, THE: John Wayne—This is one of the best westerns I have seen in many months. Just the right story for Wayne. Plenty of action, thrills, fighting and everything the western fans want. Wayne is a big draw at our box office and we wish him success. A few more like this and Wayne will rate as the best Western on the market. Play it and see for yourself. Played one day to good business. Running time, 56 minutes. Played Mar. 24.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Paramount

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry—We put this on cold, mid-week, no advertising except usual methods, and had two nights of away-above-average business for me. This picture entertains, and can be classed as better than average. This one brought the easiest money to the box office in a long time.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry—We feel like the fourteen stars in this picture. Had about run out of anything to do. It's OK for kids strictly, but your adults won't like it. We played for matinee and let it slide.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry—Drew a good crowd. Fine for children. Running time, 75 minutes.—A. D. Fitzgerald, Princes Theatre, Miller, So. Dak. Small town patronage.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry—For the exhibitors that have to play this picture, I have a noble experiment to suggest for their approval. The first night I played this I had a number of walkouts and they were thoroughly bored. I decided to try and do something about this if possible, so the next day I conducted a little private screening and found that reels three and four could be eliminated without seriously affecting the continuity. So the second night I showed the picture without reels three and four, and to my delight there were no walkouts and no one exhibited any perceptible signs of fatigue. So I felt that the results obtained were of some value.—Chas. E. Lancaster, Uptown Theatre, Strong City, Kan. Small town patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft, Carole Lombard—Here's a picture that is sure to please. Play up the fact that Sally Rand, the fan dancer of World Fair fame, does her dance, and it will help the box office. It is now plain to everybody why Sally will never be a dramatic actress but that doesn't matter as the show is good and will please all classes. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Mar. 18-19.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft, Carole Lombard—Just fair. Raft no actor, but he is young yet. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Mar. 25-26-27-28.—M. N. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Oregon. Local patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft—Very good. Also a good box-office attraction.—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview Theatre, Plainview, Neb. General patronage.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY: Fredric March—Great picture. The best Mr. March has appeared in since "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Here is a story that will hold you every minute and your patrons will go out and talk about it. Read your press sheet carefully and advertise this big and it will make money for you. I call it one of the outstanding films of 1934, and March does wonderful work. This new star, Evelyn Venable, does exceptionally well and fits the part to a "T." Boy, is she good to look at. I predict a great future for her. All other members of the cast are good but what makes this a great picture is that they have a good story and after all that is 90 per cent of any picture. Here is money for you. Just step out and do your part and you'll make plenty of dough. Played Mar. 25-26-27.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

DESIGN FOR LIVING: Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March, Gary Cooper—Nice Sunday show. Drew well. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. D. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, S. Dak. Small town patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Four Marx Brothers—This is about as clever a comedy concoction as the Four Marx Brothers have produced to date. The lack of piano playing and harp playing did not seem to be missed. Those who came seemed to enjoy it judging from the laughter, but not enough came. First day with moderate weather, below average adults and above average children attendance. Second day rain and attendance way below average. Judging from first day with good weather, drawing power at this theatre very unsatisfactory.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Four Marx Brothers—Good entertainment but the Marx Brothers seem to be slipping very badly at the box office.—Chas E. Lancaster, Uptown Theatre, Strong City, Kan. Small town patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Four Marx Brothers—A fair comedy but it didn't do any business. Not as good as their previous pictures. Played Mar. 4-5-6.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE: Claudette Colbert—About the worst yet. DeMille ought to be ashamed to release a picture like this. Running time, 77 minutes.—M. N. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Oregon. Local patronage.

FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, William Gargan—Terrible. Because Cecil DeMille directed it I made the mistake of playing it on Sunday and Monday. The result was the biggest box office flop for Sunday in many months. You won't be able to get your better class patrons out to see this, so take my advice and play it on Saturday or family night. It can't compare with "Male and Female." Played Mar. 25-26.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre Selma, La. Gengral patronage.

GOOD DAME: Fredric March, Sylvia Sidney—Two excellent stars that should be given better material with which to work. Picture okay except for ending, which could have been changed and not made so ridiculous. Business average and not many kicks. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Mar. 25-26.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

GOOD DAME: Fredric March, Sylvia Sidney—Not as big as expected from these two stars. Business average. Sidney much better in her part than March in his. However, March didn't have the chance.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

HELL AND HIGH WATER: Richard Arlen, Judith Allen—Here is one that is suitable for week-end showing in small town theatre, and speaking for my patrons, they certainly liked it, along with Judith Allen, and many others in the cast stage a fine performance. Business better than average.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

HELL AND HIGH WATER: Richard Arlen, Judith Allen—A good Saturday show. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. D. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, So. Dak. Small town patronage.

HIS DOUBLE LIFE: Roland Young, Lillian Gish—Very disappointing at the box office. Better put it on bargain night. Played Mar. 13-14.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

I'M NO ANGEL: Mae West—Booked this late. Mae West good in her part, but didn't hold up. Fell off each night. Running time, 86 minutes. Played Mar. 12-13-14.—Boom and Du Rand, Lyric Theatre, Ellendale, No. Dak. Small town patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper—How this did draw on Saturday night. It pleased 100 per cent. Jackie Cooper is very popular here. Played Mar. 3.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper, Lila Lee—This is only a fair picture of the western type. Entirely too much Jackie Cooper and too much talking and no action. No comedy, entirely too much sex and sobbing to be likeable. Paramount could have done a good job here, but they lost out. Too bad that Monogram didn't have this story. They would have made an excellent picture of it. Played one day to fair business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Mar. 31.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck, Alice Brady, Baby LeRoy—Based on Rupert Hughes' story, "Kidnapped." Proved good picture that drew and pleased. Played Mar. 25-26.—P. E. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck—A story of the kidnaping racket. Got by about so-so. My people can't see this star, neither can I. Can't we find enough actresses without a brogue.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—Poor. Same as previous ones but no good. Give these boys more rope. Running time, 72 minutes.—M. N. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

PICKUP: Sylvia Sidney—Here is one that I set out four or five times during the past year and finally gave a bargain night date. Far too good a show for the discount night. Show pleased nearly 100 per cent and comments were exceptionally fine.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: James Gleason—A highly entertaining comedy drama with fine athletic atmosphere. Amusing and exciting entertainment for the entire family. Played Mar. 25-26-27.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: Larry "Buster" Crabbe—A fairly good picture that failed to get extra business. I consider it good average entertainment with beautiful girls and perfect young men in the best of physical condition. James Gleason and Robert Armstrong keep the audience laughing all the time. Gleason is in a class by himself.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: Buster Crabbe, Ida Lupino—This is a wonderful picture, full of good clean entertainment that is different from the usual run of pictures. It is a comedy drama, featuring 30 of the International Beauty Contest Winners. This alone should fill the house, and the athletic twist is a big drawing card. Play this on your best days and don't be afraid of it. They all will like it. Played one day to good business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Mar. 29.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SHE MADE HER BED: Sally Eilers, Richard Arlen—Just fair. Neither good nor bad. This class of film is just to fill in and is hardly program entertainment. When the house caught fire, Sally Eilers put her baby in the ice box. Robert Armstrong, all the wild animals and the service station all went up in smoke. But when they spared the box the baby just smiled and said "Mommy. It didn't touch me!"—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

SITTING PRETTY: Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Ginger Rogers—Fair musical.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

SITTING PRETTY: Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Ginger Rogers—I think this is one of the finest musicals Paramount has made. The music is great and the customers went out humming the tunes. Paramount pictures have maintained a good quality this year. Running time, 78 minutes. Played Mar. 18-19-20.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SITTING PRETTY: Jack Oakie, Ginger Rogers—Pretty thin stuff about two alleged song writers. Ends with a big smash on the dancing spectacle, "Did You Ever See A Dream Walking?" It was not much of a drawing card, and took a bad nose dive in a big snowstorm. Played Mar. 25-26.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SIX OF A KIND: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Very disappointing after the good reviews. Just a weak slapstick. Burns and Allen a flop. Get the same ideas into this business. Running time, 63 minutes.—M. N. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Oreg. Local patronage.

SUNSET PASS: Randolph Scott—A lot of nice scenery. Regular true to form western story. Very well liked. Played double feature with "White Woman." Played Mar. 16-17.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

TAKE A CHANCE: James Dunn, June Knight, "Buddy" Rogers—A good peppy Sunday show. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. D. Fitzgerald, Princess Theatre, Miller, So. Dak. Small town patronage.

TAKE A CHANCE: James Dunn—A nice musical with some good stuff in it, but for some reason it didn't click so big. Of course it is not in the class of "Gold Diggers" or "42nd Street" but it is good entertainment and should go over better than it did for me. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Mar. 16-17.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

THIS DAY AND AGE: Charles Bickford, Judith Allen—Just why this excellent show should do such a terrible business is a mystery. This picture is great entertainment but we couldn't get but a handful out to see it. Lack of names and poor title had something to do with it. Totally aside from the money standpoint, we suffer when we can't show the few exceptional entertainments to a big house.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

THREE CORNERED MOON: Claudette Colbert—Pleasing comedy drama. Fair business. Played Mar. 16-17.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott—A typical western showing cowboys and Indians. Even brings in the Buffalo stampede in this one, but it seems just a little stereotyped and too much to pattern No. 13546. The kids liked it and went for it big. Running time, 57 minutes. Played Mar. 16-17.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

TILLIE AND GUS: Alison Skipworth, W. C. Fields—Fair comedy. Nothing to write home about.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

TOO MUCH HARMONY: Bing Crosby, Jack Oakie—This was a class "A" picture, that is, we paid top allocation for this. If in class "C" we would have nearly broken even. Perfect conditions, weather, roads, etc., for good business, but no draw. Several comments, pro and con. Certainly couldn't rate it better than an average attraction. Why this should rate top class is one of the mysteries of the show business.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

TORCH SINGER: Claudette Colbert—I consider this one of the best Paramount has turned out this season. Very fascinating show and many excellcnt comments. High school basketball tournament (finals) here hurt business the opening night and second night was just average. In spite of opposition drew more than "Paddy" or "Too Much Harmony" and played during the same month.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

TO THE LAST MAN, THUNDERING HERD, ZANE GREY PICTURES, and all the rest. We found them all to be good and always do business with them. Just let the people know when you are having them and they will come out in our town. They have all read the book and of course they want to see the picture.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

TO THE LAST MAN: Randolph Scott, Esther Ralston—My western fans and in fact most of the audience liked this picture very much. Paramount has certainly put plenty of money into their Zane Grey productions and you do not have to hide when your audience goes out by the box office.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Stuart Erwin, Fred Kohler—A swell western show that will please everybody. Could have been about ten minutes longer but it was good as it was. Business above average in the face of competition. Running time, 55 minutes. Played Mar. 24.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

WAY TO LOVE, THE: Maurice Chevalier—Nothing much to it. I think this star is washed up in the small towns.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

WAY TO LOVE, THE: Maurice Chevalier, Ann Dvorak—Very clever entertainment and different from the usual Chevalier picture. Maurice is exceptionally popular here.—Chas. E. Lancaster, Uptown Theatre, Strong City, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHITE WOMAN: Carole Lombard, Charles Laughton—Played this on double bill with "Sunset Pass." Big crowds. Pleased about 80 per cent. Few kicks from women, claiming it gruesome. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Mar. 16-17.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

RKO

AGGIE APPLEBY, MAKER OF MEN: Charles Farrell, Wynne Gibson—Didn't care much for this, although well acted. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Mar. 1-2-3.—Boom and Du Rand, Lyric Theatre, Ellendale, N. Dak. Small town patronage.

ANN VICKERS: Irene Dunn—Good of its kind. No drawing card here. Have never been able to sell my public such titles as "Ann Vickers," "Ann Carver," "Jennie Gerhardt," "Christopher Strong," "Great Jasper," in the past twenty years. Played Mar. 14-15.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

ANN VICKERS: Irene Dunne, Walter Huston—Pleased our people. Irene Dunne well liked. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Mar. 9-10.—Boom and Du Rand, Lyric Theatre, Ellendale, N. Dak. Small town patronage.

CHANCE AT HEAVEN: Joel McCrea, Ginger Rogers—A pleasing little program picture for midweek.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

CHANCE AT HEAVEN: Joel McCrea, Ginger

RIPTIDE

NORMA SHEARER, ROBERT MONTGOMERY in "RIPTIDE" with Herbert Marshall, Mrs. Patrick Campbell. Written and Directed by EDMUND GOULDING Presented by IRVING G. THALBERG

Rogers—Good program picture.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

CRADLE SONG: Dorothea Wieck, Louise Dresser—A mighty sweet picture. Rather sad in parts, tugs at the heart strings. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Mar. 15-16-17.—Boom and Du Rand, Lyric Theatre, Ellendale, N. Dak. Small town patronage.

DIPLOMANIACS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Used on Bargain Night and gave biggest Bargain Night gross this winter. Comments were mostly adverse; however, a few told us they enjoyed it. Did not see it myself.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Fred Astaire—An excellent but very much over-advertised production. Fred Astaire steals the show. Excellent music, dancing and wonderful scenery but the story is not so hot. The dance on the flying planes is the best sequence. I ran this after it had been shown north, east and west of me, so did not need an armoured truck to take home the receipts. If you can play this one early it is O.K. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Mar. 17-18-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY!: Wheeler and Woolsey—Best from these stars for a long time, but it will take a few more to win back the fans who were driven away by the past poor releases.—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview Theatre, Plainview, Neb. General patronage.

HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY!: Wheeler and Woolsey—Good entertainment. Lots of comedy. Pleased the majority. Running time, 67 minutes.—M. N. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Oreg. Local patronage.

IF I WERE FREE!: Irene Dunne, Clive Brook—Very fine, well acted picture, which drew well because of stars. Running time, 66 minutes. Played Mar. 21-22.—Boom and Du Rand, Lyric Theatre, Ellendale, N. Dak. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—Opening on this was greeted with heaviest snowfall in two years, making many roads impassable. However, gross was slightly double ordinary weekend business. The show drew those that come out about once every three years. Women go for it in a big way. Had quite a few kicks from the rougher male element, but is no doubt one of the finest shows produced this season.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—One of the best. A credit to RKO and to any theatre that runs it. Running time, 115 minutes. Played Mar. 18-19.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—Good business on this picture, quite largely from the highbrows and church people who seldom attend the theatre. It is a very faithful picturization of the old American classic. Played Mar. 11-12-13.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn — Bad weather ruined gate receipts but what a picture. I would be glad to run it and just break even. In a class with "Lady for a Day," which I consider one of the finest pictures ever made. Running time, 107 minutes. Played Mar. 25-26-27.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

LUCKY DEVILS: William Boyd—Played this old one on bargain night and is ideal for the country trade. One of the most thrilling shows of the past many months. Many fine comments.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN, THE: Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, El Brendel—A weak program picture. Pleased the kids, but very disappointing to adults. Zasu Pitts will slip if this is the kind of pictures she is going to make. Running time, 62 minutes. Played Mar. 21-22.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MELODY CRUISE: Charles Ruggles—Comedy is outstanding in this very entertaining show. Drew nice business the first night but nothing the next on account of severe storm. This pleased nearly everyone and drew a roar of laughter in many places. Big enough and plenty good for your best nights. Only objection is age and a few rather suggestive situations which are overlooked by most of the patrons.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK: Bruce Cabot, Betty Furness—This was a nice little program picture but for some reason it did not attract much attention. We have seen pictures with a bunch of stars that was not as good. Therefore, we think this picture lacked drawing power due to lack of stars. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Mar. 27-28.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town patronage.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK: Bruce Cabot—A fine clean program picture. Good any day of the week. Running time, 71 minutes. Played Mar. 16-17.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

PLEASE REMEMBER TO SIGN REPORTS

Reports not signed by exhibitors obviously cannot be published in "What the Picture Did for Me." As a result, fellow-showmen are deprived of the valuable comment intended for their use.

Who, for example, wrote the reports on these, all on one report blank just received: "One Man's Journey," "The Chief," "Flying Down to Rio," "Sleepers East," "Lost Patrol," "World Changes," "Hips, Hips Hooray."

And who sent these? "College Coach," "Going Hollywood," "Power and the Glory."

Under separate envelope also come these: "Fugitive Lovers" and "I'm No Angel."

MIDSHIPMAN JACK: Bruce Cabot—A very good story of Annapolis Academy, with no selling points. Played Mar. 23-24.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

ONE MAN'S JOURNEY: Lionel Barrymore—Similar to Doctor Bull but in many respects a superior production. Several remarked they liked it better than Doctor Bull. Drew about 25 per cent less gross although that was average business. Certainly will rate one of the very best from RKO this season.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

ONE MAN'S JOURNEY: Lionel Barrymore—Very, very fine. Well acted. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Mar. 23-24.—Boom and Du Rand, Lyric Theatre, Ellendale, N. Dak. Small town patronage.

ONE MAN'S JOURNEY: Lionel Barrymore—You cannot beat this picture for its type. All of my customers liked it a whole lot better than "Her Sweetheart."—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART: Ginger Rogers—Used this old one on Bargain Night and was surprised when it drew ordinary western business. Loads of light comedy that brought the house down on several occasions. Comments mostly good. This is a better show than you expect and good for the tanks. Just one of those little shows that is very easy to take.—Charles Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz. General patronage.

RAFTER ROMANCE: Ginger Rogers, Norman Foster—The first human role I have seen Ginger Rogers in. Quite a few comments on her pleasing work in this. Business barely passable. Played Mar. 9-10.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SON OF KONG: Helen Mack, Robert Armstrong—Further adventures of the explorers on Skull Island where King Kong was found. This was interesting and well handled, except that whoever, or whatever, was inside the ape hide was allowed to show human intelligence on his first view of a white man. Made it look ridiculous to us. Played Mar. 23-24.—P. E. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TWO ALONE: Jean Parker, Tom Brown—Pretty good picture of rural life with the two young people persecuted by a rascally farmer. Seemed to please Friday and Saturday audiences. Trifle too much talk of coming babies, legitimate and otherwise, it seemed to us. However, no one seemed to notice or comment on it as objectionable. Played Mar. 30-31.—P. E. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BOWERY, THE: Wallace Beery, George Raft, Jackie Cooper, Fay Wray—A good picture that did not click here.—Chas. E. Lancaster, Uptown Theatre, Strong City, Kan. Small town patronage.

GALLANT LADY: Ann Harding—Very good, but not so hot at the box-office.—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview Theatre, Plainview, Neb. General patronage.

PALOOKA: Jimmy Durante, Stuart Erwin, Lupe Velez—Good picture, in fact one of the best of its kind I ever saw. Exceptionally fine cast and good story and as a result a good picture. It's hard to get the ladies in because it's a prizefighting story but if you ever get them in the theatre, they will be more than pleased because there is a beautiful love story right along with the fighting. Stuart Erwin is almost as good as Will Rogers in any picture and Marjorie Rambeau as the mother is great. While the picture is very good, it did only average business. Outside of the Eddie Cantor pictures, United Artists pictures are about average with the other big companies. I have found United Artists pictures this year better than in the past. Played Mar. 23-24.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII, THE: Charles Laughton. A veritable duster for the small situations. Recording poor. Business poorer.—Chas. E. Lancaster, Uptown Theatre, Strong City, Kan. Small town patronage.

Universal

BELOVED: John Boles, Gloria Stuart—You will never make the mine run of patronage like this picture, nevertheless there has been a tremendous effort made to give you an extraordinary screen play. There is no doubt of it, John Boles gives a fine performance. Gloria Stuart is excellent, and Mae West better look to her laurels because there is another girl by the name of Mae that has plenty of curves and if given half a chance could go to town. That's Mae Busch.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

BELOVED: John Boles, Gloria Stuart—This is one swell picture. Pleased all. John Boles at his best. Running time, eight reels. Played Mar. 25-26.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

BOMBAY MAIL: Edmund Lowe, Onslow Stevens—See report on "Madam Spy."

COUNSELLOR AT LAW: John Barrymore—Well liked. The box office said so. The people said so.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres—A great comedy for Friday and Saturday. My patrons liked it. Especially good for small town.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres, Alice White—Swell picture with just enough comedy to put it over. Been wondering for some time why some one did not make a picture with a bus. Well, we have it in this picture and also in "It Happened One Night." We have found Universal a good company to do business with.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres, Alice White—See report on "Madam Spy."

FIDDLIN' BUCKAROO: Ken Maynard—Poorest western I have played for a long time and not because this is really very poor, because it isn't, but because I have had so many good westerns. Rarely have complaints on westerns but this did draw a few.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine, Leila Hyams—Two-reel comedy stuff made a little longer. However, the audience laughed a lot and seemed to be satisfied. We played it as the feature instead of using it on a double bill. Don't you think Summerville would be great in two reel comedies?—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine, Leila Hyams—Well liked. The box office said so. The people said so.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine—Very funny and well liked, but did not stand up at box office. Think this team should make a good pair. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Mar. 23-24.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN, THE: Claude Rains, Gloria Stuart—Drew well. Pleased the majority. A few did not like it at all. Some said "too spooky" so we see where we will have to be careful about these people when we get one that really is "spooky." The picture is well photographed. It is interesting. It has a good moral. Star power is lacking.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

KING FOR A NIGHT: Chester Morris, Helen Twelvetrees—Good picture but the ending was terrible. My patrons do not want to see this kind of ending, too depressing.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

MADAM SPY: Fay Wray—Good picture of its kind but a poor kind for me. People do not like war. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Mar. 23-25.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MADAM SPY: Fay Wray, Nils Asther—These pictures with murders in them may be great stuff for some people but our patrons come to the movies to laugh and be amused. Up here among the jack pines in Michigan we like to show a few pictures that are suitable for children and not always show someone getting shot in the back. Played in March.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

MADAM SPY: Fay Wray—A war story with no comedy relief and no box-office draw. Played Mar.

A SHORT AD

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Shorts have had their best year. Quality is the reason! These Hal Roach Comedies outshine all others: Laurel-Hardy; "Our Gang"; Thelma Todd-Patsy Kelly; Charley Chase; Hal Roach Musical Comedies and All-Stars.

One of the new sensations in Short Subjects is M-G-M's Goofy Movies, with Pete Smith's laugh-talk. His Sport Champions and Oddities are going great also. Fitzpatrick Travel Talks and and Willie Whopper Cartoons (some in color) complete this advertisement. Short—but sweet!

14-15.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND PRETZELS: Mary Brian, Leo Carrillo—O.K. On the border of "42nd Street." Not as elaborate, of course, or anywhere near; but a better story in my opinion. Posters gave the idea that it would be "hot" stuff but what was on the posters was not in the picture. I do not know why such things are good business. The picture is clean and devoid of smuttiness. Is that perhaps the reason that they thought they had to give the impression in the posters that it would be otherwise?—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

MYRT AND MARGE: Myrtle Dale, Donna Damerell—Some of the boys have been pretty hard on this one. I, for one, found it to be snappy right straight through. A lot of performers in it are right on to it and consequently quite some good entertainment.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. Small town patronage.

MYRT AND MARGE: Myrtle Dale, Donna Damerell, Ted Healy—Not so hot. Better keep them on the radio.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

ONLY YESTERDAY: John Boles, Margaret Sullavan—Several came expecting Boles to sing throughout the picture and were disappointed. If your cash customers like good acting tell them about Margaret Sullavan. Good picture and would have done excellent business except that a basketball tournament was in progress on play dates. Played Feb. 21-22.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

S. O. S. ICEBERG: Rod La Rocque, Gibson Gowland—Pretty good from educational standpoint. Too much snow and ice. Should have been released in July and August. Would make a swell hot weather picture.—A. W. Pugh, Doric Theatre, Erie, Kan. Small town patronage.

S. O. S. ICEBERG: Rod La Rocque, Gibson Gowland—Did exceptionally well on the first night and above average on the second night. Nothing really outstanding but something a little different from the usual. It's a good thing the weather was hot here or we would have had a hard time getting them in. The film was so cold it pretty near froze up the projectors. Running time, nine reels. Played Mar. 20-21.—Dwight Harkins, State Theatre, Tempe, Ariz. General patronage.

Warner

COLLEGE COACH: Dick Powell, Lyle Talbot—Very fine, clean-cut picture. Well received. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Mar. 7-8.—Boom and Du Rand, Lyric Theatre, Ellendale, N. Dak. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE COACH: Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Ann Dvorak—A very good football picture, but would have been worth twice as much at the box-office if we could have played it in October instead of March.—Chas. E. Lancaster, Uptown Theatre, Strong City, Kan. Small town patronage.

EASY TO LOVE: Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor—This is a nice little picture that has plenty of laughs. The trailer on this one is a great help.—W. J. Bryan, Paramount Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town patronage.

GAMBLING LADY: Barbara Stanwyck—Good picture. Barbara does well as a daughter of a square gambler. It's a good story and a good evening's entertainment and that's all one can ask. Miss Stanwyck wears some beautiful clothes that appeal to the lady patrons and the men like the gambling, so it's all-round entertainment. Played Mar. 23-24.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

HI, NELLIE! Paul Muni—Now fellows, here is a good picture. It's good because it's a good story. The cast all do well but there are a hundred actors in Hollywood who could do equally as well as those in this picture. This is not a great picture because it has good stars, but it is the story that makes it good and that holds good for other worthwhile pictures. If I had my way, I would cut the salary of many of those high-priced stars and give a raise to good story writers. Most any star can make a good picture if you give him a good story but you can put all the stars in Hollywood in a poor story like "Dinner at Eight" and "Grand Hotel" and you will still have a poor picture. "Hi, Nellie!" will please your patrons and make money for you. Played Nov. 28-29.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

HI, NELLIE: Paul Muni—Very good and it drew about average business. Played Mar. 6-7.—Edith M. Fordyce, Princess Theatre, Selma, La. General patronage.

HOUSE ON 56TH STREET, THE: Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez—This is good. Of course it has to do with gambling, speakeasys, etc., but for an adult audience this is 100 per cent entertainment, and look at the stars in it. Kay Francis is perfection itself and the rest leave nothing to be desired. Better than average business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Mar. 19-20.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—Plenty good.—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview Theatre, Plainview, Neb. General patronage.

KING'S VACATION: George Arliss—Pleasing and entertaining picture. Not much business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LADY KILLER: James Cagney—Good entertainment. Lots of action and comedy. Running time, 73 minutes.—M. N. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Oreg. Local patronage.

MAN FROM MONTEREY, THE: John Wayne: Ruth Hall—A different sort of western that seemed to draw well. John Wayne one of the best drawing western stars and this picture pleased most of the Saturday nighters. Running time, 57 minutes. Played Mar. 17.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE 62: William Powell, Margaret Lindsay—This is a dandy detective story that holds the interest from start to finish. Excellent acting by the entire cast. Consider this William Powell's best picture. Pleased my patrons. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Mar. 21-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

WORKING MAN, THE: George Arliss—One of the very best pictures I ever saw or ran. I dare say that I had more favorable comments on this picture than any other I ever seen. Any exhibitor that does not run this picture is cheating his patrons out of a swell evening's entertainment. Played Mar. 25.—J. A. Klink, Primghar Theatre, Primghar, Iowa. Small town and country patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

TEN BABY FINGERS: Murray and Sidney—Murray and Sidney are always good.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and rural patronage.

MGM

BABES IN THE GOODS: Todd and Kelly—Just 19 minutes of time.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chealsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

BABES IN THE GOODS: Todd-Kelly—Here is a good comedy. Chuck full of laughs from start to finish. This team is exceptionally good and this subject is among the best.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

BARGAIN OF THE CENTURY: Pitts and Todd—This one gets off to a good start but gets rather slow and draggy in the second reel. However they get a lot of laughs. This team is popular here. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CUBA, LAND OF THE RHUMBA: Fitzpatrick Travel Talks—Another travelogue showing interesting and educational scenes in Cuba. The Rhumba dance at the end seemed to attract the most attention and brought much comment. As a whole will please the majority of patrons. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orephum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

FISH HOOKEY: Our Gang—This is a fairly good comedy of Our Gang. Not as good as some of the others, but will please practically all of your patrons. This is an old comedy, but will please more than some of the new ones. Let us have more as good as this one. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HIS SILENT RACKET: Charley Chase, Muriel Evans—This is a very good two-reel comedy featuring Charley Chase with Muriel Evans, the beautiful blonde. One of the best shorts for Chase in some time. Here's hoping there are many more as good as this to come. Give Miss Evans more bits and let's see her act. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LUNCHEON AT TWELVE: Charley Chase—One of the finest comedies Chase has made to date. A good musical. Clean and real funny. Has a laugh a minute. Recommended it as 100 per cent comedy. Running time, 19 minutes.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C.—Neighborhood patronage.

ME AN' MY PAL: Laurel and Hardy—This is a very good comedy featuring Laurel and Hardy at work on a jig-saw puzzle. Plenty of laughs and will please the average theatre-goer. This is a little old, but still good where Laurel and Hardy have good drawing power. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

ROAST BEEF AND MOVIES: Musical Revues—The world's worst.—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview Theatre, Plainview, Neb. General patronage.

ROPING WILD BEARS: Oddities—Will help any program. Great for children and adults will like it also.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. Town and country patronage.

SODA SQUIRT, THE: Flip the Frog—Another good cartoon comedy of Flip as the soda jerker. The grand opening of a drug store in Hollywood and some very good caricatures of the film actors and actresses. Very good and full of good clean entertainment. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Paramount

BETTY BOOP'S HALLOWEEN PARTY: Betty Boop Cartoons—Good cartoon and sound. It's just a toss-up which is the best cartoon, "Mickey Mouse," "Betty Boop" or "Popeye the Sailor," with "Popeye" slightly in the lead.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

BUNDLE OF BLUES: Duke Ellington & Band—This is a wonderful musical one-reeler, starring that famous Duke Ellington and his Orchestra, presenting a few popular melodies, some good dancing and ten minutes of great entertainment. This has the song hit "Stormy Weather" in its best version. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

COLD TURKEY: Joseph Cawthorn—Good slapstick comedy that drew a lot of laughs. Running time, two reels.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

DINAH: Mills Brothers—Another old one that Paramount booked us with. It must have been a real short in its day. However, it was so badly cut up and spliced that it was spoiled for entertainment purposes. Running time, one reel.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

DUCKY DEAR: Sidney Toler—This is a fairly good two-reel comedy of the slap-stick variety. Full of fun and will please the average theatre-goer. Paramount is improving over their shorts of last season and there was lots of room for improvement in the two-reelers. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

I LIKE MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Eton Boys—Extra good singing in effective setting. Running time, seven minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

JUST AN ECHO: Bing Crosby—A good two-reel short that made them laugh and pleased, better than "Please." Running time, two reels.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

KENNEL KINGS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Grantland Rice always good and his subject well presented. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. N. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Oreg. Local patronage.

KNOCKOUT KISSES: Mack Sennett Comedies—Fair. Recording not very good. Running time, two reels.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

LET'S YOU AND HIM FIGHT: Popeye the Sailor—Here's the most popular of all the cartoons right now. The kids eat it up and are always asking when we are going to have another "Popeye." Every Popeye is good and worth featuring. Right now more popular than Mickey Mouse. Running time, one reel.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. Small town patronage.

ON ICE: Harry Langdon—Fairly good comedy that will get quite a few laughs. Running time, two reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

PARADE OF WOODEN SOLDIERS: Betty Boop Cartoons—One of the best Betty Boop cartoons. The musical score by Rubinoff splendid. Running time, nine minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL (No. 2): Here is another pictorial showing some very itneresting points about horse racing and the raising of the race horses. Also views of Johnie Green, noted musician, playing and singing some popular tunes. Running time, nine minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL (No. 5): Great. Here is a real, clean reel. The author of the song, "The Last Roundup" sings his song and tells you all about it. Many other good subjects on this reel.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

POPEYE CARTOONS: Some of these are not too good, hut they pull and please the kids. Running time, one reel.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Texas. Small town patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR: The best singles we get, and we use all of them. Good any night.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR: Here's a newcomer to the screen that seems determined to become very popular. We have shown two numbers and like them very much, and, what is of greater importance, so does our clientele.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

RADIO ROUNDUP, A: Mary Small, The Poet Prince, Three X Sisters—One of the best of this series. Ten minutes of real entertainment. It's great.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

SAILOR, BEWARE: Walter Catlett, Eugene Pallette—Several of the younger folks came back to see this again. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SEASIN'S GREETINKS: Popeye the Sailor—Popeye spells money at our box-office. Running time, six minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SING, BING, SING: Bing Crosby—Very good, but so old. We wish we could have played this when a better print could have been had. However, we had many good comments on it. Bing sings three of four songs, and there is plenty of good fast slapstick comedy. Running time, two reels.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

SOCK-A-BYE, BABY: Popeye the Sailor—A knockout. People get as much kick out of Popeye as they do out of an ordinary two-reeler. Very popular here. —Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

RKO

AIR TONIC: Headliner Series—Very, very good.—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview Theatre, Plainview, Neb. General patronage.

CALIFORNIA WEATHER: Ruth Etting—Singing good, but they try to inject a pest and this one was the "nuts." Running time, 20 minutes.—M. N. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Oreg. Local patronage.

GRIN AND BEAR IT: Mr. Average Man Comedies (Edgar Kennedy)—About the average Kennedy comedy, which means good. Our patrons like them. Clean humor. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SNUG IN A JUG: Clark and McCullough—Our patrons liked this. Clark and McCullough are very popular here. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

THROWN OUT OF JOINT: Gribbon-Kennedy Comedies—Very good two-reel comedy. Plenty of laughs.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

State Rights Celebrity

JACK AND THE BEANSTALK: Here is a color cartoon on a par with Silly Symphony. The color is not as good as the technicolor, hut it's good at that. Everyhody stayed to see it over again the second time. Here's hoping that "The Little Red Hen" is as good as "Jack and the Beanstalk."—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S MECHANICAL MAN: Mickey Mouse —Here is another good cartoon of this series. Plenty of laughs and is sure to please both young and old. The hoxing match with the Mechanical Man is good and will bring many laughs. Come on, Disney, give us some more as good as this one. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

STEEPLE CHASE: Mickey Mouse—This is another good cartoon comedy featuring Mickey Mouse as the winning jockey of the great horse race. Very good entertainment and will please both young and old alike. The last issues of this series are very good and make up for the bad ones at start. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Universal

BIG BENEFIT, THE: Mentone No. 4.—Very good—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview Theatre, Plainview, Neb. General patronage.

BOSWELL SISTERS, THE: Radio Star Reels—A fair short subject. Running time, two reels.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

MERRY OLD SOUL: Oswald Cartoons—One of the best Oswalds we have played. Liked hy every one. Running time, eight minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

NOT THE MARRYING KIND: Sterling Holloway—Fairly good slapstick. Running time, two reels.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

OPEN SESAME: Henry Armetta—Not as good as some we have played. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

RADIO STAR REELS: Boswell Sisters—Extra good two-reel subject.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. General patronage.

SHE DONE HIM RIGHT: Pooch the Pup—The first time I have ever reported upon a short. But I want to say to you this is the best cartoon I have ever shown on my screen.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

SUPPER AT SIX: Mentone No. 5—Just fair for a Mentone musical. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. P. Foster, Granada Theatre, Monte Vista, Colo. General patronage.

TRIFLE BACKWARD, A: Vince Barnett—The audience seemed to get a lot of kick out of this comedy. Running time, two reels.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

WORLD'S GREATEST THRILLS: Specials—Here is something that peps up a program that you feel is something wrong with. Thrill is right. Don't replace some other short with this. Just add it on your program and use it on a weak program. Running time, two reels.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

AROUND THE CLOCK: Norma Terris, Four Eton Boys—Not nearly up to the standard of the Brevity releases. Not much to this two-reeler.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

BORAH MINNEVITCH AND HIS HARMONICA RASCALS: Melody Masters—Very clever, well liked. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

BOSKO'S MECHANICAL MAN: Merrie Melodies—Fair.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

BOSKO'S PICTURE SHOW: Merrie Melodies—Bosko puts on a picture show, a screen song, news, a Laurel and Hardy comedy, and a feature with a villain. All cartoon stuff, but very clever. Running time, one reel.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

BOSKO, THE SPEED KING: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon. Got a lot of laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BUDDY'S SHOW BOAT: Looney Tunes—Very good Bosko cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

DISH RAN AWAY WITH THE SPOON, THE: Merry Melodies—Usual Merry Melody. Running time, one reel.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

DOUBLE CROSSING OF COLUMBUS, THE: Charles Judels—The school teachers may not approve of this version of how Columbus discovered America, hut it is rich burlesque and was enjoyed immensely hy most of my crowd. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

EDDIE DUCHIN AND BAND: Melody Masters—One of the best of these band numbers, and they are all good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

GIRL TROUBLE: Mitchell and Durante—This is in color and is above average. The comedy is good and the singing and dancing are better. Use it. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

GIRL TROUBLE: Mitchell and Durante—One of the best Broadway Brevities released. They seem to be all good. Running time, two reels.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

GOBS OF FUN: George Givot, Charles Judels—It's a Big V comedy and it's good. Running time, two reels.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

HERE COMES FLOSSIE: Ben Blue—A very good Ben Blue comedy. I am sure the rest of his comedies will he great. Running time, two reels.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

HONEYMOON HOTEL: Merry Melodies—The best cartoon I have run in my theatre. All in color, this cartoon made a big hit with my patrons. I would like to run about two of these a month. Will we get them, Warner?—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

HOT FROM PETROGRAD: Dave Apollon and Orchestra—Plenty good—and our folks do like these band numbers. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

HOW'VE YOU BEEN: Roscoe Fatty Arbuckle—Pretty good slapstick comedies. Running time, 17 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LAUGHS IN THE LAW: Pepper Pot—This is one Pepper Pot that is not so good, but will get by. Running time, one reel.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

LITTLE GIRL WITH BIG IDEAS: Molly Picon—One of the poorest musicals we played from this company, and yet they rate it as a special. Just so much time and money wasted. Running time, 26 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Family and rural patronage.

ONE STEP AHEAD OF MY SHADOW: Merry Melodies—Very pleasing cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Farming patronage.

MILD WEST, THE: Janet Reade, Olive Borden—Another good Broadway Brevity added to the others. They are surely coming along fine. Running time, two reels.—Louis Perretta, Crescent Theatre, Mahoningtown, Pa. General patronage.

WHALE OF A YARN, A: Pepper Pot—An excellent travel talk, with beautiful scenery and fine animal pictures. Entertaining as well as instructive. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

YEAST IS YEAST: Tom Patrocola, Broadway Brevities—Not so good as most Broadway Brevities.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

Serials

Universal

GORDON OF GHOST CITY: Buck Jones, Madge Bellamy—We have just finished this serial. It is very good. Drew well and held up at the box office when a poor-drawing feature was on the program. Pleased the children and most of the adults. If your business fluctuates according to feature, book a serial. Well, we were skeptical, too. Running time, 20 minutes each chapter.—M. C. Howe, Erskine Theatre, Erskine, Minn. General patronage.

GORDON OF GHOST CITY: Buck Jones, Madge Bellamy—This held up throughout the 12 weeks, although I can't say it built up but very little. Serial is hetter than average.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

PERILS OF PAULINE: Evalyn Knapp, Robert Allen—Am about half through with this and is holding interest and business better than I expected. In fact, this one is doing a little better than "Gordon of Ghost City.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

PIRATE TREASURE: Richard Talmadge—Seems to please far hetter than most. He "yumps and yumps" and fights a dozen at a time, but there's plenty of action so far. We've played four chapters. It's okay.—Henry Reeve, Mission Theatre, Menard, Tex. Small town patronage.

Catholic Unit to Shun 'Vile' Films

The Episcopal Committee of Motion Pictures, at Cincinnati, has announced the organization of a Legion of Decency of the Catholic Church of America, the members of which will be required to subscribe to a pledge to remain away from "vile and unwholesome motion pictures," the Associated Press reported last week.

The pledge has been approved by the committee, which is composed of the Most Reverend John T. McNicholas, arch-bishop of Cincinnati; the Most Reverend John T. Cantwell, bishop of Los Angeles and San Diego; the Most Reverend Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of Pittsburgh, and the Most Reverend John F. Noll, bishop of Fort Wayne. Those subscribing to the pledge promise to remain away from "all pictures except those which do not offend decency and Christian morality."

Films which would come under the charterization embodied in the pledge are described as "a grave menace to youth, to home life, to country and to religion." Condemned are "those salacious pictures which, with other degrading agencies, are corrupting public morals and promoting a sex mania in the land." The pledge requires that members aid in arousing public opinion "against the portrayal of vice as a normal condition," and also expresses condemnation of "suggestive advertisements on billboards, at theatre entrances and in newspapers, and the favorable reviews often given to immoral pictures in the daily press."

Reorganizing Near For Fox Midland

Early reorganization of Fox Midland Theatre Company held up for more than a year due to federal court actions brought by Herbert M. Woolf and M. B. Shanberg, former owners of the properties, is expected, according to reports this week from Kansas City.

It was said a settlement of their suit seeking to recover almost $500,000 is considered in the final stages of negotiation and that plans are being consummated to resume proceedings. Expectation of settlement and subsequent election of a trustee is heightened by the recent visit of William Gossett, attorney representing large New York creditors. Los Angeles counsel for Fox West Coast also was reported in conference in Kansas City.

The beginning of Fox Midland reorganization will find Fox Rocky Mountain Theatre Company unhampered by any sort of litigation, it was said. The latest report of the Fox Rocky Mountain trustees indicated that on Jan. 1, 1934, reorganization had advanced to a point where of 60 theatres originally listed in that leasing company's division, only 12 remained subject to new rental deals, the others being re-grouped in new corporations or otherwise disposed of. Since then, it is understood, similar handling of seven more properties has been completed.

The trustee's report for the four months ended December 30, 1933, showed that receipts for the 12 houses totalled $179,090 and disbursements $137,384. Total receipts of Rocky Mountain and subsidiaries, including the large Midland subsidiary and comprising some 200 theatres, and with office receipts included, were $1,707,569, against disbursements of $1,689,374.

In New York, a report that Warner Brothers and Walter Reade, local theatre operator, were bidding against each other to take over the remnants of the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, was denied by Warner Marshall, secretary of the committee representing holders of 6½ per cent convertible gold notes and 6½ per cent sinking fund gold notes, who declared that Irving Trust Company, receiver for the circuit, had advised him no bids had been received.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A WELCOME CONTRIBUTION

The third Quigley Award goes West as Nevin McCord, of Boise, Idaho, takes his place proudly with those fortunate others who have gained this outstanding distinction. In the opinions of the judges, McCord did a masterly job. We congratulate him on behalf of the membership for his ingenious showmanship that brought such splendid box office returns. He deserves his prize.

But hardly less deserving are many of the campaigns that were entered for March consideration. The great number received and their high standard of excellence is not only a source of keen satisfaction but also a definite barometer that indicates the emphatic acceptance of this project in bringing to worldwide attention the efforts of the theatre manager.

And these efforts are being recognized if for no other reason than the time and care given the examination of the entries by the industry's leaders acting as the Committee of Judges. We are pleased to state that in no one instance has any judge slighted the responsibilities of selecting the winners.

Therefore it is apparent that the Quigley Awards project has been definitely established as a welcome contribution to the general welfare of the motion picture. The continued participation of theatremen everywhere is the only thing necessary to maintain the advantages already won.

"SO WHAT?"

The torrential floods of criticism anent circuit operation let loose in recent issues of Motion Picture Herald by Messrs. Chatkin and Goldberg are reminiscent and hardly original. Every now and then, champions of independent and unfettered theatre operation arise and lift their voices to bewail the weaknesses and evils(?) of chain management.

Then the storms subside—and nothing happens.

We hold no brief for circuit management but, up to now, we have neither seen nor heard of any fundamentally sound plan that will strengthen this method of operation. And if the construction of so nationwide a structure is so perilously faulty, then plans for improvement are immediately in order.

With this in mind, an open invitation is extended to Messrs. Chatkin, Goldberg, and others as constructively-minded to make known in the pages of the Round Table their views on what should be done to allow managers the necessary latitude in removing some of the alleged obstacles in the way of successful operation, circuit or independent.

Any plan that will ease the manager's burden and restore to him his proper place in the conduct of the theatre has our support. But criticisms that merely denounce are, unfortunately, just so much water spilled over the dam.

THE FLORAL EXHIBIT

No keener showmanship can be displayed at this time of the year than that which makes possible the promotion of a liberal lobby display of flowers. Poster art, even at its best, must pale in comparison with the attractiveness of a well-appointed floral creation in the Spring.

The advantages of such exhibits have long since been discovered by Round Tabler H. M. Addison, Loew's Cleveland Theatres chief, who has built up these flower tieups until now they are an annual event looked forward to eagerly by his cooperating florists as well as the general public. A detailed account and photo of this year's first showing appears on a following page.

There should not be too many obstacles in the path of showmen seeking the participation of local florists and nurserymen. These cooperations have proven mutually profitable, for few floral merchants will not see the value of displaying their wares in so prominent a spot as the theatre lobby. And fewer managers will disregard the virtues of this beautiful and attention-compelling form of seasonal display.

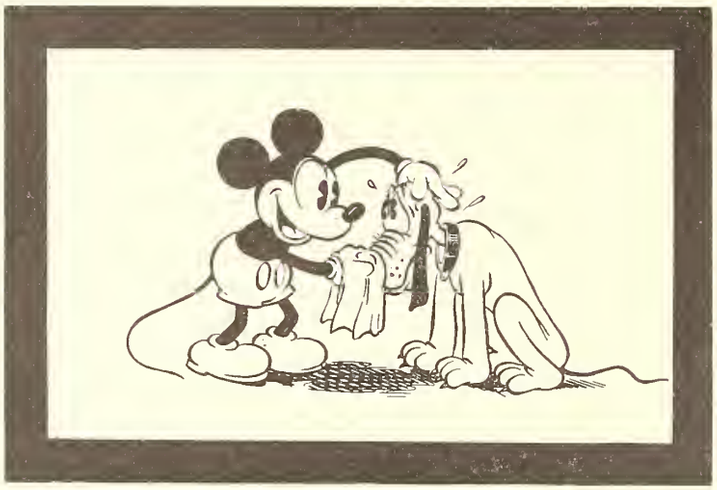
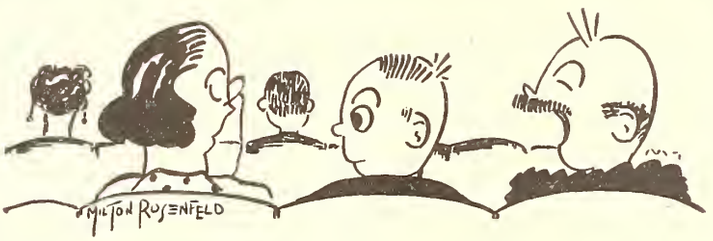
A WELCOME CHANGE

Advertising copy originating in the home offices seems to be going through the early stages of a welcome revolution. Not only are ads cleaner, but they are brighter—much brighter, we are pleased to say.



Especially to be noted is Hal Horne's good job of selling "Palooka" in a series that easily keeps pace with the quick tempo of the picture. Both in art and copy, these displays break away distinctly and pleasantly from the deadly routine of the press book "effusion school," a change that has been commended in and outside the industry.



As a former "home officer" we appreciate the difficulties in seeking out box office freshness for the advertising of every release. The creation of a different campaign at too frequent intervals is, we assure you, no easy bed of roses. The average production release schedule is a hard taskmaster, and to turn out the needed press books on time, week in and week out, is a job in itself that requires plenty of doing. Frankly, it is surprising to us that the general standard of acceptability remains so constant.

That such definite progress has been made is heartening to the hard-pressed manager and highly encouraging to the box office.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!

MOTHER: HOW DO YOU LIKE MICKEY, SON?
BOY: ————————?

Carroll "Red Inks" Front Page on Garbo

The "red faced extra" again makes its appearance. Executed by Manager Glenn Carroll, Midland Theatre, Coffeyville, Kan, it served to bring quick attention to the date on "Christina." Used sparingly, the red-inked front page is still potent, and where the papers cannot be promoted they usually can be obtained at a reasonable figure. Carroll secured his gratis by using up a lot of left-overs on issues of some weeks back.

Distribution of autographed star stills was put over with laundry with copy on reverse side split between theatre and cleaner. An extension of this idea used some time ago was an offer by the laundry to furnish paper frames for these photos to all new accounts or to those taking advantage of certain advertised specials.

London Member Edits Good Monthly Program

To judge from the many well conceived house programs we receive from the other side, evidently our foreign members do not depend too much upon newspapers to sell their pictures. Another instance of the good work done along this line is the 20-page program on coated stock put out by Manager Harry Sanders, of the Lido Theatre, London. Not only does it publicize in detail the coming attractions, but in addition to a number of outside ads it also contains a snappy monthly chat under Harry's signature, which is very well written.

SO WHAT DOES THE BOY SAY?

We've decided to let you fellers suggest a "tag line" for the above drawing from the talented pen of Milton Rosenfeld. And the best and most apt answer gets a prize in the form of the original cartoon, framed, with the winning answer filled in by Milt and proper credits given to the winner.

Some fun, hey? So get busy and study the above "laff".

Mother asks the kid how he likes Mickey, and the boy says—What?

Send in your answer in 15 words or less. All entries must be in by Monday, April 23. The winner will be announced in the issue of April 28.

Book Club Angle Sells "Mr. X"

"Mystery of Mr. X" being taken from novel which was a recent Crime Club selection, Manager Joe Brennen, State Theatre, Boston, made use of this with out-of-the-ordinary tieup with book stores and lending libraries, with thousands of imprinted book marks distributed through these agencies. Displays were secured in chain of leading hat stores on Montgomery stills and many jewelry and beauty tieups were made via Elizabeth Allan, woman lead in picture.

Swank Bally Plugs "Countess" at Roxy

It was one of the new "Silver Arrow" automobiles, bannered, that gathered curious New York crowds when this luxurious bally was used on "The Countess of Monte Cristo" campaign at the Roxy Theatre. Stopping at various parts of the city, a very well dressed young lady was handed out by a footman in uniform, one of the stops being at Macy's Cinema shop, where the girl modeled dresses named after the title.

This was the highlight of the various stunts engineered by Managing Director Irving Lesser and ad head Morris Kinzler. Radio and fan magazine tieups also helped. Albert Nathan, of Universal, assisted.

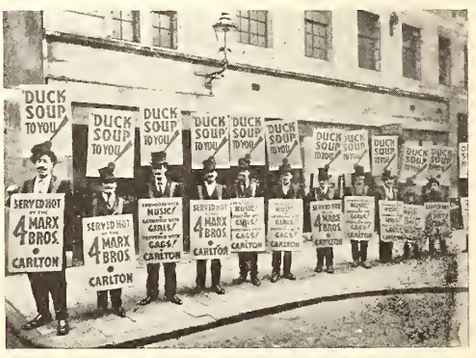
Brient Helps in Fight Against Admission Tax

Conspicuous among those fighting various legislative attempts to place tax on theatre admissions are Round Tablers whose past efforts in this direction have been duly chronicled. Add now the name of Elmer H. Brient, Loew's Theatre, Richmond, Va., who aided ably in organizing State Theatre Association, which brought sufficient pressure to bear to have Governor appear before the General Assembly requesting withdrawal of tax movement.



Tax matters, however, do not retard exploitation of Brient's pictures, recent instance being "snowbirds" on "Fashion Frolics," this old-timer being new in Virginia, where snowfall is rare. Incidentally, it's a neat way of getting around local ordinances against theatre advertising.

Sandwich-Men Plug London "Duck" Date

Sandwich men in London are a form of street bally organized to a very high point of efficiency on the other side of the water. John Armstrong, Paramount Theatres' ad head in Great Britain, made use of this idea in a very unique fashion on "Duck Soup" (see photo), in which a round dozen of the sandwich men exploited the various selling points of the picture.

John, whose excellent activities on Mae West were publicized a few issues back, caused the curious to comment with a calling card from the "Come up and see me" gal on which appeared the name of the star, theatre and phone number and in a corner handwritten cut with her well known salutation.

Dick's Street Dice

Places P. A. System In Leading Stores

A public address system direct from the theatre to 15 loudspeakers located in the leading stores of his town. That's the latest achievement of live-wire Dick Thomason, who is doing so good a job at managing the Crystal Theatre, Ellis, Kan. With the co-operation of the phone company, the P. A. system was created at practically no cost as Dick did the wiring himself and also made a "mixing panel" from two potentiometers.

The outfit is capable of broadcasting recordings, sound from film, local talent, microphone announcements and also regular radio programs. Regular one-hour programs are presented three times a week during the stores' busiest hours, the broadcasts including news on current and coming pictures, song hits, press book radio playlets, etc.

On "Take a Chance," Dick made up a number of pairs of cardboard dice 18 inches square (see photo) and placed them in prominent downtown spots. Made from scraps, the cost was estimated to be about 75 cents. Also, inexpensive was a miniature stage on "Beloved" with ad copy and stills occupying the stage. Two small windows on either side of the proscenium were lighted with small Xmas tree bulbs to make the cor- stand out clearly.

This member gets a lot of attention with his animated displays, and reports that a toy cutout bus against a rolling scenic curtain background on "Fugitive Lovers" was especially attractive, special lighting making this a standout flash.

American Gags Used On Bombay Campaign

Bombay, India, in distance is thousands of miles away, but in exploitation just around the corner to judge by efforts of Dave Blyth, head of Warner Brothers' Bombay branch, who arranged campaign on "Gold Diggers" in same fashion as typical of Broadway.

Dialects being more common in that country than English and European languages, advertising to appeal to all classes required different handling, different preparation. Broadcasts of the song hits were put on, and an advance showing for the local press brought excellent reviews which were printed in the various languages. Other highlights usually employed in campaigns on this side were also utilized by Blyth to excellent returns.

March Judges Decide in Favor of Granada Theatre Manager, Boise, Idaho, for Campaign on Fox's "Frontier Marshal"

Out to the wide open spaces of the West goes the third Quigley plaque, for by the majority vote of the judges, Messrs. Ned Depinet, Ben Grimm and Irving Lesser, Manager Nevin McCord, Granada Theatre, Boise, Idaho, receives the prize for his campaign on the Fox picture, "Frontier Marshal."

Right on Nevin's heels finished Manager Jack H. Hodges, Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., "Death Takes a Holiday," and Manager Don Nichols, Broadway Theatre, Charlotte, N. C., "It Happened One Night." To these Round Tablers goes the distinction of winning the only two First Mentions awarded in March.

Twelve "Honorables"

Twelve other entrants forwarded campaigns that were strong enough to secure Honorable Mentions, and the names and designations of these showmen are carried in the column to left. Certificates to this effect have been mailed, and plans are now afoot for the presentation of the March Award to McCord. A detailed account of this manager's entry and, if it arrives in time, his picture, will be run in the next issue.

Of interest is the number of entries received for March consideration, a distinct increase over the totals forwarded for either January or February. Included in the third month competition was a splendid campaign from England, which earned Honorable Mention, making the second won by showmen from overseas. And from what we are given to understand, theatremen from other lands are girding themselves in earnest to land one of the big Awards.

That this determination is shared on this side is proven by the record of Manager Gene Curtis, and Exploiteer Ken Finlay, of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, Canada. Two "Firsts" and one "Honorable" in the three months of the Quigley project is something that will take a lot of topping by other showmen.

April Entries Arrive

Entries for the April plaque are already coming in, and from their excellence, another keen struggle is in prospect. The fourth month judges will be announced in the next issue, and as usual, this committee will consist of representatives from the distribution, advertising and exhibition branches of the industry.

Again we invite managers from everywhere in the world to enter campaigns for the Quigley Awards, on any product, major or independent, foreign or domestic. The few necessary rules to observe have been carried frequently in recent issues of the Round Table section—MIKE.

House Staff in Togas Sells "Roman Scandals"

Animated displays and spirited street ballys occupied most of the spotlight in Manager Joe Rosenfield's campaign on "Roman Scandals" at the Modjeska Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Two weeks ahead, a cutout of Cantor was placed on a turntable surrounded by dolls dressed as girls in picture, moving turntable giving effect of girls dancing.

Chariot ballyhoo was also employed on streets with driver in black face. Also in black face was another man in Cantor costume wearing toga and wreath of flowers working the main streets and theatre during breaks. Ushers and doormen also dressed in togas (see photo). Joe further reports the Modjeska first local theatre to play picture on Wide Range which was stressed in all advertising. The usual Chase and Sanborn hookup was likewise effeffcted.

Commendable is this campaign put over at little actual outlay. As an instance, the only expense for the well constructed chariot was rental of the horses. Wagon chassis was borrowed from nearby farmer and theatre stage hand built the chariot upon it.

Stein Brings Punch and Judy Show to Public Schools

Punch and Judy lobby show a week ahead divided attention with a special shadow box puppet display in rear of foyer on Irv Stein's "I Am Suzanne" campaign at the Astoria-Grand, Astoria, L. I. This member contacted schools and arranged preview for principals, heads of mothers' clubs and ministers, one of the clergymen being impressed sufficiently to speak of the picture from the pulpit.

Irv also put on the Punch and Judy show in various schools for the purpose of which general assemblies were called. In return, theatre bulletins were allowed in each school with further assistance given by the teachers who urged children to see the picture. Stein reports juvenile attendance of over 3,000. Excellent!

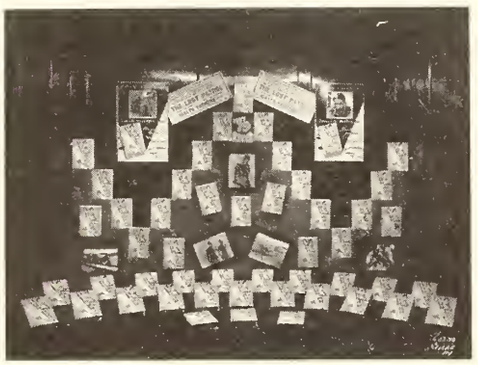
Caldwell Creates Unique Display with Rare Violins



An exhibit of 25 rare violins, some over 200 years old in a double window display at one of the best locations in town. This was smartly featured by Wally Caldwell to plug "Cat and the Fiddle" at Loew's Valentine, Toledo, Ohio. The instruments were borrowed from local owners, the idea being good enough to crack a two-column newspaper spread that included generous theatre credits.

Wally promoted himself a 20-inch free display ad by tying in production still showing Novarro seeking a room. The newspaper used this for a house ad to plug its furnished room classified columns, the flash also including of course the proper theatre mentions.

In his "Nana" campaign, Caldwell stressed the new star angle, this being well brought out in the accompanying photo wherein eight different poses of Sten were used as an art background for style tieup, with copy in foreground reading to the effect that theatre was introducing a new star and store was introducing new styles.

Segall Builds Grosses With Novelty Advertising

Manager I. J. Segall, of the Rivoli Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., finds that novelty advertising has a strong appeal in his section. Recently he dug up a lot of miniature toy chairs to which small cards were fastened, reading "Everyone will be 'Sitting Pretty,' etc., etc." The idea clicked.

860 Stills In Rialto Front on "Lost Patrol"

Hourly, thousands pass the corner of 42nd Street and Broadway where stands the Rialto Theatre operated aggressively by Arthur L. Mayer. To turn lines of these passersby to the box office, potent fronts are created. On "The Lost Patrol," the amazing total of 860 black and white stills were reported to have been used to catch curious eyes, a flash that stopped many.

Mayer started his campaign on this one a month ahead, different trailers being used each week in advance of the date, and also at the nearby Paramount. Giant sign atop the Rialto also plugged the attraction.

The theatre's comprehensive mailing lists were contacted. These included members of prominent local boys' clubs, officers of 700 women's clubs. Also informed of the engagement were over 2,000 Better Films committees. Many windows on the photoplay edition of the novel (see photo) were obtained, with further displays in Woolworth stores of the miniature edition.

Old Copies of "Alice" Book Win Prizes in Contest

Bob Hutchings, of the Portage Theatre, Portage, Wis., reports a smart idea on his "Alice in Wonderland" campaign that hasn't as yet made the rounds, and is recommended on any picture adapted from one of the old classics. Bob gave prizes to the boys and girls producing the oldest copies of "Alice," these entries being displayed in a book window.

This, however, was a supplementary gag on the general campaign which was aimed to interest adults and for this purpose Hutchings sold his school officials on the idea of tying in on a benefit for the high school band under the auspices of the powerful local Band Mothers' Club. All children were encouraged to sell tickets by an award of one free admission for every five tickets sold, the distribution being handled by teachers in every class room.

What put this over splendidly was a stage concert by the band each night of the picture, and as the benefit closed at the seven o'clock show on the first night, Hutchings was able to cash in on the full priced tickets sold during the remainder of the run. Page one newspaper stories, free broadcasts and ads contributed by merchants selling the benefit tickets, were other profitable angles put over by this member.

Caruso's Lobby Flash Makes Unusual Advance

Unique and unusual are terms that may aptly be applied to lobby display created by Manager Adolfo Caruso, Crotona Theatre, New York, on "It Happened One Night." Adapted from the tourist cabin that played so important a part in the picture, the flash was a real reproduction of the cabin with glass windows, lace curtains, flowers, well lighted inside and out (see photo) with cutouts of the stars behind the window. Atop the cabin were spooning cats and a crescent moon smiling down upon the entire scene.

Clever catch lines were used on all sides of the cabin, humorously calling attention to the plight of the lovers. Extremely well sold, the idea caught on immediately.

Bovim Goes for Fizz Bottles on "Rouge"

Milk bottle hangers secured through cooperation of leading dairy, tabloids distributed through tieup with local newspaper, and theatre ad, menu cards in restaurants, soda fountains, etc., were various angles that clicked for Manager Russell Bovin, Ohio Theatre, Columbus, on "Moulin Rouge." Song hits secured windows, as did other press book tieups. Radio stations also cooperated with special exploitation record.

The front attracted. Red and green bound in gold was color scheme. Both program panels (see photo) were decorated with cutouts of chorus girls, under marquee was placed two huge heads of Bennett with billing centered in cutout letters. Unusual were two cutout fizzing wine bottles on sides of box office.

"Goldie's" Stuffed Polar Bear Plugs "Iceberg"

Saul "Goldie" Goldstein, now skipper of the Dorchester Theatre, Dorchester, Mass., went "wild animal" to advertise "S. O. S. Iceberg" by promoting a stuffed polar bear from a nearby furrier and planting Bruin in the lobby surrounded by a carpet of white cotton to simulate ice. This unusual exhibit attracted inquiries from adults as well as children and Saul obliged by giving impromptu lectures in the lobby on the habits of these Arctic denizens. That's "Goldie" himself in the accompanying photo, evidently guarding his patrons from danger. Is the gun loaded, Saul?

Dempsey Uses One Column Ads for Advance Buildup

The advance advertising built up on "Dinner at Eight" was well handled by Manager James J. Dempsey of the Paramount Theatre, Lynn, Mass., in a series of one column star ads used ahead and during the run. Each of these was headed with a cut of the star in an action pose with copy tying in the part to the picture. The day before, Jim ran a three column group ad which doubly sold the appeal of the many starred picture.

Many of the other proven angles were also put across, including the A & P Coffee hookup, fashion slants, book windows, menus, and others as effective.

Merchants Help Sell Pilegard's Anniversary

Unique cooperative newspaper advertising was the nucleus of Manager J. Lawrence Pilegard's anniversary week campaign for Fox Theatre, Visalia, Cal., each ad being built around a word that applied to the business of the merchant as well as the theatre. For instance, "comfort" was used to tie in a furniture ad and the relaxation made enjoyable by the theatre seats; "romance" was appropriately tied in with a florist ad, etc. Each display of course mentioned the theatre attraction.

A series of daily events for the entire week resulted profitably, each night being identified in a different manner. Sunday was open house to those unable to attend regularly, names taken from the relief rolls; Monday was "service club" night, attended by groups from various lunch clubs, etc. Then on Tuesday, the theatre birthday, all those born in the county on the same day were invited to be guests, with "fraternal," "high school" and C. C. C. nights following, the week winding up with a Saturday Boy Scout matinee, when candy was distributed.

Rosenfield Decorates Street Lamps on "Moulin Rouge"

Tieups that included generous newspaper ads on "Moulin Rouge" without cost to the theatre scored well for Joe Rosenfield, at the Orpheum Theatre, Omaha, Neb., this campaign being one of the last put over by Joe before he was moved up to the post of city manager for Tri-States.

Hookup with prominent brewer brought a 70-inch ad followed by one of 60 inches, promoted from the Grunow Radio people. Featured in his outdoor billing was a number of cutout windmills which Joe managed to plant on many lamp posts (see photo) in the downtown district. We don't know how he manages it but this is certainly 100 per cent advertising.

Ace Music Slants In Feldman Campaign

Much coverage on "Let's Fall in Love" at the Earle Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., by Manager Joe Feldman and publicist Arthur Cohn, the campaign embracing many commendable slants. Private screening for radio executives, orchestra leaders, night club stars, etc., brought cooperation on song hits as did tieups with music stores. Window strips plugging Victor records of songs were also planted.

Other cooperation included Western Union windows, distribution at theatre of free copies of Screenland and Red Book with front covers rubber stamped, Western Union messages delivered to private homes by uniformed boys and directory cards at two local universities.

Paper Runs Editorial On Round Tabler Bevel

Some weeks ago, press agent Jay Howard was in Harriman, Tenn., working with Manager L. W. Bevel at the Princess Theatre, and before leaving town Jay "by-lined" a story in the local daily wherein he complimented Bevel's ability and otherwise praised him and the theatre to the locals.

Although "L. W.'s" standing is of the best in Harriman, this unsolicited endorsement of his many virtues was commented upon favorably and hiked the Princess a couple of notches higher in the prestige column. It seems that sometimes a man's good points are taken for granted until they are emphasized by others.

Small Car Bally Mystifies Crowds

An Austin car completely boxed with signs on "Dinner at Eight" made a fine bally for Manager Eddie Haley, Fitchburg Theatre, Fitchburg, Mass. Touring the city and surrounding towns for four days ahead, Eddie reports great excitement. It seems that the size of the displays completely concealed the small car (see photo) which caused curious crowds to wonder what made the bally operate.

Out of the ordinary lobby displays stirred up additional interest as did a young man in evening clothes who passed out cards to patrons inviting them to the "banquet" of the stars. Evidently many accepted.

AN EFFECTIVE FLORAL TIEUP

Addison's Unique Lobby Flower Show Gets Citywide Comment; Electric Association Cooperates

In one way or other, Round Tabler H. M. Addison, the Loew Cleveland Theatres' division manager, for many years has created outstanding lobby floral exhibits in cooperation with prominent local florists and nurserymen. Addy has inaugurated this season's displays with an Eastern flower show in the lobby of the State Theatre with the added cooperation of the Cleveland Electrical League, which contributed demonstrations of gardens grown by electricity, etc.

The illustration below is the photo taken from the mezzanine floor looking down on the display of shrubbery, cut flowers, plants, garden furniture, electrical growing garden, electric heated aquarium, miniature water fountain and a lily pond. The exhibit is valued at $6,000 and was attended by two horticulturists who answered all questions.

Secures Complete Display

Represented were cymbidium orchids, Joanna Hill roses with snapdragons and daffodils, flower baskets of California heather, Spiried, acacia, and talisman roses; Easter lilies and calla lilies, iris and Radiant Red roses. Also, varieties and types of garden plants, ferns and shrubberies, such as ginista, birds' nest ferns, primrose, kambliny, roses, tulips, cinerorid and ayolia, potted in fancy crockery. Statuary was placed in different nooks of the garden with a pottery sun dial, center front. Garden furniture consisted of benches, pedestals, vases, arches, garden gates, bridge tables, beach umbrellas, iron lamps, chairs and tea tables.

Further interest was aroused by newspaper publicity and display ads placed by the cooperating florists and Electrical League. In every way, it proved to be the most beautiful floral exhibit yet held in the theatre lobby and A. G. Catlin, Addison's assistant, reports that it caused more comment than any exploitation put over at the State in some time.

Broadcast Playlet on "Catherine" by Children

Anent John McManus' successful radio tieups on publicizing attractions at Midland Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., a recent broadcast on "Catherine the Great," enacted by local talented children, reacted very favorably to box office. In cooperation with U. A. exploiteer, W. P. Bernfield, this was put across with the aid of a leading department store which advertises further in the newspapers and by window display. On another station, a second tieup was made wherein a 25-wood contest returned the senders of the first 100 replies a still of Douglas Fairbands, Jr.

Window displays stressing the Russian trend in style were spotted prominently, as were 75 windows of one drug chain, and every local branch of Postal Telegraph. Incidentally, this is first contribution to the Club pages regarding Bernfield's activities. We await others, as many good campaigns are being put over in the K. C. territory.

"Red" Harkins and Crew Step Fast in Arizona

New-member Dwight E. (Red) Harkins runs the State Theatre, Tempe, Ariz., with the capable aid of a house force comprising two others besides himself. And from the initial contribution to these pages, the trio evidently does a smart job. This is illustrated by the accompanying photo of a water-going float on "Tugboat Annie" which "Red" reports was planted in "the deepest parts of Arizona's greatest water course, the Salt River."

Harkins does all his own advertising, printing handbills, blotters, etc., on his own press. He turned out a neat job on a blotter for "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" on which clever cartoons were used to sell the cast. These were distributed at a nearby college.

Paul's Sunday Concerts Still Going Strong

Some time ago we editorialized on the smart showmanship displayed by Manager Paul O. Klinger, Radio Theatre, Lewiston, Pa., in inaugurating a series of Sunday concerts at the theatre which by State law is closed on this day. Paul now tells us that these events have grown in popularity with each succeeding concert, the newspapers, civic leaders and other persons who count getting in back of the idea to the extent that its fame is spreading far into the surrounding country.

Without doubt, this is a very fine prestige builder that is recommended for use in other six-day situations. Klingler has been able to secure the talent without cost and the program is selected as nearly as possible to please various classes of music lovers. Managers so inclined should get in touch with Klingler who no doubt will be only too pleased to furnish all necessary information.

Mumford's Knitted Tie Rates Publicity Break

Few managers wear ties knitted by the hands of charming May Robson. Possessor of this enviable gift is Manager Leon O. Mumford, Roth-Strand Theatre, Summit, N. J., who made good use of it in promoting newspaper story on "You Can't Buy Everything," in which Miss Robson stars.

To the editor of his paper, Leon described details of the old days in which he trouped with the star, relating interesting experiences of the past. Thus a slightly different manner of obtaining theatre publicity was none the less effective.

THE PROFITABLE MOVIE CLUB

Long Islander Discusses Benefits Of Successful Children's Clubs; Gives Results of His Experiences

by WILLIAM A. LEVEY
Manager, Capitol Theatre, Riverhead, N. Y.

I have organized clubs here and in other communities and these clubs have definitely stood for a purpose. They were spoken of in the various civic organizations, the women's clubs, and at women's sewing circles. Mothers spoke of the serial and "how very happy they were to have some place to send their children on Saturday afternoons where they would see an interesting picture." This sort of publicity cannot be bought and it brings your theatre right into the heart of the home where "junior" and "sis" discuss the theatre and the shows over the dinner table. Make your club both interesting and inspiring to the children. Get into your lobby, greet the kids as they come in, make them feel welcome and tell them how glad you are to have them join and how much you feel sure they'll like the new serial.

Recently I ran a special show for children in a tieup with the Parent Teachers Association. The program consisted of a feature, Jackie Cooper in "the Lone Cowboy" and several short subjects. I used one of the episodes of the "Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., serial, "The Wolf Dog" during the course of the program and it is amazing the tremendous applause this serial received.

Organize With Purpose

A movie club, like any other club, must be organized with a very definite purpose in the mind of its organizer. To merely advertise that a club will be formed at the theatre means little, if anything, for a manager's heart and soul must go into the project. Success or failure depends entirely upon the efforts put into the movement.

In any community, a movie club can be made very important. These are formed mostly for the purpose of assuring your theatre a steady attendance during the run of serials. To get the children interested so that they will want to come to see each and every episode of that serial is the difficult task of the manager. Youngsters must be contacted in the proper channels. It is not enough to tell the children about your club. Parents should also be informed.

It is needless to say that the serial must be a good one from every angle. You can no longer hope to hold child interest with a mediocre picture than you can hope to gain adult attendance for a poor attraction, regardless of the adjectives and superlatives you may use in your newspapers or other advertising mediums. Children, like adults, know pictures! Make no mistake about that! The very first episode will tell the story as to whether the children are or are not pleased and if they like it they'll come back for every episode.

A movie club should have an important part in your program and should stand for something in the community for the children, just as the Elks, Masons, or any other fraternal organizations stand for something to the citizens of the town. If possible, get one of the local "big shots" who is interested in the welfare of the children to come to the theatre on the opening day, greet the kids and tell them about the picture.

Children's clubs in theatres have brought in many a dollar to the box office and have built up a lot of good will. The youngsters are your best bet for advertising and publicity. Kiddies go home and tell their parents of the fine picture they've seen and the parents decide that they, too, want to see the show. Gain the confidence of the children in your community and they'll be steady customers. Greet them as your adult patronage in the making. Endeavor to give them entertainment that will please them. That this is not always possible the writer knows only too well, but constant effort will bring better than average results.

Do your best at any rate and work with your women's clubs, your motion picture councils and your Parent Teachers Association. They are, after all, striving to bring about better pictures for the children and this fine impulse cannot be overrated. They'll work with you if you'll do your share. Organize your clubs with the help of these organizations and your club will be a success, and if I may add, a source of considerable personal gratification.

Sidman Puts on Unique Stage Show

Combining a stage revue of local talent with a health exercise demonstration was profitable for Manager Morris Sidman, Colonial Theatre, Utica, N. Y. AN ASSORTMENT OF ACE FRONTS

Egan's Butterfly Effects

Can't Miss Those Letters

"Leave It To Charminsky"

Note Tapestried Background

Tiger Heads, Stills and Art

(Left) A pictorial front stressing the highlights in art, stills and copy by Manager J. J. MADDEN, Granby Theatre, Norfolk, Va., on "Devil Tiger." The lithographed animal heads were placed to catch the eye and the stills, with copy panels, helped to build up additional interest.

(Right) WALLY CALDWELL, Loew's Valentine, Toledo, Ohio, went strong for carnival atmosphere for his main lobby display on "Moulin Rouge." The gay decorations of streamers and balloons, aided by the playing of the hit numbers on the phonograph to right, received a satisfying reception.

Plenty of Carnival Here

Paneled Star Enlargements

(Right) Red against white was Manager BILL DWORSKI'S color scheme in selling "Massacre" at the Madison Theatre, Mansfield, Ohio. Catchlines from the ads were used judiciously to illustrate the poster art and framed production stills. Entire cost did not exceed ten dollars, according to Bill. It certainly looks very snappy.

VIVA VILLA PACKS 'EM IN!

RIPTIDE... 3rd BIG WEEK CAPITOL

Giant Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Hits March on Broadway!

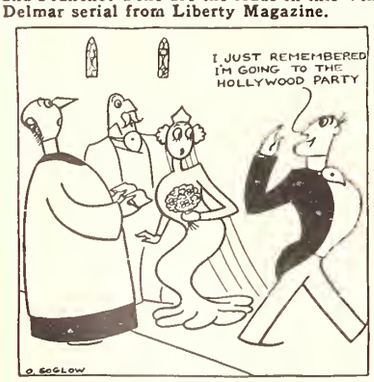
36 hour weeks! Millions... with new leisure... race to the theatre for happy hours of entertainment!

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer snaps into action! "Viva Villa!" hailed with critical cheers, storms into the Criterion as a two-a-day attraction. At the Capitol, Norma Shearer's "Riptide" sweeps into a third capacity week, winning an honor that has been accorded only six pictures in fifteen years.

Put your ear to the ground! More MGM triumphs are on the march! Read more about them on this page!

NORMA SHEARER'S "RIPTIDE"—300;000 people stormed through the doors of the Capitol Theatre to see Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery and Herbert Marshall in "Riptide" in the first two weeks of the engagement. Now, in the third week, box-office lines are still trailing down Broadway.

If the Capitol schedule permitted we believe this fine actress in this truly great emotional drama could run as long as "Abie's Irish Rose!" Congratulations, Miss Shearer!



New York Echoes with Cries of "Viva Villa!"

Given its world premiere at the Criterion Theatre on Tuesday, April 10 ..."Viva Villa!" has already thundered to a place among immortals of the screen. Critics bespattered their pages with "vivas!" and rave reviews. For instance: "Truly magnificent!" —Wm. Boehnel, World-Telegram... "Mexico's 'Birth of A Nation!'"— Rose Pelswick, Journal..."Thrilling as a bugle call!"— Regina Crewe, American..., "Fast, furious, compelling!"— Mordaunt Hall, Times... "Hearty, exciting!" Dick Watts, Trib.

M-G-M's "Viva Villa!" stars Wallace Beery in cast of 10,000 at the Criterion, B'way & 44th St. Twice Daily, 2:50—8:50. 3 times Sun & Hols., 2:50—5:50—8:50. (Extra Midnite Show Sat.) Mats. 50c to $1. Eves. 50c to $2.

JOAN CRAWFORD'S "SADIE McKEE"—Hollywood buzzes with happy advance cheers for "Sadie McKee." Fascinating Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone are the leads in this Vina Delmar serial from Liberty Magazine.

"HOLLYWOOD PARTY"—The pay-off of the merry season! You'll see it very soon!

THE ORIGINAL TARZAN—Glorious romance, primitive and unashamed... as Tarzan's mating cry booms through the jungle! The eager young lovers who defy the terrors of a green wilderness, are Maureen O'Sullivan and Johnny Weissmuller, stars of "Tarzan and His Mate."

"TARZAN AND HIS MATE" CAPITOL FRIDAY, APRIL 20

For sheer excitement, you'll find "Tarzan and His Mate" to be your most vivid movie experience. It leaves you gasping! Adventures and thrills rain on the screen in these brand-new exploits of the one and only Johnny Weissmuller. Among other high-lights of this Edgar Rice Burroughs jungle thriller, we recommend the incredible episode at the secret Elephant Burial Ground; Tarzan's clash with the ferocious "Lion Tooth Men" and the fight with the crocodile in the Crystal Love Pool.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 115, No. 4 April 21, 1934

FILM PATRIOTS

ANY casual reader of the public prints might readily discover that the motion picture as an institution of expression of and for national interests is considerably more appreciated by the governments in every other important nation than in the United States of America, land of its birth and nurture.

The issues and problems of the motion picture industry of the United States in its endeavors to do business in foreign lands has ever since the World War been filled with complications and subject to restrictive measures and attacks official and unofficial. The United States, as the United States, appears to have done nothing much about it. The motion picture industry has fought its own battles abroad.

So—with Codes and such in mind—one may be given to various reflections when we read dispatches announcing that the German banning of "Catherine the Great," excellent British-made cinema that it is, comes up in the House of Commons with a demand on the Foreign Secretary to know what action had been taken, and that reply was had that the issue was already under discussion with the proper German authorities.

And, the reflections might continue, over what if anything the United States has had to say about the recent demand of the German Government upon the British Foreign office that the American picture "Captured" be censored or suppressed. Of course the matter of fact British have already answered that it "had no authority in the matter."

There are those observers in this industry who lean to the notion that the motion picture has done considerably more for America and American interests than America knows or recognizes in any adequate official sense. A few years ago there was a rain of magazine articles on the subject of "trade follows the film," explaining American leadership in various foreign fields. But the films seem to be rather on their own.

WE "YES" MR. MAYER

A HOLLYWOOD dispatch to last week's issue of Motion Picture Herald reporting on an address of Mr. Louis B. Mayer before the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said: "He charged exhibitors with sitting around 'awaiting Springtime' and trade paper inserts in colors to govern their buying and with deciding what they'll pay each distributor in point of rental."

Mr. Mayer is entirely correct in his assertion.

We further know of no reason why the exhibitor should not await with interest the product announcements of the producers. We know of no reason why the exhibitor having read those product announcements should not make them a basis of judgment concerning his contemplated purchases for the coming season.

All that we need to add for Mr. Mayer's further information in this connection is that Motion Picture Herald is where the exhibitor looks. It has an audited attest to its circulation, with some 12,000 exhibitor readers.

SCREEN VIEWPOINT

SANDERSON Vanderbilt is the by-line a-top a long imposing article in the society section of the New York Herald Tribune of April 15 devoted to the interviewing of Mrs. August Belmont, newly cast president of the Motion Picture Research Council on the subject of motion pictures and what the Council may be aiming to do about them. The article graphically relates:

. . . Mrs. Belmont had been standing in the center of the room . . . at times gazing pensively out over the rain spattered reservoir in Central Park. The cream-colored walls, several pots of spring flowers, including a growing sprig of apple blossoms, and a cozy arrangement of many pieces of furniture gave the room a cheerful appearance on even so drab a day.

Huge gilt andirons stood before the fire place, in which logs and kindlings were laid. The mantel was of green and black marble. A mirror, upon which was painted a strange blue-crested tropical bird, dominated one end of the room. Pictures by Millet, Meissonier and V. Capobianchi hung on the walls. A copy of Gertrude Stein's "Four Saints in Three Acts" lay on one table, Walt Whitman's "November Boughs" on another, and on a third was P. de Nolhac's "Francois Boucher," bound in blue embossed Morocco leather. . . .

We are entirely out of sympathy with the idea of having only one book on each table. We are further apprehensive concerning the possible influence of Gertrude Stein—wondering the while what the researchers of the Research Council might think of her effect on the mind of youth.

"SUCCESS"

BIG lank Karl Dane, who marched into fame and filmy fortune in "The Big Parade" to the tune of "you'll never get rich you ——— you're in the army now," stepped off the oblivion end of Hollywood last Saturday night, a penniless, hopeless relict of the silent drama. The microphone did not like his voice. "Success" gave him $1,200 a week and took everything.

SILENT VS. SOUND

An interesting Kansas City experiment, conducted by W. D. Fulton at the Colonial and Southtown: showing a combination of a current film and a famous silent on one program. Billed as the "world premiere of Silent vs. Sound," public reaction was found favorable. The original organ score accompanied the showing of "Beau Geste," selected as representative of the silent era. . . .

Succeeding Richard C. L. Moncure as director of the Virginia state division of motion picture censorship, Edwin S. Reid has been named. It has been decided to rotate the directorship among the three censors, Mr. Moncure, Mr. Reid and Mrs. Elizabeth Churchill Chalkley, who have been reappointed by the state attorney general. "THE PUBLIC BE DAMNED"

By MARTIN QUIGLEY

A VASTLY destructive practice which has long been tolerated is the arrangement under which a great part of all theatre audiences are allowed—or compelled—to see pictures not from the start but from some medium point on to the end and then, after viewing intervening material, are returned to observe the opening scenes.

No one denies that this is not the right way to see pictures. The exhibitor advances the exigencies of theatre operation as the reason for the maintenance of the system. But irrespective of the problem which confronts the theatreman, the system is so thoroughly wrong that every possible effort should be made to find and supply a remedy.

The so-called continuous performance is a heritage of the nascent days of the business. In those days of one and two reel subjects there was no problem. There was little or nothing in the way of continuity to what then passed for stories. Characterization as it is now understood was years away into the future. It made but little difference, as far as enjoyment of the show was concerned, at what point the patron entered. With the coming of the feature length subject and finally with the dawn of talking pictures the old continuous performance arrangement was followed mechanically in virtually all theatres.

Before the advent of sound, pictures under this arrangement were always hurt in some degree but the evil in its fully destructive character only becomes apparent in the case of the modern talking pictures.

Many of these subjects which appeared to have had the needed elements of popular appeal have gone out to stark and unmitigated failure. Plenty of reasons are, after the fact, advanced to account for these failures, but seldom if ever is it realized that many talking motion pictures must be seen unfolded in accordance with the producer's plan — and not from the middle on to the end and then back to the start — if they are to have any possible chance of rendering public satisfaction. Economic conditions, the type of story, the personalities and many other elements are pointed out as reasons for poor business. But in many cases it is a demonstrable fact that pictures have failed with the public simply because the continuity and story-building, elaborately and studiously provided, together with carefully delineated characterization, are lost upon the public. Consequently subjects which would have been successful had they been seen as the producer intended turn out to be failures.

The modern talking motion picture cannot be so constructed as to permit patrons to drop in at the middle without having great damage done. It is impossible to meet with characters who have been built up during preceding reels and understand them as the writer, director and producer intended. Many stories entered into in the middle are hopeless jumbles. We have never heard of anyone getting real enjoyment out of a novel, however fine, were it picked up, read from the middle to the end and then back to the opening chapters. Yet this is the manner in which millions of patrons regularly see motion pictures.

Millions of dollars are spent annually in story construction. Stories are written and rewritten, labored over unceasingly so that there will be a definition of character which will enable the audience to understand and live with the personality being depicted. When the effect of this is lost, as it must be when the patron takes his seat after the defining scenes and sequences have passed, it is no wonder indeed that the patron is not impressed.

No person who wished to enjoy a stage play or even learn something of its quality would think of coming in at the middle of the second act. He would realize instinctively that if he is to enjoy the play or know it, it is imperative for him to see the play from the opening scenes. There is no dramatic or literary creation of any kind which is subjected to the enormous disadvantage under which the talking motion picture constantly labors in this respect.

We insist that it is quite pointless to raise the cry of better product when the product we already have is being shown in a manner which reduces so vastly its value. We further point out the absurdity of constantly blaming a lot of extraneous causes as being accountable for failures at the box office when we know that many, if not all, of the subjects in question have not been shown in a manner which gave them a fair chance of rendering satisfaction.

It is true that certain types of pictures suffer relatively little when not seen from the beginning; there are others which have very little chance of being even intelligible to an audience when seen in this way. An example of this latter type is "Berkeley Square." If one wishes to discover how little chance this subject had of pleasing anyone if not seen from the beginning he might well try the experiment of looking at it from the third or fourth reel to the end and then going back to the opening scenes. If he does this he will then be seeing the picture as millions of the public saw it and he will no longer wonder why part of the public liked it and another part considered it a brainstorm or just a poor picture. This was not a subject of universal appeal but it is distinctly typical in this respect of a large number of subjects which obviously have little or no chance of satisfying the public if not seen in the proper routine.

Among the many inquiries now being conducted with a view to righting the affairs of the industry here is one question of obviously compelling importance about which little or nothing has recently been said.

In Hollywood, where its output is so severely handicapped by the prevailing practice, the existence of the evil is scarcely realized. If it were realized there would be much less wonderment about the failure at the box office of certain types of subjects.

In the whole avalanche of trade-wide discussion of what's wrong with the business and how to make it right, which has descended upon us particularly since the opening of code conferences, we have not seen a single written notice of this question, nor have we heard it mentioned. Apparently it is assumed that the routine does not do violence to pictures—which is manifestly wrong — or else it is assumed that the routine cannot be changed. Or perhaps everyone has forgotten just how pictures are shown to the public.

The position of the exhibitor is well known, at least the position which he has assumed when, in the past, the question was raised. He has insisted that his attendance would be materially lessened if patrons came to the theatre by appointment rather than approaching at any time that suited their convenience. Also that to advertise the starting hour of the feature, or the principal feature, held down patronage because if the hour did not appear convenient many people would forego coming to the theatre. In addition—and probably the main reason—that the capacity would be overtaxed for the one show starting at the most popular hour, resulting in small attendance at other hours and for the day as a unit less business. A brief summary of these several reasons may be crystallized in the phrase, "The public be damned."

Our examination of the question is not, however, based at this moment on solicitude for the public's welfare. We are considering the industry's welfare and there can be nothing that makes for industry welfare that does not concurrently make for the welfare of the theatre. If the routine now being followed in a vast number of theatres minimizes the entertainment value of a large number of the pictures shown, it is primarily to the best interests of the theatres to see that it is changed. It may very well be a case of fooling the public but at the same time fooling the exhibitor, with very serious consequences to the latter.

"THE PUBLIC BE DAMNED"

Available records indicate an enormous daily total of telephone calls to theatres inquiring the time of starting of the feature picture. Instead of these inquiries being tolerated largely as a necessary evil, they should impress the exhibitor with thundering emphasis that he is failing in his job, that he is putting customers to a lot of effort which works against attendance.

Every merchant should make his goods as readily and as easily available to his customers as possible. Theatre patrons are entitled to be told when the feature starts and should not be left to the task of ferreting out the information. Yet exhibitors generally refuse steadfastly to advertise the starting hour of their features, continuing intent upon maintaining the grind idea which was born with the nickelodeon and should have died with it. As a matter of fact, there is no good reason why all performances in all theatres should not start at stated hours which patrons could learn once and for all time. This could be done through the simple and proper device of adding or dropping short subjects as required by the length of features to make shows of uniform duration.

Finally, the present theatre routine is a thoroughly destructive practice. Many pictures which might otherwise render satisfaction to the public and consequently profit to the industry are made inevitable failures. In this respect the industry is not serving the public's interest or its own.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD invites the industry to think about this question and—more appropriately—to do something about it.

Lewin Foresees Filmed Classics

Classics of American and English literature, shown as screen dramas, achieved in a new era of motion picture production, were forecast last week by William Lewin, of Newark, chairman of the committee on photoplay appreciation of the National Council of English Teachers. He addressed a round table discussion held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Westchester County Teachers Association at White Plains, N. Y.

Mr. Lewin mentioned a list of 28 classics which may be filmed, including "Joan of Arc," "Pride and Prejudice," "What Every Woman Knows," "Vanity Fair," "David Copperfield," "Gulliver's Travels." He declared that pupils and teachers are largely responsible for the new policy of film companies, and urged a federal government subsidy for the production, distribution and perhaps exhibition of educational films to carry the program still further.

"Less than 200 of the more than 100,000 school auditoriums in the nation are equipped with talking picture apparatus," Mr. Lewin said. "If the government supplies a constant flow of educational films, even giving 'talkie' lessons in geography and poetry, every auditorium soon will have the necessary equipment to show them."

Warner Wins "Gold Diggers" Appeal from Majestic Pictures

Warner this week won an appeal decision against Majestic Pictures Corporation and Capitol Film Exchange, Inc., regarding the use of the title "Gold Diggers" in a motion picture. According to the circuit court of appeals decision, no company but Warner can use the title "Gold Diggers," for a motion picture release.

The action was brought by Warner some time ago when Majestic announced the release of a motion picture entitled "Gold Diggers of Paris." Warner has previously issued pictures containing the following variations of the "Gold Diggers" title: "Gold Diggers" (a silent film), "Gold Diggers of Broadway" and "Gold Diggers of 1933." The decision reversed that of the district court. Morris Ebenstein, of Warner's legal department, acted for the plaintiff-appellant.

National Screen Declares Dividend

At a meeting of the board of directors last week National Screen Service Corporation declared a cash dividend of 40 cents per share on the 61,893 shares outstanding, payable May 1 to stockholders of record April 20. The company announcement declares that this payment "is not to be construed as establishing a dividend basis or policy for the future."

Blumenthal Home Burns

Fire destroyed the $300,000 residence of A. C. Blumenthal at Larchmont, N. Y. last week. Mr. Blumenthal was not at home at the time. The cause of the fire was unknown.

Phelps Junior Actors' Head

Lee Phelps has been reelected president of the Junior Screen Actors' Guild at Hollywood without opposition. Tom O'Grady was reelected vice-president and Edwin Baker treasurer.

Four Film Bills In New York Are Killed In Week

Legislative activities in the field during the past week affecting the motion picture industry centered chiefly in Albany, where the New York state legislature, in Assembly committees, killed four film bills, of which three were censorship measures.

Among them was the Breitbard measure, designed as an amendment to the state penal and education laws. It provided for special censorship for pictures planned for showing to children under 16 years and for special licenses for theatres showing such films. A similar bill subsequently introduced by Senator Thomas F. Burchard provided for admission of children under 16 outside of school hours when enabling ordinances have been passed by cities, towns or villages, but with matrons on duty in the theatre. Special annual $5 license fees would be charged these theatres.

The other bills included the two Neustein measures designed to repeal the censorship provisions of the education law and transfer administration of its tax provisions to the state comptroller. These two were considered unconstitutional and were killed in the ways and means committee. The Brownell censorship measure, designed to end censorship and transfer the tax provisions of the state education law to the state tax department was similarly dropped.

In Columbus last week the three per cent sales tax bill was defeated in the House for the third time within a year. Defeat of the measure removes the possibility of an early repeal of the 10 per cent admission tax.

At Dover, Delaware, passage of a bill to create a board of censors and to bar divorced actors and actresses, which has caused considerable comment, was reported to be extremely doubtful despite the fact that it was reported favorably in the House.

The Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Delaware and the Eastern Shore of Maryland, Loew's, Inc., and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., will oppose the bill when it comes up for a hearing.

Brandts Add Six Houses

Harry and William Brandt have added six houses to their circuit of 16 in the New York metropolitan area. The acquisitions are the Dewey, Lakeland, Werber and Booth in Brooklyn, and the Times Square and St. Marks in Manhattan.

Fire Razes Kentucky House

The Hippodrome, 2-000-seat de luxe house in Newport, Ky., was completely destroyed by fire last week. The loss, covered by insurance, was estimated at $100,000.

George Armstrong Dead

George Armstrong, at one time manager of National Theatre Supply Company's Cleveland office, died at his home in Deleware, O., last week.

'OUGHT TO TICK-TOCK ON THE SCREEN'

Says DeCasseres of "House of Remsen," Current Offering on Broadway Stage; And "Brain Sweat" He Calls One of the Most Amusing Comedies of the Season

By BENJAMIN DeCASSERES

HOUSE OF REMSEN

The author of this play, which features James Kirkwood, old star of the silents, of course knew that this would be a Hollywood program natural, which, indeed, it is. It is not one of the worst plays of the season and it is certainly far from being the best, but it contains two or three scenes of gripping and tense dramatic values that ought to tick-tock for all they are worth on the screen.

"House of Remsen" contains also, for a picture, great snivel value. It hit the ladies to my left, on the second night, right plop into their handkerchiefs. Kirkwood as a well-to-do business man who finds his wife unfaithful and is told by her dying lover that his male child is illegitimate, only to have the fellow (who didn't die) return in the last act ten years afterward and prove to him that it is the girl who is illegitimate, and not the boy—Kirkwood, in spite of that rasping voice of his, did a convincing and sound bit of work.

The scene in the hospital where Remsen extracts the "confession" from Stokes, the lover (Mrs. Remsen having just died in an automobile accident while riding with Stokes) is one angle that ought to register big on the screen. The other is a smashing scene between the father and the son, who has just been bounced from Harvard for an affair with an under-age girl. Remsen, believing the boy is Stokes', take it out on the unsuspecting kid.

The authors of this play, Nicholas Soussanin, William J. Perlman and Marie Baumer, were not up to the theme. "House of Remsen" is padded like a speech on the tariff and sprawls like an elephant glutted with peanuts. But it contains, with a strong cast, good program picture material.

BRAIN SWEAT

This comedy of Negro life down in Mississippi, by John Charles Brownell, with a Negro cast—with the exception of one character—is one of the best, one of the most amusing comedies of the season. It is simple in construction, clean, conveys no "message" and, for picture purposes (and why not?) contains romance, pathos, laughter and suspense from first to last—the suspense of comic situations, not the old creeping-menace suspense.

The story centers around Billy Higgins, who sits in a rocking-chair while his wife and son work for him. For Billy had found a book. Its philosophy is "You is what yo' is!" So Billy is evolving vast schemes in his head by merely "dreamin' 'em," according to the book.

He is razzed and nertzed by his wise-cracking sister-in-law, pitied as a delusion-sick man by his wife, just tolerated by his high-stakes dice-throwing brother-in-law, and hardly understood by his son, who has lost his job fighting "fur his lazy pa." The boy has, incidentally, got a little gal in trouble.

Billy is finally told by his enduring wife, in a rage, to go drown himself. He apparently does so. There are a wake, some fine spirituals, and an empty coffin and his hat (found on the river bank) are buried.

But Billy shows up in a new brown derby, with a watch and chain and a brand-new suit just after the "funeral."

His dreaming comes true. He has outsmarted the local steamship company (that had discharged him) for $10,000, for, says Billy, "I is what I is!" The Big Bad Wolf is the white lawyer of the steamship company.

The dialogue is good, the laughter of the audience was continuous, and after the false psychology of these simple people is deleted, I can see in this a fine new-kind of screen comedy with spirituals. There is a part for Step'n Fetchit as the no-good friend of Billy's that was always hanging around. Here is more of that domestic folk-lore matter for the screen that fits in with the "find America first" slogan of the editor of Motion Picture Herald.

Play Ratings For the Screen

Benjamin DeCasseres, noted essayist and critic, gives the Broadway plays reviewed by him in this issue the following percentages as potential screen material:

"House of Remsen"—90 per cent.
"Brain Sweat"—70 per cent.
"Moor Born"—60 per cent.
"The Mikado"—100 per cent.
"One More Honeymoon"—"40 degrees below zero."

MOOR BORN

The name of this play by Dan Totheroh sounds like a picture title for "Othello," but it is no such thing. It is the story (or a story, for a raft of them, I'm told, is on the way) of the three famous Brontë sisters, their drunken, drug-nutty brother and the Rev. Patrick Brontë, the father. Besides which there is the best wind-machine for moor-wailing I have ever heard, and I know what's what in wind-yowling, for I have lived on Riverside Drive in the winter time.

The character of Emily Brontë, the one real genius of this remote, almost incestuous family, is a natural for Hepburn. She will do it sooner or later, and no doubt the show (which will not, I think, be of Totheroh origin) will register as big as "Men and Women."

The Totheroh saga of the authors of "Jane Eyre" and "Wuthering Heights" is dark, gloomy, dull and bloodless in spite of the hard work of Helen Gahagan (Emily), Edith Barrett (Anne), Frances Starr (Charlotte) and the godawful exhibition by Glenn Anders of the continuously pie-eyed and screamingly maudlin "genius," Branwell Brontë, who is, to boot, in love with his sister Emily with more than brotherly affection. This affection is returned by Emily. Branwell dies of original genius' d. t.'s in Emily's arms. Nothing like it since the closing of Jack's Sixth avenue boozerie!

When it reaches the screen it will become a strong seller in the Weeping Willow Belt, which is not far away from Broadway.

Picture value, 60 per cent.

THE MIKADO

Mr. Hays is battling, I note, for "higher-toned" pictures. He says the time is now ripe for Shakespeare. Maybe—but he will have to be edited for the screen. "Macbeth" could be made a picture natural. We have seen Hamlet in modern clothes. I have done it in modern dialogue.

Shakespeare aside, what's the matter, Mr. Hays, with the Gilbert and Sullivan operas? The answer is, maybe, Japan wouldn't like "The Mikado" and England wouldn't like "Pinafore." I do not believe it for a moment. "Pinafore" has been played in England thousands of times and Japan doesn't need to buy "The Mikado." There is too much film-censorship by "friendly (!?!) countries." I often wonder who owns the studios.

Well, I saw "The Mikado" again in the revival by S. M. Chartock. It is the forty-seventh time I have seen this perfect opera, and I hold this truth to be self-evident, that anything I can enjoy for forty-seven performances would make a smash picture-hit.

"The Mikado," with a raft of popular and competent singers, will make the shekels bloom in the spring (and the other three seasons) tra-la for some courageous producer.

And what an excuse for a color souse!

Picture value, 100 per cent.

ONE MORE HONEYMOON

Some plays (and pictures also) are so incredibly rotten that they fascinate me. There is a psychology of brainlessness, which study has its rewards, like dissecting mentally a house guest (of whom the late Frank Wilstach said, "a house guest is like a dead fish: after three days he begins to stink").

Well, this dead fish is "One More Honeymoon," by Leo F. Reardon. But it began to give off whiffs after the first half hour. The critics, many hardened to the stenches of thirty-six-hour poker games in the back rooms of old booze-joints, began to crawl out into the open. But I stuck. I was amply rewarded by seeing wid me own eyes the the worst play of any season, with no more picture value than what Bugs Baer would call je ne sais quoi.

SEPARATION OF HEARST, FOX REELS CONFIRMED

Metrotone to Form Own Staff; Gradual Reduction in Sound Crews by All Companies Is Underway to Cut Overhead

Official confirmation of the separation of Hearst Metrotone News from Fox Movietone was made this week by Edgar B. Hatrick, Hearst representative. The contract between the two companies expires in September, and from that time on the Hearst reel will be produced by its own news gathering organization, with Mike Clofine, editor of the reel during the Fox-Hearst production arrangement, continuing in his present capacity.

Preparation involving the organization of the new Hearst reel, which necessitates the lining up of cameramen throughout the world, will be carried on during the next six months, Mr. Hatrick said. At the same time he indicated no important changes in policy would be made, declaring that sound truck crews would be used and that semi-weekly issues would be released through MGM as at present.

Hearst Metrotone and Fox Movietone newsreels have been produced jointly since the Fox reel started, more than four years ago. In the early days of the arrangement they were controlled by the Fox-Hearst Corporation, in which Hearst is reported to have had a 25 per cent stock interest with an option on an additional 24 per cent. This arrangement was modified more than a year ago, and a new agreement signed when Movietonews Inc., was formed.

Plan Sound Crew Reductions

Concurrent with the official announcement of the Fox-Hearst split came indications from newsreel organizations that gradual reduction of sound truck crews is underway and may result in eventual maintenance of sound crews in New York, Washington, Chicago and Los Angeles only, these constituting the nation's four chief news centers.

The necessity for economies, due to the fact that newsreel rentals have decreased during the past two years to a point where drastic reductions in operating overhead have become imperative, is given as the chief reason for the projected move.

Future news coverage in cities other than the four mentioned may be handled almost entirely by correspondents without sound equipment, and where events requiring sound occur, plans are being discussed for "covering" the events by transporting portable sound apparatus by airplane.

"Associated Press" Rejected Year Ago

About a year ago the newsreel organizations rejected as impractical a proposal to set up an "Associated Press" for newsreel coverage. This central agency would have served all five newsreels, eliminating duplication of coverage on the greatest possible number of happenings and thus contributing appreciably to economies in the overhead of each of the five reels.

With the necessity of economies persisting, if not actually increasing, during the past year, however, the reels were obliged to find other means of lowering overhead. Universal, with its economical system of silent camera coverage and dubbed voice, appears to have pointed the way. During the past year the absence of actual sound in the Universal reel has not hampered its sales and its low cost of production enabled distribution at low rentals.

Cameramen - Correspondents Employed

While Pathe, Paramount, Fox and Hearst Metrotone are not considering complete elimination of sound crews, all have been making some reductions, with a corresponding increase in material from cameramen-correspondents working without sound. Such cameramen, it has been pointed out, can handle their equipment to far greater advantage in certain situations and can achieve camera angles superior to those possible by crews encumbered with sound equipment.

Fred Quimby, MGM short subject sales manager, this week blamed exhibitors for much of the newsreels' difficulties, saying that they have failed to advertise them properly. Newsreel costs are now approximately 400 per cent higher than in the silent days, he said.

A. T. & T. Sells Half of Holdings In Loew's Stock

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company this week sold one-half of its 260,000-share holdings in Loew's, Inc. The stock had been acquired in December by A. T. & T. in return for its $8,000,000 equity in the defaulted notes of Flm Securities Corporation.

The remaining 130,000 shares of Loew stock held by A. T. & T. are to be disposed of in small blocks on the open market, the corporation's intention being to relinquish entirely its holdings in Loew's. The corporation's officials recently stated that A. T. & T. has no intention of permanently retaining an interest in any film company.

The Loew stock, comprising 660,000 shares all told, had been posted as collateral on Film Securities' notes for $18,000,000, and, with the default of the notes, the stock was sold at auction, bid in by noteholders who turned in their Film Securities notes for it. In addition to the stock received by A. T. & T., Chase National Bank, Dillon, Read & Company, and Hayden, Stone & Company held 260,000 shares together, also acquired as a result of the Film Securities note default. These three financial houses disposed of their holdings some time ago in conformance with national banking laws and a federal court ruling in New York last December which required the banks to release the Loew securities within a reasonable time to avoid infringement of the anti-trust laws.

A block of 140,000 of the Loew shares went to small, scattered accounts.

British-Gaumont plans an office in Chicago, supplementing those in New York and Los Angeles. Abe Fisher, in charge of circuit bookings at the New York office, is expected to take charge in Chicago.

MPTOA WINS PRODUCERS' PLEDGE TO RESTRICT "OFF COLOR" MATERIAL

Convention Empowers Officials to Start Machinery to Bar Double Featuring Wherever Possible; Ask Better Product

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America left Hollywood and their 14th annual convention insisting, confidentially, that they have finally convinced the production potentates that off-color motion pictures do not pay, and that it would be far better for all if questionable pictorial material and double-meaning dialogue be eliminated hereafter in all product intended for "family night" and Sunday consumption.

Furthermore, a delegation of the most representative of the MPTOA strategists boarded the train homeward with a definite promise from a delegation of the most representative of Hollywood's producers that off-color gags and questionable dialogue, subtle or otherwise, will be number one on the list of production "don'ts," at least insofar as those pictures are concerned which are widely used by theatre owners in the field for the family.

Whispered discussions emanating through the transom of a conference chamber in the Beverley-Wilshire Hotel in Hollywood, where the exhibitor and producer representatives had gathered for a private talk on Monday, indicated that, perhaps for the first time on record, the guardians of the box-office had convinced the celluloid creators that salaciousness not only adds nothing to the gross income as a whole, but actually causes quite some trouble—as attested by the unfriendly sentiment now existing in certain important religious quarters.

Titles which entered into the discussion were: "State Fair," "George White's Scandals," "Wonder Bar" and "Twenty Million Sweethearts."

Typical producer convention comment: "The exhibitors made Hollywood realize there was some one else around."—Jack Warner.

It appears that the keynote of the exhibitors' argument was that the public wants "adult" pictures as well as family-types, but they don't want the two combined in one production.

Double Featuring Criticized

Several hundred exhibitors attended the convention. According to the MPTOA convention arrangers they represented some 4,000 theatres.

The delegates spent the convention mornings telling producers what's wrong with production, and listening to producers telling exhibitors what's wrong with exhibition. There was some discussion about the code and labor and off-color advertising. Afternoons and evenings were devoted to social life, the producers playing host.

Double featuring was given probably the most severe denunciation of any exhibition policy, a heated discussion ending in adoption of a resolution empowering the officials to start the machinery which would end the practice.

The producer-exhibitor conference on Monday is understood to have agreed that doubles must go, but no definite plan was adopted.

The usual resolutions about the usual convention subjects were passed, highlighted by a motion, carried with lusty "ayes," demanding a 15 per cent cancellation clause to replace the present 10 per cent privilege in the code, and this instead of abolishing block booking.

While the moral tone of motion pictures and the screen tastes of the public were probably the two most important subjects discussed by the producers and exhibitors at their private Monday conference—which had been called at the suggestion of Louis B. Mayer, in charge of MGM production—the conferees devoted much of the time to developing the machinery for gathering first-hand information from the public which can be used by the studios to gauge public tastes. They adopted a plan for establishing a direct contact between theatre owners and producers, with exhibitor leaders of the MPTOA compiling an analysis every two or three months, to be sent directly to Hollywood, probably through the Coast offices of the MPPDA.

The conference also discussed the advisability of reducing quantity production in favor of quality, with producers reputedly agreeing that there appears to be no point to "grind" production.

Meeting Prolonged Two Days

Opening at the Ambassador Hotel on Tuesday morning, April 10, the convention was scheduled to adjourn late Thursday, but as a result of the steady round of brilliant studio parties, barbecues, buffets and beer festivals staged for the delegates by the large studios, and lengthy studio inspection tours, the committee in charge was compelled to prolong the business sessions through the week until late Saturday, in order to complete the delivery of scheduled reports and resolutions.

Following the reelection of Ed Kuykendall as president, as announced last week, the exhibitors elected a nationwide executive committee composed of Mr. Kuykendall, Major Leslie Thompson, RKO, representing affiliated theatres, and the following from regional zones: Jules H. Michael, New York; Oscar Lam, Georgia; Jack Miller, Illinois; Sidney Lust, Washington; Charles E. Williams, Nebraska.

The new board of trustees includes: Mr. Kuykendall, Walter Vincent, M. E. Comerford and Charles Picquet, for the independents; E. A. Schiller, Sam Dembow and Leslie Thompson, representing affiliated theatres.

Delegates and Producers at Round-Table

For the first time on record, an executive committee of the MPTOA sat down at a national convention with producers in Hollywood and talked about mutual problems.

Warning that "We came out here to talk sensibly about our problems and to interest producers in listening to what their buyers require," Ed Kuykendall accepted the challenge of Louis B. Mayer, MGM, that exhibitors rotate in committee with studio heads to discuss market needs.

Early on Monday, an exhibitor delegation composed of Mr. Kuykendall, Jack Miller, Fred Wehrenberg, Oscar Lam, Jules Michael, M. A. Lightman, Sidney Lust and Charles E. Williams, met behind closed doors at the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel for the first conference with the producers, who were represented by Mr. Mayer, Irving Thalberg, Eddie Mannix, Winfield Sheehan, Al Kaufman, Samuel Briskin, Fred Beetson and Joseph I. Breen.

On Tuesday, the exhibitors met a delegation representing the Independent Motion Picture Producers' Association, with the same basic ideas of exhibition-production cooperation in mind as those outlined at the meeting with the large producers.

Plan for Direct Contact with Studios Calls for Periodic Forwarding of Analyses of Public Tastes by Exhibitors to Coast

At the independents' conference, held at the Ambassador Hotel, the exhibitors further discussed the subjects which highlighted the Monday meeting with the large producers. Present at the independents' meeting, for the exhibitors were: Ed Kuykendall, M. E. Comerford, M. A. Lightman, Walter Vincent and Charles E. Williams, while independent producers were represented by Trem Carr, head of the IMPPA and vice-president of Monogram; I. E. Chadwick, vice-president of the IMPPA and president of Chadwick Productions, and J. Boyce Smith, vice-president of Inspiration Pictures.

Double featuring was said to have been opposed and it was reported that sentiment was that independents must be encouraged to make better product.

The MPTOA conferees repeated their opinion that independents have a definite place because of the necessity of new and independent ideas in production. The exhibitors again went on record for fewer pictures.

Kuykendall Explains New Move

On behalf of the exhibitors and the large producers, Mr. Kuykendall issued the following joint statement explaining the movement to effect a closer understanding:

"Producers have invited the fullest possible comment and criticism of their product and exhibitors have agreed to supply this. The plan provides for the gathering of information by theatre managers based upon audience reaction to pictures in all parts of the country, analysis of such information and submitting of a summary to producers.

"Considerable discussion dealing with what was termed good taste in production was carried on and the fullest possible cooperation on the part of an all-industry effort to keep the screen free from offenses.

"The menace of double features and other cut-throat methods of theatre operation and their effect on production of high quality pictures also were discussed. It was agreed the general public wants quality rather than quantity in its entertainment and an understanding was reached pledging both theatre owner and producer to discourage, wherever possible, the showing of two feature pictures for one admission."

Dual Bill Warfare Launched

One of the most interesting convention sessions of the week developed on Saturday afternoon, when more than a dozen leading exhibitors spoke for and against double bills. Independent producers and distributors were denounced by some and defended by others.

Previously, at the banquet on Thursday evening, Jack Warner urged the exhibitors to end doubles. Louis B. Mayer had told the convention on Wednesday that double and triple features are "ptomaine poison" on theatre-goers' appetites.

The fight against doubles started Saturday when Jack Miller, of Chicago, blamed the large theatre operators for the spread of the practice through their presentation and vaudeville policies, which, he said, compel subsequent runs to adopt duals to meet the competition.

"Independent producers and distributors have never contributed a single thing," he said. He challenged the independents' payroll statistics presented at the code parleys last summer, declaring they do not gross the money they claimed to be spending on production. "Why do we give them any consideration " he asked. "Independent production will put us out of business, if we don't quit duals. Independent producers are parasites and have no right in the industry." He pointed out that when Chicago exhibitors banned double bills, their business increased from seven to 19 per cent.

Later in Mr. Kuykendall interrupted the discussion to point out that the exhibitors did not have an argument with the independents but with their type of pictures, adding that it made no difference who produced the films, providing they were good. "The public has been returning to theatres in the last few months. Are we going to nauseate them with bad pictures?" he asked.

At this point, Mr. Miller admitted that he had made a mistake in attacking the independent producers and distributors. "I have no desire to force them out of business," he said, "but I am definitely opposed to quickies."

"What about the quickies the majors make?" interposed M. A. Lightman, former president of the MPTOA. "We're missing the principal question before us. We should inform producers we don't want 400, 500 or 600 pictures yearly until we get fewer but better pictures."

Mr. Lightman's remarks drew the support of Sidney Lust of Washington, who said: "We should have no desire to kill independents, but we should influence them to make better pictures. Why don't the first runs take the initiative by increasing admissions and by not giving the public too much for its money. That would eliminate the necessity for independent showmen to compete by going dual."

Walter Vincent of New York agreed with Mr. Lust. He said that exhibitors should inform the distributors that they will drop programs with two features if the distributors will not sell to five and 10-cent theatres.

Resolve Against Doubles

Out of the fiery discussion of double bills came a resolution unequivocally protesting against the policy, together with a petition from the delegates to the Code Authority in New York to instruct the local code boards in the field to compile zoning schedules firstly on the basis of admission prices. This, it was said, would check duals on the theory that exhibitors showing duals and charging 20 cents are really charging 10 cents. Ten-cent exhibitors, then, would be placed further down the line.

In New York, the independent distributor members of the Federation of the Motion Picture Industry were angered by the reports from the Coast of the MPTOA's attitude toward double features, and the various remarks about independents. A meeting was held Wednesday when the attacks were discussed and the organization began preparation of an answer.

Sixteen Other Resolutions Carry

On Friday afternoon, the resolutions committee took the floor to publicly record in the form of a set of resolutions the decisions and the attitude of the convention on certain topics.

Block Booking-Cancellations

This resolution opposes any attempts to prohibit by law the practice of block booking, because "theatres cannot afford to pay higher film rentals to compensate for the substantial increase in distribution costs inevitable in small quantity sales, nor should the quality of pictures be cheapened to offset such an increase in distribution costs," and, therefore, as an alternative, the MPTOA favors a reasonable rejection privilege in all contracts and urges that exhibitors be given the right to exclude 15 per cent of the total number of pictures bought in groups of 10 or more, instead of the 10 per cent privilege now contained in the code.

Motion Picture Code

The MPTOA went on record to support the government in its efforts to promulgate the motion picture code, and to cooperate in its functioning so that errors of omission or commission can be remedied by proper review, and by periodic improvement, eliminate the long standing abuses of the industry.

Discriminating Photoplays

A movement was favored in this resolution to cooperate with theatre patrons in facilitating the individual selection of pictures according to the taste and preference of the patron.

Non-Theatricals

The MPTOA petitioned the Code Authority requesting that the present two conflicting non-theatrical code clauses be revised so that unfair non-theatrical competition be specifically eliminated.

"Cut-Throat" Competition

The MPTOA pledges that its affiliated state groups will supplement the code and cooperate in forcing the "chiselers" into line to eliminate unscrupulous "cut-throat" competition, "which is a bane to exhibition."

Radio Audiences

The organization voiced "firm" opposition to the continuance of the practice of large audiences attending broadcasts in theatres or assembly halls, and, further, it requests the Government and the Federal Radio Commission to forbid this practice.

Family-Type Audiences

This resolution demanded all producers give serious consideration to the production of more family-type pictures and to desist from incorporating therein any offensive scenes or dialogue, the lack of family-type pictures and the introduction of obscenities having subjected "the innocent exhibitor to constant criticism and has built up an antagonistic community feeling."

Score Charges

"Score charges are neither reasonable nor necessary," and, too, because certain distributors have definitely ceased attempting to collect these charges, they should be immediately abolished, the convention resolved.

Theatre Fire Insurance Rates

"Resolved, that the MPTOA demands that the Fire Underwriters' Association revamp downward premiums for fire insurance on theatres, and that our present (Mr. Kuykendall) be authorized to take such steps as may be necessary to carry out this purpose and protect the interests of the theatre owners and/or operators."

Salacious Advertising

Because the MPTOA "stands for clean, uniform advertising of photoplay-exhibition," the organization petitioned all exhibitors, for their individual benefit, and the benefit of the industry as a whole, to refrain from any advertising or exploitation salacious in its character or terminology. General hardships of hostile state, municipal or federal legislation "must be the inevitable consequence of a continuation" of the offensive practice of using salacious ads.

Sex-Hygiene Pictures

The MPTOA pledged itself not to exhibit so-called sex-hygiene pictures, and, further, when called upon, to take an aggressive stand in opposition to their production and distribution.

National Vaudeville Artists

The convention commended the efforts, aims and purposes of the NVA, and promised such reasonable aid and assistance as it or its members shall be called upon to contribute, including permission to the NVA to conduct its usual annual collections in member theatres, beginning April 27.

Gangster Films

The MPTOA voted against a continuance of gangster films.

"Star Scandal" Publicity

Press agents were called upon to avoid publicity involving stars in scandal or in hoaxes.

Music Copyright

The MPTOA voted opposition to a bill by Senator Cutting of New Mexico inviting the United States to become a member of the International Copyright Conference at Berne. It was declared on the convention floor by Sidney Lust, exhibitor of Washington, that this federal proposal would extend automatic copyright control to all foreign music reproduced in this country and would give the ASCAP a wedge in increasing the present music seat tax on theatres.

Wehrenberg on Community Affairs

Fred Wehrenberg, Missouri, explained to the MPTOA delegates the nationwide network of reviewing committees of women's clubs, citing the existence of 2,500 motion picture chairmen in the General Federation as one example.

Hays, Giannini Talk at Banquet

A thousand or more exhibitors and their relatives and friends, stars, directors, producers and salesmen attended the annual MPTOA banquet at the Ambassador Hotel on Thursday evening.

Dr. A. H. Giannini, noted motion picture banker, strongly urged the development of a spirit of real cooperation between the exhibitors and the producers. He said that such a spirit is not only good business, it is necessary.

Will Rogers was master of ceremonies, and Will H. Hays was one of the principal speakers, pleading with those who control the box-office of the nation to assume full responsibility for their work "because the motion picture business is one of the greatest industries in the world."

"A single fall from the standard of production, exhibition or distribution, or advertising, may set the echoes rolling from coast to coast," Mr. Hays said.

The Code and Labor Discussed

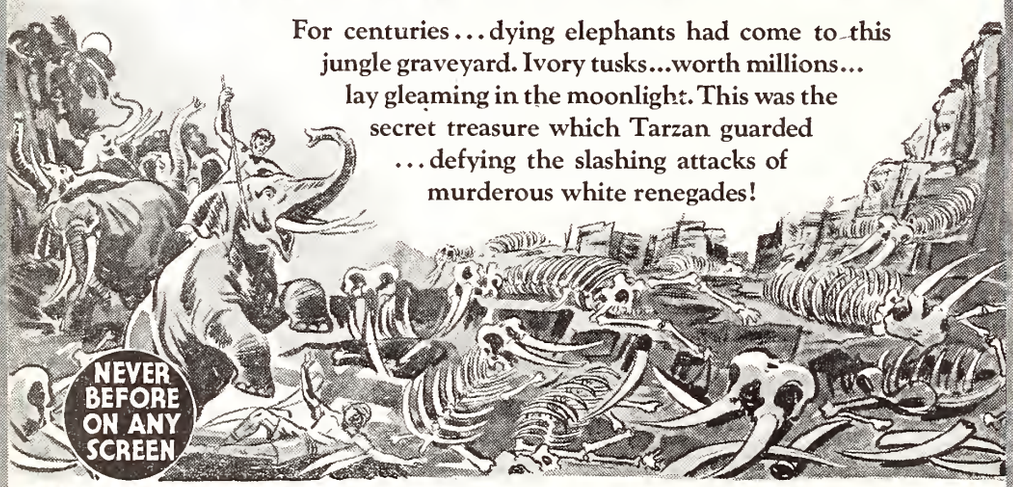
Some of the early convention addresses, delivered last Tuesday and Wednesday, were reported in last week's issue of Motion Picture Herald.

Later in the week, Mr. W. L. Ainsworth, of the Garrick Theatre, Fond du Lac, Wis., explained "What the Code Means to the Country Town Exhibitor." He said in part:

"We are unionized to death, union scrubwomen, union ushers, union operators, union ticket takers. Everything is union, "even our underwear. . . ."

Following Mr. Ainsworth, Mr. Morgan Walsh, of the Redwood-Midland Theatres, San Francisco, outlined the significance of the code to the socalled "metropolitan" exhibitor.

At this point, Walter Vincent of New York told "What's the Matter with Production from the Point of View of An Exhibitor."



Jack Miller of Chicago urged the delegates to organize "against" labor.

BLOCK BOOKING MUST GO, DECLARES LOWELL

Tells Boston Unit of Research Council It's Bad Practice; Reverend Short, Mrs. Belmont and Forman Also Speak

William H. Short's Motion Picture Research Council—which aims to improve the moral tone of the motion picture by abolishing blind and block booking—settled in Boston, last Saturday, in line with a plan to expand the movement from its present central headquarters in New York, up and down the Atlantic Seaboard.

At the same time, from Kansas City in the midwest, there was heard the voice of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, warning that that national organization will not relinquish its vigilance in its campaign for better pictures.

Lowell Decries Block Booking

Speaking before the newly organized unit of the Motion Picture Research Council, at Boston's Hotel Somerset, on Saturday, President Emeritus J. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University declared: "Block booking must go—either the producers must make the change, or they must be forced to do so."

Mr. Lowell engaged in some private warfare against block booking last winter when he and the NRA Administration at Washington locked horns in the public prints because the motion picture code was not made to control the block booking and blind buying system. As a result, Mr. Lowell refused to serve as a Government representative on the Code Authority.

400 Civic Leaders Attend

More than 400 leaders in civic life in Boston and suburbs attended the meeting last Saturday. Many took an active part. Mrs. August Belmont, of New York, president of the Council, likewise declared strongly against block booking, adding: "But if we abolish block booking tomorrow, there is still a problem awaiting us. We must know what we ourselves want before we can guide others."

Others who spoke were: Stephen Cabot, chairman of the New England committee of the Research Council; William H. Short, director of the council; Mrs. James B. Ayer, of Boston, chairman of the committee; Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. Robert J. Culbert, Mrs. Frank P. Bennett, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Frederick P. Bagley, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Dr. Francis Parkman, Mrs. Eva Whiting White, Rev. Louis Gallagher, and Mrs. Edward C. Mason.

Telegrams were received from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Louis E. Kirstein and others unable to attend, endorsing the movement for improved films.

Henry James Forman declared, "We are helping to shape a race of criminals through motion pictures."

Says Children Don't Forget

He said that children do not forget what they see in the motion pictures; that those children who seldom attend shows remember what they see and those who frequently attend are filled up with the plots of the films, adding that too many films were shown children dealing with sex, love and crime.

He told of one boy who, every Saturday, walked several miles to attend a picture theatre instead of attending one near at hand. "I want to see the shooting and kissing," the boy said when asked the reason, according to Mr. Forman.

"If we do nothing about improving pictures, we are, in effect, fostering them," he declared. "Women can have a powerful influence in changing the order of things for the better."

Demands United Front

Mrs. Belmont deplored the making of heroes and heroines out of persons who belong in the lower depths of life, which she declared are debasing not only to children but to adults as well. "Our first aim should be to prevent the production and distribution of such films," she said.

"We are here in the interest of better movies," she declared. "We want your help. We have met many difficulties and every effort has been frustrated. What we need now is a united front. We must bring together all individuals and groups interested in better movies and work together for the common good. We ask you to work with us to accomplish this aim."

President Lowell told the gathering, that "man seemingly cannot improve himself without making himself worse. We have learned many good things from motion pictures, but there are evil results, too. Children who go to movies retain what they have seen for many months. Movies cannot help but have great effect upon their sentiments. Much of this harmful effect should be stopped.

"Block booking is a bad practice. We asked the NRA to prohibit this as unfair to exhibitors. They refused. But this custom must be changed. It is in your power to exert the necessary pressure."

Dr. Short declared that "Blind buying and block booking are the keystones in the arch which must be remedied," and that "there is no officer or director of the Council who is not against it, as a bad and thoroughly mischievous practice."

"Some pictures shown in the name of entertainment belong in the clinic, the gutter and the jail," Mrs. Belmont added.

In Kansas City, the Better Films Council of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs was listening to Mrs. Richard M. McClure, national chairman of the motion picture committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who warned that while the code gives the industry an opportunity for self control, federal regulation will follow if the code fails.

"The code means that the Government has said to the industry: 'You clean yourself up or there will be bona fide federal control,'" she said. "Since the code has been in effect a short time, it is too early to tell what is going to happen, but we, as leaders of the better films movement, must not relinquish our vigilance."

LAUGHTER URGED TO KILL 'SALACIOUS' FILM

Urging the American public to "laugh" salacious motion pictures to death, Mrs. Mildred Lewis Russel, head of the better films committee of the D.A.R., submitted to the annual convention this week at Washington a report severely criticizing the present tendency of producers to turn out "going to have a baby" pictures.

Ill-timed laughter, Mrs. Russel said, will kill a picture more quickly than anything else. Good pictures may be obtained only by a continued drive for their support, she said, adding that education is better than censorship in bringing this about.

PETTIJOHN, FORMAN IN VERBAL CLASH

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, sparred verbally this week at a New York Town Hall Club luncheon with Henry James Forman, member of the Motion Picture Research Council, whose book, "Our Movie Made Children," has become virtually the guide book of the Council membership.

Mr. Forman, in the course of his speech, declared that the preponderance of sex and crime pictures produced constitute a serious menace to the morals and character of adolescents. Blind and block booking is responsible, he said. Mr. Pettijohn, at the conclusion of Mr. Forman's address, rose and expressed a decided impatience with scientific investigators who placed machines under beds of children and morons to determine reactions. Defending blind and block booking as the only practical method yet devised for the protection of the small exhibitor, Mr. Pettijohn challenged Mr. Forman to "show me a better method. The industry will take it from you and pay you for it." Cooperation of the best elements in the film industry and representative citizens was suggested by Mr. Pettijohn as a solution of the problem.

City Films, French producing company at Paris, in collaboration with Hunnia-Filmfabrik of Budapest, plans production of a feature film based on the life of Franz Liszt, famous Hungarian composer, and titled "Fantaisie Hongroise." Huffman Upholds Chatkin View Of Local Operation

Manpower is the determining factor in the success of either the circuit type or local operation of theatres, in the opinion of Harry Huffman, president and general manager of General Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Denver, in commenting on David Chatkin's recent statement in favor of local as opposed to circuit operation.

"Where manpower has been efficient the local situations have been universally more successful," said Mr. Huffman. He pointed out the value of permanency of residence as tending "to build up proper contacts and followings together with an understanding of what a community needs." One major difficulty in circuit operation is that it "suffers from too frequent a change in managers," he said.

A further advantagé of local control he indicated as "economies that may be realized only by local management and concentration on details that affect the pocketbook of the local management. Where manpower is equal," declared Mr. Huffman, "local management is found to be more successful. Otherwise it is a question of what evil may be counterbalanced by what benefit.

"A local operation receives the benefit of circuit buying power and the national pressure to obtain that which is right and equitable in the particular situation. On the other hand national buying frequently does not give the benefits to the local situation and in many cases unjustly burdens one situation to help another point for some reason or other. I know also that frequently the benefits that have been received from national buying have not been sufficient to overcome the home office overhead charges."

Trendle Agrees on Detroit Extension

George W. Trendle, of Detroit, has agreed to an extension of the time in which Paramount-Publix trustees may exercise their option to put into effect an agreement by which Mr. Trendle will operate the eight Paramount theatres in Detroit on a permanent partnership basis.

The proposal of Mr. Trendle was scheduled to have been submitted to Referee Henry K. Davis for approval early this week, but under the extension this action will not take place before July. In the interim, no proposals for operation of the Detroit houses which might be submitted by others than Mr. Trendle will be accepted by the trustees, it is understood.

Mr. Trendle was in Washington early this week after reaching an agreement in New York with the Paramount trustees on extension of the option. He is currently operating the Detroit theatres on a 10-month management contract which expires August 4. The new arrangement would make him a permanent operating partner.

BREEN GIVES VOICE

And MPPDA Coast Office Rejects Ten Pictures Since First of Year, Says New York Times Correspondent

Joe Breen pounded desks as hard as any producer in Hollywood and then Hollywood began to show a decided improvement in reducing the off-color hue of product. With that introduction, a coast correspondent, writing in the Sunday New York Times, expanded upon the activities of Joseph I. Breen, assistant to the president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and in charge of the Hollywood office.

"Hollywood is a city of desk-pounders and yellers," the New York Times correspondent explained. "A fist hammering a desk, with an accompanying resounding voice hurling colorful invectives, was certain to win over any logical reasoning. The gentlemanly disapproved of a Hays official was outshouted and overruled."

"Voice Heard for Miles"

That was the situation "as was." Then—

"Into this two years ago walked Joseph I. Breen. He was sent to Hollywood for two months to straighten out some details and has remained. He had been a newspaper man. As a Washington correspondent he had been employed by the textile interests to settle some labor disputes. Then the largest coal operators in the country employed him to establish harmony among the miners. After that he went with Mr. Hays. For two years he sat about Hollywood, doing odd jobs, pinch hitting, trouble shooting.

"Mr. Breen knew how Hollywood liked to argue. He adapted his Gaelic voice and temperament to the situation. First he started with stories. That was six months ago. He pounded desks as hard as any producer in town. His voice could be heard, on occasion, for miles, while theirs carried but for blocks.

"The studios were amazed. Could this be a Hays man? He didn't win all of his arguments, but his average was excellent. He had stories discarded or completely changed when he saw they violated censorship laws or good taste. Of course, some got by anyway."

One Held Up of 20 Reviewed

Since the first of the year the MPPDA office on the Coast has flatly rejected ten pictures, but in the past week only one of 20 previewed had to be returned for retakes, evidence, said the correspondent, that the Breen strategy was bearing fruit.

"When his suggestions on stories had been ignored and the pictures were made anyway, he battled anew," the correspondent wrote. He threw out ten features that had been completed. One was even showing in New York, so anxious had been the studios to rush things by him.

"In six cases he forced changes without resorting to any higher authority. In four the studios sought recourse in their own machinery—that of having a jury of three rival producers pass upon the questioned film. That was all right with Mr. Breen. Just so the responsibility didn't rest on him. He knew that it was doubtful that any executive who, next week, might stand before his offending rival with a questioned picture of his own, would vote to abandon an investment of several hundred thousand dollars when he would be subject to a retaliatory verdict.

"Some studios resorted to subterfuges. Incompleted pictures were shown him with innocuous descriptions of the missing scenes given. When the pictures reached New York he found offensive matter had been inserted. He dropped his fight on one picture on which a studio gave him a particularly hard battle, knowing that the censor boards would ruin the film when it reached them. The offending studio has since admitted that, with the cuts made in the East, the picture is unintelligible and probably will not make its negative cost. It was a costly victory and that studio has become one of the most pronounced in its advocacy of clean pictures."

Karl Dane, Once Noted Comic, Dies

Karl Dane, one of the outstanding comedians of the silent era of motion picture, whose most notable role was that of Slim in "The Big Parade," was found dead in a modest apartment in Hollywood late last week.

Lying in the county morgue, the body of the actor was saved next day from a Potter's Field burial when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer claimed it. Only 47 years old, once famous and commanding a high salary, Dane was penniless at the time of his death. He lapsed into almost complete obscurity when the talking picture swept down upon the motion picture industry. For a time he returned to an earlier craft, as automobile mechanic, and later was the operator of a hamburger stand.

On a table near where the body of the comedian rested, was found a huge scrapbook, open, containing press notices, photographs, contracts, reminiscent of the days when his services were in demand. Born in Copenhagen, Denmark, Dane came to the United States as Rasmus Karl Thekelsen Gottlieb, changing his name when he applied for citizenship.

Among the pictures in which he played were "Baby Mine," "Circus Rookies," "Trail of '98," "Rookies," "China Bound," "The Duke Steps Out," "Voice of the Storm." As the gangling, tobacco-chewing Slim in "The Big Parade," he attained his greatest fame and widest popularity.

CODE AUTHORITY DECENTRALIZED; THEATRE ASSESSMENT ALLOCATED

Levies Against Theatres for Code Administration Range from $12 a Year in Towns of 25,000 to $96 for Largest

Decentralization of the motion picture Code Authority from its present main structure into nine committees to handle executive code administration and enforcement came suddenly late Monday, following the completion of virtually all of the important work of industry-wide code organization which has kept the Authority members in weekly session since their appointment several months ago.

Some of the new committee appointees, including Austin Keough, Paramount; Willard McKay, Universal; George Skouras; Willard C. Paterson, Warners, and Charles Moskowitz, Loew's, are not members of the Code Authority, either directly, or indirectly as alternates.

Motion picture theatre owners who have signed the code will receive this week their first bill on the Code Authority's allocation of assessments to theatres for code administration, covering the first six months of 1934. The bills were mailed Tuesday to 7,800 exhibitors, following approval by General Hugh Johnson of the Code Authority's budget for code expenses.

The allocation is based on population of towns, capacities and classifications as to first runs and subsequents, and ranges from $12 a year for theatres in towns of less than 25,000 population, to $96 a year for large first runs in cities of 1,000,000 or more. A tabular analysis appears elsewhere on this page.

Theatres which did not sign the code assent will not receive bills, nor will they be entitled to file a complaint under the code.

Payments are to be sent to the Code Authority headquarters, RKO Building, Radio City, New York. If they are sent to local board secretaries, the secretaries must forward them to the Authority. Payments are to be made by check, postal or express money order.

The nine committees follow:

Code Compliance

S. R. Kent, Fox, chairman; Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA; Nicholas M. Schenck, MGM.

Unfair Competition

Ed Kuykendall, chairman; Charles L. O'Reilly, New York Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce; George Skouras, Skouras Theatres.

Legal

Austin Keough, Paramount, chairman; J. Robert Rubin, MGM; Willard McKay, Universal.

Finance

Nathan Yamins, Allied, chairman; S. R. Kent; Harry Warner, Warner Brothers.

Administration of Local Grievance Boards

Robert H. Cochrane, Universal, chairman; Nathan Yamins; Harold Bareford, Warners.

Administration of Local Clearance Boards

George J. Schaefer, Paramount, chairman; Charles L. O'Reilly; M. H. Aylesworth, RKO.

Labor

Charles L. O'Reilly, chairman; Willard C. Patterson, Warners; Leslie E. Thompson, RKO.

Production

W. Ray Johnston, Monogram, production; J. Robert Rubin; Harold Bareford.

Vaudeville

Charles C. Moskowitz, Loew's, chairman; Sam Dembow, Jr., Paramount, and Leslie Thompson.

Secretaries announced during the week, to serve both Local Grievance and Local Clearance boards, included: Mrs. Georgia Moffett, to serve in Cleveland; Ben Koneg, Milwaukee; Mrs. Mabel Dietz, Minneapolis; Rowena Foley, San Francisco; Mrs. Walter Griffith, Charlotte; Minnie Kopple, Charlotte; Grace Cannon, Kansas City; Harry Lander, New Haven; Alice Juergens, Cincinnati; Mrs. Alma Walton, Memphis; Emma Ablanalp, Chicago; Love Harrell, Atlanta; Jane Halloran, Buffalo; Duke Dunbar, Denver; Ruth Doyle, Portland, Ore.

Secretaries will be named Friday for New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Indianapolis. Meanwhile, the Code Authority indorsed Emaline Fineberg as secretary to succeed Robert Klingensmith in Pittsburgh.

O. A. Lee resigned as a member of the Minneapolis Clearance Board, and Ben Kalmenson quit his Grievance post at Pittsburgh.

Harry Salter of Trenton and Raymond Rau, treasurer of the Integrity Trust Co., Philadelphia, were appointed by Division Administrator Rosenblatt to serve as the NRA's impartial members on the Philadelphia Local Grievance and Local Clearance boards, respectively.

John C. Flinn, Code Authority secretary, sent word last week to branch managers of all distribution companies officially notifying them of the Authority's decision to make the 10 per cent cancellation clause applicable to pictures released after the effective date of the code, December 7, but which pictures were contracted for prior to that time.

Hollywood was understood to have received a request from the NRA that each studio make every effort to stagger production over a 52-week period, so as to maintain a level of production by avoiding shutdowns, which usually take place at this time. NRA officials denied it.

The Studio Labor Committee, headed by Pat Casey and Ed Smith, finally started functioning this week, and immediately will hear complaints of extras and others.

Meanwhile, S. R. Kent, Code Authority member, arrived on the Coast for production conferences with the Fox studio heads, and, at the same time he will investigate studio labor.

The Code Authority in New York and Division Administrator Rosenblatt announced over the weekend the following committee of 10 to act as the Hollywood Agency Committee, regulating relations between agencies and producers, studios and talent:

Representing the producers and studios: Trem Carr, Emanuel Cohen, Jack Warner, B. B. Kahane and Winfield Sheehan.

Representing actors: Adolphe Menjou, with Berton Churchill as alternate.

Writers: Wells Root, Ernest Pascal, alternate.

Directors: Frank Lloyd, William K. Howard, alternate.

Agents: George Frank, with M. C. Levee, alternate.

Technicians: J. Nickolaus, Max Parker, alternate.

Employers who have not yet received forms for official copies of labor provisions of the motion picture code for posting in their establishments, as commanded by the NRA, will have until May 15 to apply for the posters.

Local No. 118 of the new Theatre and Amusement Employees' Union, representing theatre ushers, janitors and cleaners in the East, filed a petition with Division Administrator Rosenblatt requesting the reopening of the film code to afford unskilled theatre labor an opportunity to obtain higher wage scales. Division Administrator Rosenblatt denied the request Wednesday.

The Code Authority indicated that the 79th theatre labor dispute had been settled in Philadelphia.

The Code Authority was awaiting the approval of General Hugh Johnson, NRA Administrator to the motion picture code budget and the plan for assessments and collections. A new Presidential order was signed Saturday night investing General Johnson with complete and final authority in the matter of code budgets and assessments.

COMPANIES DENY CODE MONOPLY; MYERS REPLIES TO THEIR DENIAL

Producers and Distributors Say They Made 'Great Sacrifices' After 'Months of Harrowing Negotiations' on Code

The large producer-distributors and the independent Allied interests this week played another no-decision football game with the motion picture code, on the NRA grounds in Washington, Clarence Darrow refereeing.

The independents had had an inning several days ago when they appeared as plaintiffs against the code before Mr. Darrow's National Recovery Review Board, established by the Administration to hear the "little man" of industry. Various charges went into Mr. Darrow's record, all reported in detail in the two previous issues of Motion Picture Herald.

There followed, last weekend, an answer from the large companies to the independents' charges, together with a challenge of credibility of some of the independent witnesses. The distributors categorically denied that the code is designed to promote or permit monopoly or monopolistic practices, or to eliminate or oppress small enterprises.

Then, on Monday, Mr. Abram F. Myers, on behalf of Allied, filed with Mr. Darrow's Board numerous counter charges to the distributors' charges. And there the matter rested, temporarily. Mr. Myers' remarks, in part, appear in an adjoining column.

Eight Companies Answer Independents

Explaining that it was not the intent to offer "a defense of any member of the motion picture Code Authority, or of the code itself," the distributors confined their brief to an analysis of the code and to the testimony presented to Mr. Darrow's Board by the socalled "little men." The brief was signed by Fox Film Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, United Artists, Universal and Warners. Columbia's signature was not affixed.

"The large producers and distributors, after many months of harrowing negotiations, were persuaded to make great sacrifices of the rights which they previously possessed," it was explained by the distributors.

"If the fair trade practice provisions were entirely eliminated from the code, the affiliated distributors and producers would be reinvested with many rights they voluntarily surrendered and would be the sole beneficiaries of such action."

Say Code Favors Independents

Analysis of the code, it was declared, disclosed that 89.5 per cent of the clauses other than the general provisions were designed to benefit the independent exhibitors, distributors and producers, while 99.9 per cent gave the independent interests rights and privileges they never had had before, and only 4 per cent of the provisions accrued to the benefit of the large distributors and 2.2 per cent were beneficial to the large exhibitors.

Even this mathematical picture," the Board was told, "does not reveal the full protection which the code affords to the independents. If the importance and the quality of the provisions were weighed, the balance in favor of the independent operator would be even more striking. A careful examination of every section of the code leads to the irrefutable conclusion that the motion picture code, both in the number and substance of its provisions, overwhelmingly concerns itself with and solves the small operator's problems."

Outlining the proposed set-up of local boards under the code, the producers declared that complainants had anticipated their grievances, the personnel of the various boards having been carefully considered in order to assure adequate representation to all groups.

The fact that 7,737 theatres have assented to the code and hundreds more have signified their acceptance by asking for benefits thereunder, demonstrates, it was said, that there is nothing like the universal dissatisfaction with the agreement intimated by witnesses at the hearings. Neither Abram F. Myers, of Allied, nor Harry Brandt, of New York, spoke for any substantial number of theatres and both have been repudiated by the majority of independents, the distributors asserted.

In contrast with the "impregnable" situation of the independents, the producers pointed to the losses of the affiliated houses, asserting that while the number of independents has increased 5.5 per cent there has been a reduction of 16 per cent among the affiliates, and that "this Review Board can either come to the conclusion that the complaining witnesses thrive on oppression or that their unsworn recitals were not truthful."

Cite Producers' Competition

Most of the independents appearing before the Review Board in opposition to the code, it was pointed out, have been consistent participators on the activities aimed at the large companies in Congress and in the courts, their unceasing complaint at Congressional hearings being "the death knell" of the independents had been sounded and that the producers had conspired to "annihilate" them.

The competition among the producers, the brief continued, is well evidenced by the fact that the production of features totals 500 a year while the average exhibitor can use possibly 150 to 250.

Less than one-half of one per cent of the independents' testimony before the Board referred to any sections of the code and of the 270 sections of the agreement only eight had been directly criticized, it was said. Most of the references to the code were incorrect and the testimony, it was charged, varied from "misrepresentation" to "skilful evasion," according to the distributors.

Demonstrating the alleged sidestepping of the complainants, the distributors' brief cited the charge that the Grievance Boards were vested with the power to order boycotts, explanning that this power is restricted solely to

REVIEW BOARD TO REPORT SATURDAY

The NRA review board's report to the President, to be submitted on Saturday, will exhaustively discuss specific changes recommended for the motion picture code and how they may be accomplished.

Companies' Challenge of Witnesses Before Darrow's "Little Man" Review Board Is Typical," Declares Allied Counsel

The challenge by large distributors of credibility of independents who had appeared as witnesses before Clarence Darrow's National Recovery Review Board for the socalled "little man" of industry, was explained by Allied States as being "typical of the performances of these interests," which, "having declined to appear before the Board and submit to examination, file a brief at the last moment calculated to gain delay and to prejudice independent interests."

Allied, through Abram F. Myers, general counsel, on Monday sent Mr. Darrow an answer to the brief which had been submitted on Saturday by the large distributors.

Distributors' Statements "Brazen"

Stating at the outset that the distributors' brief "was prepared by the attorney for the Hays Association, which is the trade association of the 'Big Eight,' and reflects the attitude and policy of the majority of the Code Authority," Allied's counter statement received by Mr. Darrow calls some of the distributors' remarks "brazen," and, in this connection, declares:

"First, the statement that 99.9% of the code provisions favor the independents: This percentage was claimed to be 89 per cent in the brief filed by the Code Authority with the NRA in reply to criticisms made against the code at the recent public hearings conducted by General Johnson. The statement is ridiculous on its face. It resolves in favor of the exhibitors every provision that they themselves have protested, and which the producers were so eager to write into the code.

"It is a favorable argument of the Hays group to say that their opponents 'do not represent anybody.' Further light could be gained by an investigation of the membership and financing of the ostensible exhibitor organizations that have appeared to support the code. Finally, the board should make an analysis of the figures submitted by the producers in their brief.

Attacks Theatre Totals

"They claim that there are now 13,571 independent theatres as against 1,954 affiliated houses. In this computation it is obvious that the producers have put in the independent ranks the many circuits which are under socalled independent management but are operated in partnership with one or more of the producers. In an effort to prove that certain exhibitor leaders, more especially the undersigned (Myers), have been 'repudiated,' it is contended that 7,737 theatres have assented to the code. Admittedly all the affiliated theatres have; therefore, less than half of the independents have subscribed.

"At no time did the undersigned (Myers) or Allied oppose the signing of assents. There was, therefore, not 'repudiation' by the 7,737 theatres claimed to have signed the code. In view of this, the remarkable fact is that less than half of the 15,525 theatres claimed in said brief (or distributors) to be open have signed the agreement

ANOTHER ROUND IN 'LITTLE MAN' TILT

Expected Abuse, Declares Myers

beyond testifying to facts occurring during the code negotiations, which facts can not be denied.

"Allied does accept full responsibility for all arguments and predictions based on the domination which the 'Big Eight' has been given over the independents on the Code Authority and Regional Boards. New evidence of the determination of the 'Big Eight' to use this control to serve their own ends has come to light. Within the past two weeks the producers have forced the selection of Film Board of Trade secretaries as secretaries of the newly-created Grievance and Clearance Boards. The following is quoted from the Motion Picture Daily for April 3, 1934:

> "'The fixing of a 20-cent minimum admission, either by contract provision or other means, was held by sales executives queried yesterday to have been given legal authorization by the ruling handed down Saturday by Judge John Knox in U. S. District Court here which upheld price fixing under the NRA code for the cleaning and dyeing industry.
> "'It is pointed out that provisions for establishing minimum admissions are present in the film code by virtue of their inclusion in the standard license agreement. Several distribution companies are now discussing plans for a 20-cent minimum admission clause in new season contracts as disclosed yesterday in Motion Picture Daily. The plans are regarded as having been given considerable impetus by the Federal court decision. Fixing of the 20-cent minimum, it is expected, may be defended by increased production and operating costs under the code.'

"From the outline of the producers' brief contained in the Motion Picture Daily for April 14, I note that it is contended that the boycott provision of the Grievance Boards, attacked by the independents, 'is restricted entirely to the lottery clause.' If that is an accurate statement of what is in the brief, then the brief is nothing short of mendacious. It is completely refuted by a bare reading of the Part 3 above-mentioned. In particular, it applies to any exhibitor not observing the minimum admission prices prescribed by the producers. That it is intended to be used to enforce such prices, and give the producers complete control of every admission paid by every man, woman and child is attested by the foregoing quotation from the Motion Picture Daily.

"Expects Abusive Statements"

"Experience has taught the undersigned to expect abusive statements when arguments fail the spokesmen for the 'Big Eight'; hence it was not surprising to find in the summary of the brief that it 'included an accusation that Abram F. Myers constantly employed obstructive tactics.' If by this it is meant that I have unremittingly opposed the efforts of the producers to further monopolize the motion picture industry through the NRA and otherwise, they are correct. However, the accusation is intended to have quite a different meaning, and that is both unfair and inaccurate. The undersigned and Allied States Association have spent much time and money in an effort to work out a fair and constructive program. The obstruction has been in the producer ranks. Twice Allied reached agreements with representatives of the producers on certain trade practices only to have the program junked by the producers themselves. Allied will submit a fair program to any impartial tribunal at any time, but would expect the producers to ignore such tribunal just as they have flaunted this Board."

The statement was signed by Abram F. Myers.

Four At Meeting Oppose Censorship

Of five speakers at a symposium on the topic, "How Far Should the Stage and Screen Be Censored," at the National Republican Club in New York last week, only one favored any form of censorship, and that one urged a modified censorship.

Opposed to restriction were Will Irwin, author; Blanche Yurka and Selena Royle, actresses; Nellie Revell, writer, and Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, chairman of the East Coast preview motion picture committee. The proponent of censorship was Colonel Ralph Isham, author, who declared it is a vain hope for one to think there is absolute freedom and stressed the fact that without a form of censorship for stage and screen, advantage would be taken by those who exploit only for profit.

On the other side Mr. Irwin pointed out that in these days the world needs free speech as never before, "and all censorship becomes eventually a brake on free speech." Miss Yurka declared she did not believe in censorship as a general principle, "as I feel that expression in any art should be free." She expressed the belief that in the long run patrons would not go to plays that violate good taste and are offensive.

Mascot Announces Five Titles; Sherman Appointed

Titles have been set for five of the 10 feature films and two specials scheduled by Mascot Pictures for early release, as a result of conferences between Nat Levine, president of Mascot, and exchange heads. The five are "Crimson Dawn," "Waterfront Lady," "Behind the News," "Headquarters" and "The Marines Have Landed." Four serials will be released also.

Al Sherman, motion picture critic of the Morning Telegraph, New York paper, has been appointed publicity and advertising director and eastern story editor for Mascot. He will continue to contribute to the Telegraph film section.

Sheehan to Europe in July

Winfield Sheehan, production chief of Fox, plans a vacation in Europe during July and August, from which he will return in time to begin work on "One More Spring," planned as one of the company's specials for the new season. He will study the foreign situation while abroad.

Most Testimony Called Irrelevant

the lottery clause of the code and does not apply to any other section, while the charge that the code "semi-legalizes" the power to specify play dates failed to disclose that this provision had been inserted at the request of the exhibitors.

"The overwhelming portion of the testimony is irrelevant to the hearing," the producers said, and "the scrambled and inaccurate references to a few sections" of the code will not enable the Board to determine whether it will promote or permit monopoly.

A "fair, exhaustive and scientific" inquiry to determine whether there are any provisions in the code which will be oppressive to any interest was asked by the producers.

Analysis of the complexion and activities of the Code Authority was prefaced by condemnation by the distributors of the "scandalous attacks upon the integrity" of the members and of Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt, and the assertion that the President made certain that the code would be administered fairly, impartially and justly.

Point to Financial Investment

The makeup of the Authority, it was contended, was justified by the financial investment of the various groups and claims of favoritism in the distribution of positions can be supported only by "mathematical trickery."

A review of the code in the light of the testimony of Russell Hardy, special assistant to the Attorney General, it was declared, shows that "in almost every instance" the agreement provides an effective remedy for the practices complained of by the Department of Justice.

Because of his leadership in the fight against the code, Mr. Myers was singled out by the producers for the brunt of their attack, it being charged that he has constantly employed "obstructive" tactics and that "the baseless accusations" submitted to the Review Board are "consistent with the prior history of Allied and its leader."

A considerable portion of the distributors' brief was devoted to consideration of the question of block booking. Taking up the charges against this method of selling, the producers denied that it leads to discrimination in selling, preempts the exhibition time of theatres or forces exhibitors to take bad pictures in order to get good ones.

Defend Block Booking

Block booking, the companies declared, is an established custom of long standing and the fact that it "is and always has been a universal custom" leads to the presumption that it is a fair method of doing business. Attempts to institute other methods have been tried from time to time, but have failed because of the resistance of exhibitors, high operating expenses and complaints from exhibitors that the competition to obtain films ran prices up.

The producers made passing mention of the continuous use by complainants of disparaging terms such as the "Big Eight" as an effort to create a prejudicial atmosphere and declared that the fact that only a very small number of exhibitors were comprised in the dissenting group, out of a total of 15,525 theatres, 13,571 of which are independent, in itself repudiated the claim that the code is unfair.

Referee Approves $18,266 Fees Of Paramount Counsel

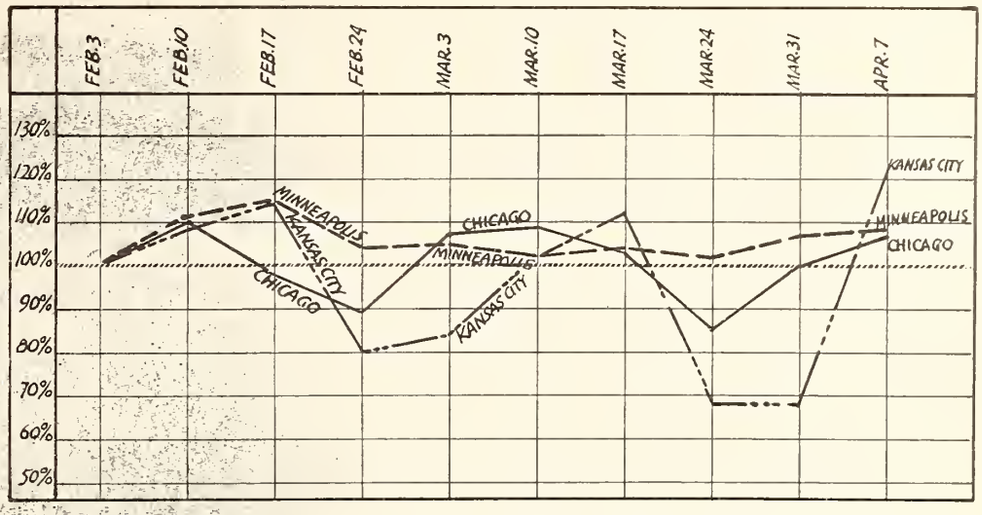
Bankruptcy Referee Henry K. Davis approved the petition of Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, counsel for the Paramount-Publix trustees, for $18,266 for expenses and disbursements from April 19, 1933, to April 5, 1934, at a creditors' meeting in New York this week.

Publix Enterprises' creditors did not oppose the petition of Irving Trust Co., as trustee in bankruptcy for Publix Enterprises, for partial allowances of $110,000 for the services of itself and counsel during the 15 months' bankrupt administration of the Paramount theatre subsidiary at a hearing before Referee Davis Tuesday. Referee Davis took the petition under advisement.

Objections to a claim for $113,000 filed against Paramount-Publix by Vincent Lawrence, a writer, for alleged breach of contract, were made late last week by attorneys for the Paramount trustees. A hearing before Mr. Davis was set for April 20. Mr. Lawrence, at present engaged on writing assignments for Paramount Productions, contended that his contract contained an option for a one-year renewal at $1,750 weekly salary. The contract was voided by the Paramount trustees on May 31, 1933, and Mr. Lawrence's claim seeks to collect $1,750 per week from that date to September, 1934, the period including that covered by the option.

Ten claims against Paramount-Publix, all involving amounts of less than $2,000 each, were settled last week, and in United States district court, New York, decision was reserved on a $1,000,000 claim for alleged damages, which had been disallowed by Referee Davis. The petition was made by the Strand Amusement Corporation, Portland, Me., which alleged damages had resulted from an anti-trust law violation by Paramount. Judge Bondy reserved decision on Paramount's motion to expunge the claim, contending that no judgment against Paramount had ever been obtained by Strand Amusement.

Warner Gets Delay on Building



Warner has obtained a five-year extension of its lease obligation to build a $5,000,000 theatre and office building on the site of the Strand theatre on Broadway, New York. The new extension, which follows previous postponements, is to January 1, 1943.

Theatre Owner a Mayor

E. W. Ward, owner of the Silco, at Silver City, N. M., has been elected mayor. Another local chief executive in the same area is Everett Cole, owner of the Rialto at Alamosa, where he has been mayor for several years.

Richard H. Glenn Dead

Richard H. Glenn, pioneer exhibitor, died in Seattle last week at the age of 58. He opened the first theatre at Issaquah, Wash., 24 years ago, and organized a small circuit in the northwest.

The chart, based on Motion Picture Herald's weekly tabulation of box office grosses, indicates the business done in each of three Mid-western key cities during the ten weeks period from February 3, 1934, to April 7, 1934. In each city the receipts in that city for the first week of the period are taken as 100 per cent.

TRUE SOUND THEATRE IS B. S. MOSS' AIM

Plans Filed for First of Pioneer Exhibitor's New Circuit Applying Acoustic Science and Improved Lamps, Screen, Booths

Building upon a "recognition of the many signs of business upturn" and with the definite objective of constructing true sound theatre rather than a converted silent theatre, B. S. Moss is beginning work at once on the first unit of a circuit of theatres to be artistically and acoustically a home for the new motion picture.

Plans filed by Eugene DeRosa, architect, call for an investment of $500,000 for the first theatre, at 207th Street and Broadway, New York. Sites in the metropolitan area have been assembled for other structures.

B. S. Moss, pioneer in motion picture exhibition, who returns to the field with his new project, said this week that he plans to supply the same artistic and scientific developments to presentation of sound films as compared with the converted silent theatre that his early Washington Heights house provided for the silent picture contrasted with the old remade store show.

Increased appreciation and improved patronage, through the same artistic progress in projection of voice and music that has been achieved in radio by modern acoustic science applied to the art of broadcasting, is the aim of Mr. Moss.

"When a factory becomes obsolete, it must be scrapped and the way cleared for modern equipment," said Mr. Moss. "The same thing is true of an instrument of art. Talking pictures can not be artistically presented in theatres whose hard walls, balconies, protruding ornamenation, hard floors and seats combine to toss about distracting discord of sound repercussion to harass audiences seeking relaxation and entertainment.

"Sound with pictures must have its own theatre. This must be completely soundproofed and constructed in accordance with fundamental principles of modern acoustical science. The acoustician has blazed a trail far in advance of present-day exhibition of talking pictures. The sound theatre art which these new theatres will embody will catch up with acoustical science. They will definitely mark the passing of the old shooting gallery type of picture house with four bare walls and a bird's nest projection booth. These will no longer serve a public whose taste is whetted by real art in sound projection.

"Improved lamps and improvements in screen and projection booths followed improved lighting and photography in the producers' studios. The screen now gives us a clear, artistic picture, but the theatres in which the accompanying voices and music are heard give us discord and distortion. To remedy this is more difficult than remedying the old defects in projection of silent pictures. Old theatres must be entirely reconstructed or new ones built.

"The theatre we intend to build will be neither too wide nor too long. It will be of the intimate type, seating about 1,500. It will give spectator and listener all the advantages of the small legitimate theatre, regardless of where his seat is situated. The volume and quality of sound, as in a broadcasting studio, will always be under control of an expert at a sound board, who hears just what the audience hears.

"The interior will be in the form of a bell, cut in half, and placed on the cut edges. The ceiling will be low and the seats arranged as an open-fan. Carpeted throughout, with seats fully upholstered, with walls, ceilings and floors sound-dampened with newly patented materials, and with doors, windows and skylights completely sound-proofed, there will be no distraction whatever from either interior repercussion or from outside noises leaking in."

Allied Deal for Product Off Pending Board Action

Allied States will probably not consummate a deal with Max Weisfeldt for the production of a series of features to be sponsored by Allied, and to be released through independent exchanges. Sidney Samuelson, Allied president, said this week he now has under advisement six similar deals, indicating that the arrangements with Mr. Weisfeldt had been called off.

A series of 12 features are proposed, with Allied guaranteeing playing time. Definite decision will not be reached until May, when the regional executives of Allied are scheduled to meet in Chicago. They may hold a preliminary meeting in New York next week.

Siegel Leaves Warner

Arthur Siegel, who has been booking all Warner Newark theatres, has resigned to devote his time exclusively to operation of the Ramsey, at Ramsey, N. J. Mr. Siegel is a stepson of Albert L. Warner.

Iowa Allied Moves Office

Headquarters of the Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska have been established at the Hotel Fort Des Moines, Des Moines, with Lester F. Martin of Nevada, executive secretary, in charge.

Mr. Laemmle also came east to preside at the annual corporate meeting of Universal, scheduled for Thursday, at which two new directors will be elected by the stockholders.

Mr. Laemmle will depart for California in a few days, but will return in June for the sales conference, leaving for Europe later that month.

Eight Feminine Film Executives To Talk on Radio

A series of eight broadcasts, beginning on Wednesday of this week, and continuing on successive Wednesdays over Station WEAF for eight weeks, will bring to public attention eight women who are executives in the motion picture industry. In each broadcast a feminine executive will speak on a chosen topic.

The first was Helen Hughes, personnel officer of Universal, whose subject was "The Right Person for the Right Job." The subsequent broadcasts, with dates, names and subjects, follow:

April 25, Julia Kelly, secretary to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, on "How Movie Titles Originate." May 2, Mollie Grill, publicity department, Fox, on "Breaking Into Headlines." May 9, Tessie Michaels, publicity department, United Artists, on "When Stars Come to New York." May 17, Gwen Heller, Warner style scout, on "Hollywood Becomes Style Conscious." May 24, Sarah Lyons, Paramount distribution department, on "How Motion Picture Prints Get to the Theatres." "Glacier Priest" Plans Alaska Film

The possibilities of an Alaskan adventure feature to be filmed in the most remote parts of the uninhabited Aleutian Islands have caused Father Bernard Hubbard, the "Glacier Priest," to enlarge the party that will attack the volcanic wastes this year.

Beverly Jones, formerly with the short subject production units of Pathe and Fox, has been signed as director of the projected picture, and Nick Cavaliere, ace photographer of Frank Buck's "Bring 'em Back Alive" and "Wild Cargo" expeditions, will accompany the party.

The Hubbard expedition of seven members will leave Seattle for its base camp at False Pass in the Aleutian Islands on May 10 and will remain in Alaska for five months.

This year an attempt will be made by Father Hubbard to penetrate hitherto unexplored areas of the Aleutian chain, and to corner the famous Kodiak bear, said to be the largest and most vicious member of the bear family in the world. The party will also attempt a descent into some new volcanic cones. Included in the plans is a flight by Father Hubbard over the famous "Valley of 10,000 Smokes" for the purpose of obtaining pictures and further geological data of this volcanic area.

Communication with the outside world will be maintained by the use of a short wave radio set. Members of this year's party include Father Hubbard, Mr. Jones and Mr. Cavaliere and members of Father Hubbard's former exploring parties, the Chisholm brothers, Ed Levin, Santa Clara university football stars; George Peterson, native Alaskan hunter, and several dogs.

Comedy

Comedy that runs all the way from the old Keystone cop variety to ridiculous satire, with a heretofore unrevealed John Barrymore and Carole Lombard presented, is the essence of this picture. Yet it's as smart as it is ludicrous. Laughter that brings tears teems in dialogue, situation and action.

Fundamentally, it's a ridiculous burlesque of stage people; a hare-brained egotistic producer, an explosive temperamental star and the satellites surrounding them. And an outstanding feature is the fact that the picture is entirely clean. There isn't a single questionable line of dialogue or bit of action. Thus it's an entire family show, one for the mellowed adults, modern sophisticates and the youngest youngsters.

Cold type hardly can mirror the hilarity of the show's theme and the vivid farcical characterizations of the people who interpret it; nor can it adequately reflect the slapstick treatment that moves the work along like greased lightning. Barrymore is a composite of every genius producer and all their idiosyncrasies that ever lived. He rants and raves and waves. While making Carole Lombard a great star, he drives press agent Karns and right hand man Connolly mad and audiences into gales of glee. The girl, acquiring all her mentor's madness, quits, moves to Hollywood, and becomes even more famous, while hard times, ill-luck and whatnot wet-blanket every Barrymore production effort.

All the foolishness that precedes is just an appetizer for what is to follow as the menage moves aboard the 20th Century Limited and Barrymore learns that his errant star is aboard. To rehabiliate his fading fortunes he must get that star's name on a contract. They toss in a harmless nut, a couple of long whiskered chaps and the whole crowd put on a demonstration of acting ability that's difficult to describe. Barrymore gets Miss Lombard's signature, but not before every fun making trick is dragged out of the bag.

The showmanship of this show is simple. It's all-laugh comedy. Just devote every effort to getting as many people in to see the first performance as possible, to get word-of-mouth-advertising. With a campaigning based on the "we dare you to look at this picture and not laugh" basis, get over the idea that this picture is from the company that made "Lady For A Day" and "It Happened One Night."—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Story and Screen play, Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht. Director, Howard Hawks. Assistant director, C. C. Coleman. Cameraman, Joseph August. Sound engineer, Edward Bernds. Film editor, Gene Havlick. Running time, 84 minutes when seen on Coast. Release date to be announced.

Firebrand

(United Artists - 20th Century)

Comedy-Romance

This is a costumed comedy romance. Timed to the 16th century, located in Florence, Italy, the picture is reminiscent of that type of novels popular a generation ago and recommended to amorously inclined ladies for light hammock reading during the lazy vacation day afternoons. Modern dialogue and action, however, impart a zippy zest that brings the story up to date with an exciting 1934 atmosphere. Though long in running time, it moves swiftly for the most part. Fine acting, in which Frank Morgan is outstanding, supplemented by generally brisk and pointed dialogue and intriguing situations, create and maintain expectant interest. Lavish settings and costumes, made more potent by exceptionally clever photography, endow the production with unusual color. While vivid and motivated by intimate love interest, in which husband and wife strive to outdo each other in smart philandering, the picture is not too broadly sexy. As interpretative comedy narrating technique tends to accentuate farce, the excitement is there. It is essentially adult entertainment.

The plot is simple. Allesandro and his Duchess are a pair of refined philanderers; not too promiscuous, however. Cellini, on the other hand, is the era's greatest heart-throb. While making a set of solid gold banquet plate for the regal Duke, that worthy is attracted to Cellini's girl friend, alibi-ed as a model, Angela. Simultaneously, as the Duke endeavors to pull a fast one on the Duchess, she becomes interested in the famed Cellini. From then on it's a matter of each one keeping out of the other's way, with lots of fun, quite a bit of excitement, plenty of thrill. Eventually all are on the spot, but after all it's roman—Florence and moral codes are not so strict. As Cellini tries to protect the Duchess, keep Angela for himself and at the same time give the Duke a break, he lands in the torture chamber. Ottaviano, a sort of grand vizier, has designs on the Duke's job for himself, and when he threatens to make it embarrassing for all concerned, Cellini switches the poisoned wine, shams an agonizing death that brings the Duchess to his side and throws Angela into the Duke's arms. But Ottaviano gets the villain's just deserts and the Duchess is content to let her willy-nilly Duke have Angela as long as she can keep Collini.

There is much amusing entertainment in "The Firebrand." On the strength of title and cast names alone, it possesses many unusual interest creating qualities. But the primary consideration in any selling campaign is that the comedy values be stressed to the limit. In this a satirical atmosphere should not be adapted unless it can be done smartly. Rather hint at a laugh surprise, with an exotic thrill for the ladies and lure the men by suggestions that the modern Lotharios still can learn much of the art of snappy love making from the 16th century cavaliers.—McCarthy, Hollywood.
